'People Pressure' Said Felt by Civil Servants

TRENTON (Staff) — Because public employees work for "the people", many believe they should exercise "more caution, more restraint, more responsibility when it comes to such things as more money, better pensions, job mobility . . ."

This public opinion is a major problem faced by civil service unions today, according to Mrs. Grace Hartman, Ottawa, national secretary - treasurer of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Mrs. Hartman told an audience of civilian defense department employees last night their shadowy boss in the background is only too pleased when the public gets upset over demands" of the public service.

"Public officials play off the public at large against the public employee while newspapers add fuel to the flames," she charged.

The labor leader expressed the hope that the military, itself would one day be incorporated in a union, mentioning in an interview that it had worked well in Scandinavia.

She told The Intelligencer a union could win a wide range of fringe benefits for the military, particularly, it could help in offsetting dislocation problems arising from frequent transfers.

One of the big problem areas in the public service today, she said, is that provincial employees have free bargaining rights only in New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Quebec. In the others, "governments determine bargaining agents and these she called "legislative monopolies — which have no genuine collective bargaining power."

Mrs. Hartman referred to the five per cent wage guidelines in the Ontario budget as "an indication of how many public employees are still subjected to arbitrary measures that would not be tolerated in the private sector."

Replying to a question, the national secretary said she does not foresee major labor-management strife in the public service of senior governments in 1971.

However, she predicts trouble in coming to terms with municipalities across Canada in the coming months.

Although amalgamation is not in the immediate future, she mentioned that the OTC and the Public Service Alliance will form new bonds of co-operation in the future. She said they both now work from the same headquarters in Ottawa, pooling the same research staff.

Load Limit Set On Trenton Bridge

TRENTON (Staff) — Heavy truck traffic through downtown Trenton has increased sharply this spring and council moved last night to divert its flow.

Of particular concern to Councillor Pete Aziz, who brought the matter before council, was damage that may be done to the old Dundas Street bridge by trucks hauling a constant stream of sand and crushed rock to CFB Trenton for the runway reconstruction program.

With the town facing increased taxes as it is, Councillor Aziz suggested contractors be asked to be responsible and save ratepayers some money on bridge maintenance.

Councillor Stan Ketcheson advised council to press the police to "clear every truck (for routine checks) as they come down the (Gilmour) hill and they will get sick of it and won't come through the town."

Paul Tripp confirmed it & "the problem is not going to leave when the runways are done," adding truck tires throw up stones from the roadway that smash windows and gravel and sand falling off the trailers has become an aggravation.

REAL ESTATE

"FOR SALE" SIGNS ARE YOUR SILENT SALESMEN

ED McKINDSEY
J. E. McKINDSEY Realty Ltd.

There are very valid reason why many home seekers end up buying a house they first saw as a result of a sign on the front lawn.

When a house buyer becomes interested in a home after seeing a property sign, he has already made several important decisions:

The home is in an area he is interested in; it has an external appearance that appeals to him; and the chances are favorable that it is likely to be in his price category.

How should a seller handle an inquiry from a prospective buyer who knocks on his door due to a "for sale" sign?

It is best for the seller to either give the caller one of the Realtor's business cards or call the Realtor's office so that a salesman may personally conduct the prospect through the house.

The seller should NOT tour the property with the prospect. First impressions are valid and the seller's best interests will be served by referring this prime prospect to the Realtor who is professionally trained to present his property to its greatest advantage.

Manlow, five times about the situation and admitted that the commission will neither assume management of the service systems in Sidor Developments or Dufferin Developments.

They feel they have no responsibility for the service . . . they feel they were coerced into an extension of services (to Dufferin) much against their will."

Unable to come to terms with Sidor, the PUC has not taken over these services formally and the municipality does not yet have control of one-foot reserves on four streets in Sidor Developments, including McGill Street.

However, plans have advanced to service Dufferin through the Sidor lines.

"It appears the PUC wants to abdicate its responsibility," remarked Councillor Paul Tripp.

In the past, the furthest point reached in coming to terms with Sidor Developments was the signing of a memorandum of agreement for settlement, many clauses of which have not been fulfilled.

However, as far as the current issue is concerned, Mr. Ward says there appears to be grounds for a recovery of funds from Dufferin Developments and the PUC "agrees with the recovery factor."

With the PUC trying to stay clear of the matter, the problem was taken in council by the Sidor solicitor, who asked for council to interpret the case. Of primary concern in whether money can in fact be recovered and, if so, who will do it.

"If council would only send over a letter of intent (to the PUC), that would be enough," Mr. Ward suggested. Possibilities open to council would range from not becoming involved to acting for Sidor in the recovery and assuming management of the sewers.

"I do not like to leave halfmatters," Wasli Sidor told council, expressing pride in his own personal "courage" to defend what he thought right.

After Mr. Ward's disclosures about the position of the PUC, Councillor Tripp suggested that Mayor Duncan McDonald, an ex officio utilities commissioner, seek the official stand of the PUC and report to council.

The mayor said he had not been aware of Mr. Ward's discussions with the PUC manager and chairman, D. James MacDonald, but would begin checking with both immediately.

"Maybe I am only half aware of the activities of the PUC but I do not think I am," the mayor concluded.

Front Street Problem

Committee Agrees; No Real Answer

Double parking to allow passengers to disembark and trucks making pickups and deliveries are the two main factors contributing to Front Street traffic congestion.

But despite the obvious problem, there is no "simple solution."

This was the admission yesterday at the city traffic committee when the problem of downtown traffic tie-ups again came up for discussion.

The discussion started out to determine truck routes to divert truck traffic away from the downtown area, but Alderman Paul Russell didn't feel this was the problem referred to by Ald. Gerald Joyce when he brought it up in city council.

He said what Ald. Joyce had in mind was the double parking of delivery trucks, private cars and taxis as they stopped to let off passengers.

Alderman Arthur Keagan chairman of the traffic committee, asked if provision of more loading zones or bays for stopping would be of any assistance.

It was generally agreed that commercial trucking firms avoided the city's downtown area whenever possible as they have schedules to keep.

Also generally agreed was that police action to ban double parking would be unpopular both from the standpoint of motorists and merchants.

Members admitted that elimination of double parking would be a matter of education but at the same time agreed there was no simple solution.

Train Whistles Not to Be Stilled

The city council traffic and light committee has decided to take no action on the complaint of a downtown Belleville resident who doesn't like train whistles disturbing his sleep.

The complaint was received by city council some weeks ago and was turned over to the traffic committee for consideration.

Correspondence received by the committee from the CNR noted that under the Railway Act trains are obliged to whistle at all public level crossings.

The only exception to this regulation is when an application is submitted to the Canadian Transport Commission for the crossing and the procedure normally being for a particular municipality to pass a by-law requesting exemption for specified crossings.

This exemption is normally granted by the Transport Commission only for crossings protected with some form of automatic crossing protection.

Alderman Jack Ireland said he would have no objection to train whistles being eliminated at unprotected crossings but "would not like to go all the way".

Alderman Jack Ireland said he did not see that train whistles were all that bad, while Alderman Paul Russell said the answer to the problem might be for objectors to move away from the track area.

Nursing Home Appeal Heard

TRENTON (Staff) — A considerable handicap must be met by residents of the town's newest nursing home, Trent Valley Lodge, because the portion of Bay Street passing the building is unpaved and has no sidewalk.

The disclosure was made in a letter to council from Valley Lodge management read at council's regular meeting here Monday.

The brief, a bid for the town to pave the roadway east from Flindall Street and provide a sidewalk, said a number of citizens in the area are "shocked" by the condition of the street, scene of much new construction in the last year.

Dust on the street is bad for the health of elderly people living at the lodge, according to the letter.

Furthermore, it indicates absence of a sidewalk tends to make the residents housebound.

With no suitable pedestrian access, many will not go out for a stroll — they are impeded from "leading in this beneficial exercise".

Mayor Duncan McDonald reported that the paving job is already planned for this year. "It is one of the few things we did not cut out of the budget," he said.

He suggested, however, that the Flindall sidewalk should be completed under standard local improvement procedures. Trent Valley Lodge will be advised of this.

Early Training

"My girl can't even talk yet, but we already have books for her, cloth books, and we sit around with them. I read to her, we identify pictures. I don't think a lot of these kids got that when it might have been important to them."

The speaker is Shirley Bradley, a 25-year-old teacher at Park junior school, Toronto, who is considered "damned good" by her superiors.

She was quoted by The Globe and Mail's George Russell in an article in which she also discussed varying difficulties of her young charges, from perceptual problems and laziness to hyperactivity and one youngster who is a "disruptive influence."

The kind of attention and interest Mrs. Bradley's own youngster is getting, even at her early age (and it is never too early to start) is clearly in marked contrast to the experience of many in her class. The same magic of talent is probably to be found in youngsters in other schools and communities.

Parents must realize that their children are not vegetables, that they are sensitive human beings who must have positive parental guidance if they are to develop to the fullest extent. Reading, identifying pictures, not to mention the countless interesting images of the outdoors — trees, animal life and all the rest of nature's jewels — these are all vital factors in a youngster's upbringing.

Mrs. Bradley herself tries to bridge the gap by taking the children on weekend trips, against the advice of her principal who believes his teachers need to get as far away from the classroom as possible in their own time.

Disillusionment

You know how it is on the beaches in these parts. It does not matter where you go but there are the dead fish, victims of the algae or whatever it is that starves them of life-giving oxygen.

Last year we thought we had discovered one swimming spot where the water was unusually clean and the beach free of rotting marine life. We refer to Adolphustown, but on a visit Sunday we found to our dismay that it is just the same there as at the Outlet and North Bay.

Later in the year of course the fish and accompanying odor seem to disappear and it must have been about that time that we thought we had discovered a gem of a beach at Adolphustown last year.

Still, on a sunny day it is a pleasant spot and being early in the season it is as yet uncrowded. On Sunday though there were enough children to fill the swings and — something of an indication of Canada's growing cosmopolitanism, there was a pigtailed little girl from India and she was giving a helping hand to a blonde lad of perhaps five years.

Blood Brothers

We do not know if there is any connection, but the alleged radicalism of the British Broadcasting Corporation (making it a blood brother of the CBC and sundry U.S. networks) and its dramatization of theChicago 7 conspiracy trial seem fitting bed partners.

The BBC has created this piece from the 23,000-page transcript of the trial before Judge Julius Hoffman. It portrays the judge, defence lawyers and jury, all embroiled, as the publicity blurb puts, it, in a web of hostility, leading eventually to the total collapse of courtroom discipline.

There will be Jerry Rubin and Bobby Seale and all the rest of them, played by professional actors of course, and it is to be presented on CBC television tomorrow night.

Somehow this sort of thing is not our meat, but undoubtedly there will be many glued to their sets for the re-enactment of one of the most deplorable episodes in U.S. court-room history.

Missing Link

In today's Census questionnaire provision is made for date of birth, but not, surprisingly, for place of birth. Doubtless such information is already in the hands of the Immigration department, but the Census could have afforded another up-to-date check, besides providing an interesting further source of information on the ethnic origins of Canadians.

Shock for Canadian M.P. Observers

TV in U.S. Senate Makes 'Madhouse' of Proceedings

By GREG CONNOLLEY

OTTAWA — A Commons committee studying the televising of parliamentary proceedings has come away in a state of shock from watching how they do it in Washington.

"It was a three - ring circus, a madhouse and near chaos," commented Grant Deachman (L. — Vancouver Quadra) who is co-ordinating chairman for Commons committees.

Mr. Deachman described a meeting of the U.S. Senate foreign relations committee when cameramen and technicians virtually took over the proceedings. "They had cameras roaming all over the place, men climbing up and down ladders, lights heating the room to the roasting point — it was incredible."

The Canadian committee clearly came away from Washington with the view that this kind of television coverage is not wanted in Ottawa.

They were however favorably impressed by TV at the United Nations where the coverage is handled by the UN itself. UN officials have come to Ottawa and have given the committee a report on requirements to do a good job of telecasting here.

If the Commons committee on procedure and organization opts for the UN method, it could mean a multi-million dollar operation with Parliament itself providing staff and equipment.

The committee will be writing its report in the next few weeks and this will probably be issued before the Commons adjourns for the summer recess at the end of June.

"Television is so visual, so intimate, that if we are going to do it, we will have to do it very well," Mr. Deachman commended.

If the Commons runs its own TV show, it would have to supply staff, cameras, a control centre, film library, etc. It would also be necessary to make alterations in the Parliament Buildings to handle television.

Mr. Deachman acknowledged there would be problems involved in a parliamentary-directed television. "The news media might switch cameras to an MP who was asleep or to a disturbance in a gallery. If Parliament ran its own TV, it would tend not to give that kind of coverage."

The UN itself supplies television feeds to the networks, and, as Mr. Deachman noted, is conscious that if the material is not of good calibre, the networks will not use it. The same situation could apply here.

CBC and CTV would undoubtedly prefer to do their own telecasting in Ottawa but would be happy to be relieved of the cost. In any event those networks do not intend to abandon their own interviews which are done after sittings of the Commons and its committees.

The question may well arise as to how good and interesting telecasts of Commons debate would be. Some observers are dubious about the continuing appeal of parliamentary show would have. On the other hand key debates on important issues would undoubtedly attract substantial audiences.

Mr. Deachman says a major difficulty in telecasting Parliament is that the buildings in Ottawa just are not suited to this purpose. "The day may come when we will have to have a special television building where parliamentary committees would meet. As for the Commons, we would have to accept that very much as it is — we cannot go about making major alterations in that chamber just for the sake of TV."

He said that if television does come full tilt to Parliament, HII regulations will have to be prepared to govern its operation. "We can not have the kind of shambles they have in Washington."

Mr. Deachman observed that the televising of Senate committees in Washington is at the discretion of the chairman presiding over the committee and another zooming in on the chairman to catch the full flavor of his toothy smile.

Mr. Deachman hopes it will not be like that in Ottawa if and when TV coverage is approved.

"As near as I can make out, he wants Vancouver Island to follow him to Ketchikan for violation of their territorial waters!

A U.S. View of P.M.'s Visit to Russia

By Christian Science Monitor

A tidy little "friendship" treaty is one of those things as bound to come from Pierre Elliott Trudeau's first trip to Moscow as is a straw hat from the luggage of an Ohio housewife making her first visit south of the Rio Grande.

Canada's Prime Minister could never return from Moscow without such evidence that Canada can and does sometimes make its own foreign policy. For Mr. Trudeau, it is a political status symbol.

And Moscow had a tinple reason for giving Mr. Trudeau the souvenir at bargain price.

First, there is a NATO Council meeting coming up in Lisbon in two weeks. Moscow hopes that at that meeting the NATO countries will go on record in favor of negotiations with Moscow over mutual withdrawal of forces from the heart of Europe.

Second, Canada is in the process of rebuilding diplomatic relations with Peking. The Trudeau-Kosygin "protocol" signed in Moscow this week is a way of balancing Peking in Ottawa. The Kremlin, obviously, wants to be in closest possible touch with a country very important to Russia which is getting friendlier by the day with Russia's arch rival, Peking.

Third, the United States loves to play "friendship" games with Russia's allies and clients. These sometimes irritate Moscow visibly anxious. Mr. Nixon's visit to Romania is a case in point. Being taken by Mr. Trudeau is a way of letting Washington know that how it feels to have the other playing croquet in the front yard, without consulting the yard owner.

It's all by the book. Moscow and Washington are constantly sounding out the other's clients for more "friendship."

It's harmless, so far at least. It can do some good. In theory at least, the more countries enjoy "friendly" relations with other countries the less the tension and danger of war.

And it is all very much in step with the times. Mr. Trudeau's diplomacy is as fashionable as his shirts and neckties.

Washington is of course a bit edgy about any extra chumminess between Moscow and Ottawa. After all, the alliance with Canada is of first importance in American defense plans.

But there is no real basis for objection and Washington itself has just paid Trudeau foreign policy the supreme compliment of imitation. After all, he did open up the road to Peking which Washington is now trying to travel.

Medical Aid For Bolivia

From Belleville Rotary Club Bulletin

For two years, District 709 in Ontario and New York has been providing aid for a hospital in rural Montero, Bolivia, with money and materials. Volunteers are sought to devote a month or two teaching medical practice within the next three years under this world community service project.

The first volunteer to return from Bolivia to his home in Albion, N.Y. is Rotarian Dr. James Parke. A practicing surgeon, Dr. Parke spent a month giving a series of lectures to medical interns, operating on difficult surgical cases, directing operations through an interpreter, and assisting the public health director in Montero.

Dr. Parke said, "We are appealing to practitioners in the United States to give a month's time in their lives to assist a nation that is woefully in need of more trained men to save the health of thousands of human beings."

During his trip to Bolivia, Dr. Parke took with him some $1,700 worth of hospital equipment, and medicines donated by various organizations. Another recently returned Rotarian volunteer is Dr. Robert Hornak of the Rotary Club of Westfield-Mayville, New York, who went to Montero to help the club and medicines for the Montero hospital.

The project was initiated two years ago when the Albion Rotary club donated money and the Rotary club of Montero, Bolivia, provided counterpart funds for a "diet kitchen" for the hospital. Later, the whole district 709 became involved and raised funds and sent two volunteer engineers from the Rotary Club of Galt, Ont. for the construction of an entire hospital building addition.

U.K. Also Becoming Popular With Teachers from States

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Some Canadians get worried about the high proportion of Americans on the teaching staffs of Canadian universities. Others think it is nothing much to worry about.

Whether or not it is a danger to Canadianism, it is a state of affairs not peculiar to Canada alone. A survey of faculties of British universities shows that this year Cambridge University, to mention only one, has 80 Americans either teaching or doing research. Two years ago there were 143.

The United States embassy in London, "reports that it has listings of 700 "senior American scholars" currently at work in British universities. A study that included graduate students doing research and teaching assistants would be much greater than the 700 rated as "senior."

Attempting to explain the marked increase in the number of American university people in Britain, one of them is quoted as saying, "Some of it is the specific result of the Vietnam war. The academic intellectual revulsion toward the war has been very powerful, and the resulting student unrest has made teaching very unhappy in the States."

The British experience should remind us that any influx of American professors to Canadian universities is part of a two-sided process. For many of them it may not be as much that Canada looks attractive, as that their own country, in its present state, looks unattractive.

The prime motive for being here could be to escape from there.

Mercury Pollution's Realities

Peterborough Examiner

Sometimes people have to beaten over the head before they take some threat seriously.

The threat of mercury pollution is a good example. A great hue and cry was raised when mercury was discovered in Great Lakes fish a few years ago and when it was revealed that mercury can hurt people as much as it can hurt the fish.

There are those who joke about mercury pollution. They seem to think the whole scare has been concocted by some mad scientist.

Those who share these jokes should consider the case of Amos Huckleby.

Huckleby celebrated his 19th birthday last week but there wasn't much to celebrate. Amos, afflicted by mercury poisoning in 1969, is blind.

The mercury came from a hat which had been fed seed grain treated with a mercury compound fungicide. The hat was butchered at the Huckleby homestead in New Mexico and eaten by the family.

Amos and two sisters were virtually paralyzed. A brother-born three months after the pork was eaten is blind.

Some people can treat mercury pollution as a joke but you'll have to excuse the Hucklebys for not laughing.

Whither Paul Hellyer?

Ottawa Journal

Paul Hellyer's press conference left the country more confused than ever about the dilapidated Liberal's plan for political action. Hellyer is surer of his goals, at least some of them, than of his method. His campaign has neither the clarity nor the coherence to draw any significant number of followers to rally round his banner. Certainly his quarrel with the Trudeau Government is valid enough. It is Hellyer's one-man crusade which lacks political reality.

He would have been more useful if rather than making his occasional outbursts (why was he silent for so long?) he resigned from the cabinet. He had labored daily in the Commons pointing to Government mistakes. The way for Liberal MPs to express dissatisfaction with the Government is not to sit in the Commons not only in caucus, each time they don't like its policies. If a brave few did this more often, the habit could become catching and the Commons revived.

But Hellyer's rather sad odyssey is a textbook case of how not to influence policy.

Ontario May Shorten Time Medical Students Spend in Schools

TORONTO (CP) — The commission on post-secondary education in Ontario may recommend cutting the licensing years medical students spend in school in order to catch up on the shortage of doctors who graduate in Ontario, University Affairs Minister John White said Monday.

He told a committee studying his $462.8 million departmental estimates for 1971-72 that the commission has looked at alternatives to creating more "economically expensive" medical schools with their unattractive time lag."

If the government were to announce a new medical school today, he said, it would take another 10 years before it graduated its first doctor.

Figures released during consideration of the health department's estimates last week showed that of the more than 900 graduates annually from Ontario's 10 medical schools and Sudbury's new medical school, 330 were graduates of Ontario medical schools.

Mr. White said the commission is considering recommending shortening the years a medical student spends in school by placing him in a hospital clinic or group practice for his final years.

On the commission might suggest that the school year be lengthened so doctors graduate sooner.

It was also looking at the concept of "super nurses" who could take over some of the doctors' responsibilities.

Murray Gaunt (L—Huron Bruce) said the department should embark on a crash program to educate doctors.

Last year at the University of Western Ontario there were 800 applicants for 85 seats in first-year medicine. A second first-year class could have been formed from the applicants who qualified.

Donald Deacon (L—York Centre) said much of the cost of a medical education is for specialists while what Ontario needs is "more general practitioners, especially in remote areas."

Mr. White said in a democracy, the government would not prevent a doctor from specializing if he decided to.

—The government agrees with a recommendation that the University of Toronto should have a single governing body but wants 18 per cent of its members appointed from outside the university, said John White, minister of university affairs.

—Premier William Davis said the government will not provide hostels for visiting out-of-province youths.

—Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and consumer affairs, said he has no intention of introducing legislation this session to control the sale and distribution of hearing aids.

Wells Denies Political Pressure Behind Tighter Welfare Rules

TORONTO (CP) — Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, rejected suggestions Monday by Hugh Peacock (NDP—Windsor West) that "political pressure" was behind the province's decision to stiffen control over welfare to employable youths under 21.

The minister engaged in a spirited exchange with the NDP critic as the Ontario legislature's committee on human resources resumed study of the department estimates.

Mr. Wells said the changes in the General Welfare Act, announced in the legislature last week, were based on a "growing public concern" that students were leaving school and home in order to obtain welfare without working. Under the changes, local welfare administrators will have the authority to reject welfare assistance to those under 21 if they deem that the students should be in school.

Welfare benefits can be paid to students doing well in school, Mr. Wells said, if they meet other criteria of the legislation.

Mr. Peacock said he would agree with the principle of the changes if he could be assured that there would be enough family counselling services to determine the home factor as well as the school situation.

Mr. Peacock said there is a lack of such counselling services, which amounts to "an almost insurmountable task thrust on local welfare administrators."

Legion Will Cancel Honorary Memberships

WATERLOO (CP) — The Royal Canadian Legion in Ontario decided Monday to cancel more than 2,000 honorary memberships issued in the province in an effort to weed out persons whose principal interest is imbibing.

Delegates to the legion's Ontario division biennial convention voted for the blanket cancellation, effective Dec. 31, with the provision that individual legion branches can continue to accept applications for honorary membership.

Henry Rimmerton of Toronto, chairman of the Ontario Command constitution and laws committee, said honorary memberships should not be given out to those who just come to legion branches and drink a lot of beer."

The honorary memberships should be given out to "outstanding citizens."

Deadly Anthrax Kills Prairie Bull

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — A case of anthrax, a highly-contagious, usually fatal disease in animals, has been confirmed on a government pasture 30 miles south of here, it was reported Monday.

A bull found dead in the community pasture last week has been examined and the cause of death definitely was anthrax, Phil England, agriculture representative for the area, said Monday.

Don Wilkinson, manager of the pasture, said 2,400 head of cattle are in the pasture but only 240 cows were in the area where the bull was found. There was no sign of illness in any other animals.

The area has been quarantined and a team of veterinarians will begin inoculating the cows as soon as enough anthrax serum arrives in the area, said Mr. Wilkinson.

Welfare Cuts to Be Discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — A discussion of welfare costs and cutbacks will be included in a federal-provincial conference, of welfare ministers here next Monday and Tuesday, Welfare Minister John Munro said Monday.

Mr. Munro told the Commons that one of the issues to be considered is the adequacy of federal contributions to the provinces to meet welfare costs. Under the terms of the Canada Assistance Act, Ottawa now pays 50 per cent of the total.

The minister added that the conference will also discuss the decision last week of Ontario to cut back on welfare payments to young people, and the threat of a similar decision this week by welfare officials in Halifax.

Milk Producers To Receive More

OTTAWA (CP) — Industrial milk producers will pocket an extra six cents for every 100 pounds of milk they sell following a readjustment Monday in the holdback rates charged by the Canadian Dairy Commission.

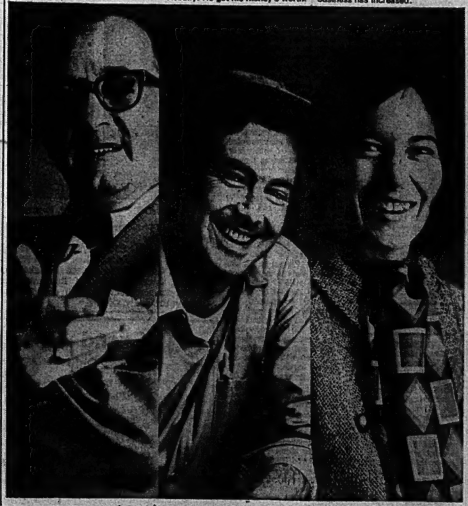
DOMINION BUREAU OF STATISTICS
BUREAU FÉDÉRAL DE LA STATISTIQUE



Three loan applicants: Who got their money's worth?

He owed too much money:
Robert M. is a carpet salesman. Last year, when his wife became ill, Robert found his medical coverage was insufficient. He felt he needed to borrow $2,500. His Bank of Montreal manager loaned him $3,500 to pay all his bills. Consolidating these debts reduced his rate of interest. Robert feels he got his money's worth.

He wanted to "hit the road":
Joe G., a T.V. repairman, loves the country. A mobile camper was his dream. His Bank of Montreal manager lent him $4,000 to buy a camper and showed him how to dovetail the loan with a savings plan. Joe now takes his family on weekend campouts, has a good time, and his savings are growing steadily. He got his money's worth.

She got more elbow room:
Ann B. is a suburban physiotherapist. Recently, she decided her treatment room wasn't large enough. She asked her Bank of Montreal manager for $2,000 to enlarge it. He lent her $3,000. The extra would allow her to enlarge her waiting room, too. Her patients are now more comfortable and her business has increased.

Air Stewardess Cried in Sympathy for Passenger

By DORIS CLARK

Stewardess Gloria says what she enjoys most about her work is the people.

She told us about a traveller from behind the Iron Curtain who couldn't speak a word of English. Timid, almost frightened, she tried to hide her fears behind a haze of Turkish cigarette smoke. Gloria pampered her, walked her around the cabin, fed her from time to time and then by two women in Regina. They hugged and kissed her and cried—and our little Transair stewardess cried too. Such was Gloria's concern for her guest.

She explained to me: "May be they had thought they would never see her again!"

Gloria says you grow up on this job. You learn to cope with life—and "that's what is talk about with the passengers.

Eventually the real purpose was disclosed; can you guess it? Their company had this plan. Then if we chose a magazine, it gives them so many points and added up to $1,000 bonus for them. I said I did not need any magazines.

They were not so happy then and I was made to feel I wasted their time. No word of them taking up my time! How do I find out from strangers at the door what their business is rather than get through all this? — Ho Time To Waste.

Dear No Time: Next time somebody puts his (or her) foot in the door, ask what his business is before you let him in. You have the right to make a quick decision as to whether you want to hear about Quebec or magazines or what have they.

Talk about unethical sales agencies — that one takes the cake.

Dear Doris: What is wrong with a man who has been going with a woman for 17 years? He promised to marry her but hasn't yet.

Once again I take her any place. When he has time of from work he takes a man along for the ride!

I think this woman is being used, as she still waits for him. — H. D.

Dear N.D.: That's not an engagement. It's an endurance contest. Unless the present companionship is highly enjoyable as it stands, the lady might well sign off. Has she the necessary intestinal fortitude?

Spy Apples Make Excellent Pies

By MARY MOORE

When is a spy not a spy? When it is an apple.

Spy apples are my favorite cooking apple for pies except in late summer when McIntosh and Gravensteins are available. Here we have one summer apple pie per year.

The Spy is such a wonderful all-purpose apple for eating and cooking I wonder that more homemakers are not as completely dedicated to this lovely Canadian fruit. I think I inherited this loyalty from my mother for she was born in Spy apple country — Oxford County in Ontario.

For goodness' sake, make a Spy Apple Pie.

CANADIAN APPLE PIE PASTRY

2 cups sifted bun unsifted cake and pastry flour
1 tsp. salt
2-3 cup shortening
3 tbsps. butter

TUESDAY

Dinner Menus

Cranberry Juice; Stuffed Roast Chicken; Cream Gravy; Mashed Potatoes; Braised Celery and Carrot Dice; Orange Chiffon Cake; Tea.

3 or 4 tbsps. cold water, FILLING:
4 to 4½ cups (packed) sliced Spy apples (3 or 4 very large — mine were 11" in circumference)
½ cup sugar (see note)
½ tsp. cinnamon or nutmeg

To make pastry, cut shortening and butter into flour and salt until size of small peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with a fork. Shape into ball between pains. Divide in half. Roll each half out on floured board to fit 9" deep pie plate. Line pie plate with one and add two-thirds of sliced Spy apples. Sprinkle with sugar and spice of your choice. Cover with remaining apples and cover them with gashed top crust. Seal and crimp edges. Brush top with mixture of 1 tbsp. each milk and sugar. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 10 min. Protect edge with collar of crimped foil. Reduce heat to 325 deg. Fahr. for 40 min. longer or until apples are tender. Serve warm.

NOTES:

1) The juice from this pie does not run over and dirty your oven because the sugar content is low, but pie is plenty sweet enough.

2) Watch for more Canadian apple recipes next week for the next four weeks.

Ann Landers

Southerner Annoyed By Loud Nose-blowing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I don't know how it is up North, but in Alabama it is considered very bad manners to blow one's nose in public. I'm sure you are aware that Southerners are noted for their couth and refinement.

ANN LANDERS

I was reared to be a lady. I did not hear the sound of nose-blowing until I was in high school. (It was a rude boy who moved to Prattville from Illinois.) Now it seems that wherever I go I hear people go "honk, honk, honk." . . . like a pack of geese.

I know there are times when one must wipe his nose but it seems to me that when a person needs to blow, he can excuse himself. Especially in a restaurant. I don't know of a single decent eating place in this country that doesn't have a bathroom where a person could go to perform this delicate act. Print this letter, please. Ann. Perhaps public nose-blowers don't know how they appear to refined, well-reared folks. — GONE WITH THE WIND.

DEAR GONE: I agree that people ought not to go "honk, honk" in dining rooms, but a muted blow-wipe if done inobtrusively should not undo you so completely. Your excessive sensitivity to nose-blowing suggests that perhaps your mother was scared by a handkerchief.

* * *

DEAR ANN: I'd like to comment on the woman who said she was ready to resign from the human race because so many men had made passes at her for no earthly reason. She described herself as "plain, overweight, a home-loving type, who had never given any man an iota of encouragement." Yet the delivery boy made eyes at her. The TV-repair man kissed her on the back of the neck and the minister grabbed her in the middle of a political conversation.

I know the type so well. I have dances with them at the Club and noticed that they move in a most provocative fashion. I have caught their glances in a crowded room. They ask for a light at dinner parties — and hold my hand steady a moment too long. Their little tulips are often triple-sized. These women are indeed sending out coded messages, as you suggested. Men who wish to break the code know how to do it. Those who are not interested simply pretend not to get the signals. So you were right again, as usual. I hope "Mrs. Ready To Resign" got your message. — R.D.F.

DEAR R.: If she didn't get mine I'm sure she got yours. It came through loud and clear. Thanks for improving on my original statement.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 13-year-old girl and am very mature for my age. I could pass for 16th physically and mentally. The problem is I wear braces on my teeth. The boy I like a lot also wears braces. I know he wants to kiss me, and I want to let him, but I once read in your column about two kids who wore braces. They kissed and the braces got hooked together and it was very embarrassing.

Any advice on how kids with braces should kiss? — DONNA.

DEAR DONNA: Carefully.

Turkish Police Rescue Girl, Unharmed, From Two Terrorists

ISTANBUL (CP) — Police broke into the apartment where two young terrorists were holding a 16-year-old girl hostage today, freed the girl in a three-minute gun battle and wounded the two youths, one fatally and the other critically.

The girl was rescued unharmed but hospital officials reported she was being treated for shock. The girl, Sibel Erdem, was at first reported by the hospital to have been wounded.

The dead terrorist, Mahir Cayan, was shot and killed by police. His partner, Huseyin Cevahir, was shot by police as security forces from lynching the enraged mob, whose fury had given rise, through the night, to waiting and worrying over the hostage, daughter of a Turkish army officer.

Police said Cayan was gravely wounded in the shoot-out and died on way to hospital.

Reuter news agency unofficially reported that Cayan had been beaten to death by the mob while police wrought him into the street.

The two youths were wanted for the kidnap-murder of Israeli Consul General Ephraim Elrom.

Flushed out of a crowded mansion Sunday by police, they invaded the third-floor apartment of the Turkish army officer and took his daughter captive after letting her mother and brother go.

Witnesses said an army sharpshooter opened the battle with a pistol shot that killed a police officer. The girl is Cayan's cousin.

Description of the events and hideouts changed from the apartment from fire-fighters whose they had been stationed for several hours.

One police officer was slightly injured in the hand as he broke a window.

Once inside, police fired tear-gas and sub-machine-gun and pistol rounds. "Hundreds of rounds" were exchanged in so-called chicken and egg war.

All briefs were submitted to the court in writing before the hearing opened.

The judges were examined by John Hilton, Ontario legal counsel, that the questions asked about the constitutionality of the Manitoba plan were too academic and vague, and could not be answered.

The Manitoba plan was not even in force. There was a danger that a ruling on the Manitoba plan would cast doubts on similar legislation already in effect in other provinces.

County was also in the case, from a distance of Toronto.

The girl was passed out of a kitchen window to police waiting on the top of a ladder. She was taken to an army hospital and reported in good condition.

Cevahir was captured getting out of the apartment building but was rescued by the hostage, which included many women.

He turned back from the crowd, which had broken through a police cordon, and was seized by troops and police.

One witness said Cevahir was injured in the side and had blood on his face when he ran from the building.

An unconfirmed report by the semi-official Anatolia news agency said Cevahir was killing a bomb he threw at the crowd, or possibly to kill himself. The army said a police officer smashed the bomb which exploded harmlessly in a vacant piece of ground.

The two youths had dropped a bag containing Elrom's passport and identity card Sunday when they moved from the federal mansion to the apartment.

Elrom was kidnapped May 17 by the Turkish People's Liberation Army and murdered five days later when the government refused to release all political hostages it was holding.

"Oh, you're wearing that brand of shaving lotion I've been trying to get Herbert to buy!"

Havelock Train Ordered Continued

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has approved discontinuance of three rail passenger service routes and has ordered continuance of four others in Ontario and Alberta.

The commission ordered continued and increased runs on the CP Rail self-propelled diesel service between Calgary and Edmonton.

Others ordered continued were CP Rail's Edmonton-Camrose-Drumheller, CP Rail Toronto-Peterborough-Havelock and the CNR Toronto-Markham.

Federal Official Argues Egg Board Illegal

OTTAWA (CP) — One of the objects of Manitoba's provincial marketing board is regulation of interprovincial trade in eggs and the board is therefore unconstitutional, assistant deputy attorney-general C. R. O Munro argued today.

Such regulation was reserved to the federal government.

Mr. Munro appearing for the federal government in a hearing before the Supreme Court of Canada questioning the validity of the Manitoba plan.

Hearing of the appeal by all nine Supreme Court judges is expected to conclude today. A decision on the matter could be weeks or months away.

Mr. Munro noted that the Manitoba Court of Appeal ruled the marketing plan unconstitutional because it would apply "to import transactions between vendors outside the province and purchasers inside the province."

If this was so, the plan was clearly beyond Manitoba's powers, he said.

Manitoba had argued in this hearing, however, that the marketing plan would apply only to transactions within the province.

The federal government agreed that the proposed marketing plan applied directly only to transactions within the province and that it included eggs produced within the province and then imported into it.

Even though the marketing plan could be said to apply only to intra-provincial trade, "its provisions are designed to achieve indirectly the regulation and control of the importation of eggs into Manitoba and that is therefore beyond the competence of the province," said Mr. Maxwell.

Earlier in the day's sitting, Newfoundland and Saskatchewan was joined with other provinces in supporting the proposed Manitoba legislation.

New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia voiced support for Manitoba at Monday's opening session in the

Escarpment Said Wide Open to Speculation

WATERLOO (CP) — The absence of adequate government control over the Niagara Escarpment has left the area "wide open for speculative forces," says Prof. Leonard Gertler, author of a 1966 report advocating preservation of the escarpment.

"A number of conspicuous gaps in the development control mechanism" have been left by the temporary Niagara Escarpment Protection Act passed June 30, 1970, the University of Waterloo professor told the Canadian Association of Geographers.

Prof. Gertler, head of the school of urban and regional planning at the university, had recommended the province acquire complete control over 55,000 acres of escarpment land and adopted control over 25,000 acres at a total estimated costs of $21 million.

He gave two examples of substantial industrial landholding in the Bruce Peninsula that could put the legislation to the test.

One is just south of Tobermory at Driftwood Cove, owned by Pickens-Mather, a firm dealing in iron ore, limestone and

Hijacked Plane Passengers Likely to Be Freed Soon

HAVANA (Reuter) — Reliable Cuban sources said today that the 48 passengers and crew of a hijacked Pan American World Airways jetliner, flown to the Cuban capital Saturday, may be released soon.

But the sources said the airliner itself could be kept at Havana's international airport until eight Cuban fishermen held in Florida on charges of fishing in U.S. territorial waters have been freed.

OPP Land and Air Surveillance Team Patrols Highways Over Wide Area

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Provincial police officers are up in the air these days, but it's all in the line of duty.

Working in conjunction with squad cars on the highway, the OPP aircraft patrol has again taken to the skies, with three officers permanently assigned to the air duty.

One of the officers, Constable Brian Skinner, explained the methods used on aircraft patrol to catch speeders.

"See those white markers on the road?" he said, pointing to several stubby T-marks painted on Highway 62. "Well each one of them is exactly ¼-mile apart."

When this method of detection was first introduced, the department of highways sent a survey team from Port Hope to walk every mile to check and then recheck their measurements to achieve full accuracy.

At traffic Sgt. Alvin J. Parry put it, "the survey crew is not out an inch in the quarter-mile measurements."

When pilot Charlie Twa banked the Cessna 172 aircraft, with its distinctive OPP markings, the marks on the highway were clearly visible in the toy - like world of way down there.

To check accuracy of his two stop watches, Const. Skinner radioed to the second member of the aircraft team, a highway patrol squad car, and instructed the officer to pace the highway at various speeds.

On the ground, sighting a quarter - mile distance is sometimes difficult but from the air it seems only inches away. With stopwatch in hand, Const. Skinner started the instrument as the cruiser's nose crossed one of the marks.

Exactly 18 seconds later, the car's grill crossed the second mark. Radio conversation confirmed the calibrated time . . . the officer's speed was 50 miles per hour. It is in this way, with two stop watches used to guarantee accuracy, that speeds are recorded.

To give each suspected speeder every possible chance, Constable Skinner said no less than two and sometimes four readings are made. "We're not going to go after the fellow that travels two or three miles over the limit . . . we're out to stop the real speeder, the driver who is doing 72 in a 60 zone."

The traffic sergeant said his men can tell the person who wanders . . . over who catches himself speeding and reduces when he discovers it . . . from the real speeder.

Wanderers aren't of major concern, said Sgt. Parry.

"We're out to give everyone an even break."

"Sometimes it lets them live a little longer."

The Belleville detachment spotters have their hands full patrolling Quinte area highways. On good days, they range over an area from Lindsay and Peterborough, east to Gananoque and Sharbot Lake, back southwest to Belleville and Trenton and all highways in between, including Highways 2, 7, 14, 15, 37, 38, 62, 115, and 401.

Because there are only six such aircraft patrols in the province, their range is extensive.

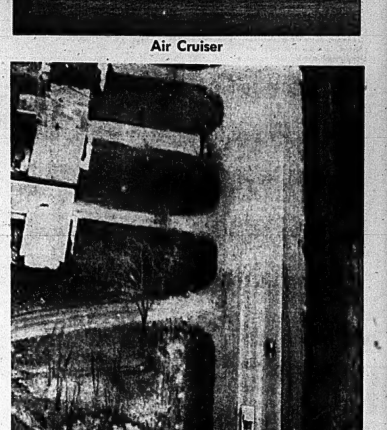
Belleville's patrol, manned by Constables Errol Johnston, Brian Skinner and Garry Phillips, weather permitting, depart from the Belleville Flying Club and fly the circuit, especially in heavy areas, until late afternoon.

People have employed several methods of spotting the blue and silver plane; one of the most common is a special mirror. However, these devices are not as helpful as some might think. From his vantage point several hundred feet above the highway, the spotter can see for several miles.

"We even chase people that try to avoid us," commented Constable Skinner.

As well as spotting speeders, the OPP aircraft have been able to catch dangerous and reckless drivers, have aided in the search for lost children and are able to spot forest fires.

But all is not a bed of roses sailing in cloudy blue.



"You know, this is my second year on this patrol, commented Constable Skinner, and my stomach still isn't quite used to it."

Volunteers Make Reading Lab Work

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Marshall McLuhan and the electronic media notwithstanding, the working world still runs on reading.

But the low level of reading ability among a sizeable percentage of the general public puts many at a disadvantage in an increasingly complex technology.

Secondary schools are finding more and more students who missed out somewhere along the line, and need a developmental reading course sometime during their high school career.

One school that is doing something about it is Moira Secondary, where a reading laboratory has been functioning for a year.

Trenton High School also has a reading lab, and a large setup has been installed at Loyalist College.

There would be more throughout the county system, but the drawback is money — about $3,000 to start a modest operation such as the one now being used to capacity at Moira.

But the return on the investment is so high in terms of academic accomplishment that teachers are calling for more reading labs, available to pupils long before they hit grade 9 in the secondary schools.

Traditionally, pupils have always spent their first five years in school learning to read, and the remainder of their school careers reading to learn.

Why do some fail to grasp the fundamentals so early in their schooling and why do they need such expensive equipment to overcome the lack?

The reasons are many and complex, beginning with perceptual handicaps, difficult to detect and still little understood.

Other reasons are simply poor habits — a short attention span, jerky eye movements instead of the smooth sweep of the eye from left to right across the page.

"A combination of many techniques is necessary to teach reading on the elementary level," says a Moira teacher involved in the reading lab program. "If a child misses out on the presentation of one technique, through a minor factor such as a short illness at a crucial time, he may never master correct reading skills."

The age at which children are ready to master different reading techniques varies widely, and with large classes under one teacher in elementary schools the individual difference among the pupils cannot always be catered to.

For example, one grade 7 class in a Belleville school has pupils reading at every grade level from grade 2 to grade 10. A teacher who devoted her time to coping with reading skills at nine grade levels would have no time left to teach other subjects on the course of study.

When reading deficiencies are discovered with the general testing all grade 9 students are now subjected to in schools like Moira, intensive tutoring is not the answer.

The poor readers picked up their bad habits from traditional teaching methods, and new techniques are needed to break the vicious circle. This is where the reading machines have proved invaluable.

"Because the lab differs from other teaching techniques the students are not preconditioned to failure by previous experience," says Jack Ross a teacher who assists with Moira's reading lab.

The principle of the machine is simple. It projects a piece of type, a sentence at a time at first, later a whole page, on a small screen at a rate the student can control himself, and masks the type in such a way that the student's eyes are forced to follow a regular patterns from left to right across the screen.

"The machine makes it essential for the student to pay attention," says Mr. Ross. "Boys like it because it's a machine they can manipulate; girls like it because they're functioning in a boy's world."

The fluency of the material used to start a student on a reading program may be at the grade 3 level, but the ideas are those that appeal to 16 and 17 - year - olds.

Motivation is a big factor in the success of Moira's reading lab. All the students using it are volunteers, there because they want to be, not because their teachers told them they should be.

Some grade 13 students, already reading at an adequate level, have taken a reading lab course to increase their reading speed in anticipation of the vast amount of material they will have to absorb from books next year at university.

"But speed alone will create more problems than it will solve," warns Charles Sloan, English department head at Moira, who with principal Forest Shipper, was one of the prime instigators of the reading lab program.

Vocabulary, comprehension and recall are stressed through workbook exercises before the students go near the machine.

The lab doesn't turn out reading speed artists. When he comes to the lab, the student begins at reading 180 words a minute at the grade level where tests have placed him. At the end of that grade, before he moves on to the next, he is reading at about 240 words a minute.

But mastering cursive prose — book reading — is no longer enough, and it's in the non-cursive field that many students have difficulties.

"Two-thirds of the reading our students do will be in not cursive prose," notes Mr. Sloan. "It's reading of scales, thermometers, maps, and graphs."

This type of reading was a minor factor in the "little red schoolhouse" education of 50 years ago but, as Mr. Sloan's figure indicates, it is a major skill essential for secondary school students today.

The reading machines can be programmed to teach fundamental mathematical skills to students with a weak grasp of the language of numbers. Moira hopes to move into this field next year.

But a budget allocation to each school will not get successful reading labs under way. The essential ingredient is a large measure of an old-fashioned virtue — teacher devotion.

The five teachers who staff Moira's reading lab are volunteers, like their students, who give up their spare periods to supervise the reading lab. The machines are in use from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and teachers come in early and stay late to help their students.

Consequently, the lab program at Moira has cost the county board nothing for staffing. To save the budget allocation for purchasing the machines, tapes and workbooks, shop teachers and students made necessary additional furniture for the lab and built the seven carrels, three-foot booths where the students can work individually in privacy and quiet.

All teachers involved with the reading lab have specialist training and experience in reading skills, and some are continuing to specialize through summer school courses.

Reading Lab

Donna Boyce, a student at Moira Secondary School, uses a reading machine in one of the carrels in the school's reading laboratory. Instituted at the school to develop superior reading skills among students who volunteer to use the lab, it is staffed by teachers who give their free time to supervising the do-it-yourself reading development course.

Smash Ends Tennis Hopes

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Mexico has defeated Canada in the second round of the American zone Davis Cup play—and a smash into the net in the deciding match is being blamed for wrecking Canada's chances.

Canadian champion Mike Belkin of Vancouver, playing brilliant tennis, tied the series 2-2 Monday, setting up the final match between John Sharpe of Toronto and Joaquin Loyo Mayo, 25-year-old Mexican top seed.

Belkin defeated Marcelo Lara 4-6, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2 but Sharpe was defeated by Mayo 6-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-1, and Mexico took the tie 3-2. Canada and Mexico each won one singles match Saturday while Lara and Mayo defeated Belkin and Sharpe in the doubles Sunday.

Sharpe, 31-year-old stockbroker, took the first set of the final match and led most of the second set after breaking Mayo's service in the first game.

Then came the crucial turning point. He was leading 5-4 and serving for the set. Mayo lifted a high lob, which was clearly going out. But Sharpe opted to play the ball, which he smashed into the net.

Mayo took the game and the following two to win the set 7-5. It was all downhill after that for Sharpe who lost the next two sets 6-1, 6-1, and it was all over for Canada.

"The ball was going out and I realized it immediately after I had smashed it into the net, which made the thing worse," Sharpe said after the game.

"John was playing well until that point," said captain Laurie Strong of Toronto. "Then Mayo started to play better."

"You never win a set until the last point. You learn that in Davis Cup play."

"John missed that one ball, which would have hit the fence," said Belkin. "It would have been two sets to love in our favor.

"But the Mexican kid got his confidence after this. From a bum, he became a good player."

Mexican coach Yves Lemaitre lauded the play of Belkin, 25, in the first game Monday.

Howe Ends 'Retirement'

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Gordie Howe confirmed Monday night at a sports celebrities dinner he will be back for another National Hockey League season, his 26th with Detroit Red Wings.

Howe was a head-table guests here with his wife, Colleen, daughter Cathy and sons Marty, Mark and Murray.

Also on hand were his parents, known in from Saskatchewan for the occasion by the dinner's sponsors, the Green Gaels' junior lacrosse team.

The all-time right winger was unaware of their visit until he saw them when being escorted to the place of honor just before the dinner.

In addition to straightening out his own future, Howe also enlightened fans on the immediate future of his two hockey-playing sons, Marty and Mark.

Both were wooed by almost all 10 teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series. Mark, a forward, said Monday he will remain home in Detroit next season. Defenceman Marty is expected to line up with an OHA club but has not decided which one.

"We are more concerned with the proper schooling and the type of people behind the teams and hope they will take the boy for what he is," said Howe, who credits his wife with guiding their lives during the formative years.

Howe also admitted he was pulling for Montreal Canadiens in the recent Stanley Cup final against Chicago Black Hawks.

He said he was "cheering for the Big M (Frank Mahovlich) and young Peter Mahovlich." Both played with Detroit before being traded to Montreal.

Among the head-table guests were Al Dorow, the new Hamilton Tiger Cat coach, quarterback Joe Zuger and end Tommy Joe Coffey, also of the Ticats, jockey Sandy Hawley, Montreal goalie Keh Dryden and defenceman Terry Harper, and footballer Fred Hoaglin of Cleveland Browns of the National League.

Bowerman Helps Win Best-ball

TORONTO (CP) — Wally Byers, Irv Lightstone and touring pro Gary Bowerman combined Monday to win the three-man best-ball tournaments at nearby Rolling Hills golf club.

The threesome posted a 10-under par 627 in the season's inaugural tournament for the Ontario branch of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association.

Byers, head pro at Richmond Hill, with a four-under 68, took individual honors by one stroke over Bowerman, pro at Maple Downs. Ken Venning of Brampton and Burlington's Garry Slatter.

Moe Norman of Golf Haven, near Barrie, also broke par at 71 while Chriss Snill of Toronto's Pleasure Park posted an even-par 72.

Byers, Bowerman and Lightstone, the latter head pro at Maple Downs, were only one stroke ahead of Slatter, Larry Bunkowski of Burlington and Roy Romaine of Oakville.

Longden Rode Rails First

CALGARY (CP) — Johnny Longden, who left Taber, Alta., as a penniless youth to launch his horse-racing career, was inducted Monday into the Horseman's Hall of Fame.

To get that opening rider he evaded a stick-wielding railroad policeman and rode a freight train to Salt Lake City, Utah.

The horse, Hugo K. Asher, won and Longden added 6,031 other wins in a 40-year career.

He rode on tracks throughout Canada and the United States, Mexico and Europe.

Longden, now a millionaire, was born in Wakefield, England, and moved with his parents to southern Alberta in 1912.

Times were occasionally bad and, when an older brother was afflicted by polio, he quit school to work in the mines at the age of 13. By the time he was 15 he was a full-fledged miner, working nine hours a day.

JOHNNY LONGDEN

On weekends, he rode quarter horses in country fairs, relay races and Roman races where he galloped full speed with one foot on the back of each of two horses. He once won 14 consecutive Roman races.

After his riding career, he began training horses and in 1969 won the Kentucky Derby and Preakness with Majestic Prince, owned by Frank McMahon of Vancouver and Calgary.

He suffered innumerable broken bones and other injuries.

Asked once if his success was worth the risks and brushes with death, he replied:

"Did you ever work in a coal mine?"

Today Separates Men From Boys

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — This was the day when the men were being separated from the boys in the 1971 British amateur gold championship and the wise men of the game still regarded a powerful American challenge as containing the possible winner.

"I wouldn't bet against them," said Norman Mair, a Scottish gold expert.

The Americans, who lost the Walker Cup to the British at St. Andrews last week for the first time in 33 years, blasted around Carnoustie's 6,828-yard par-72 course Monday in mild, sunny weather as though they owned it.

The only real casualty was Bill Campbell, 48, of Huntington, W. Va., who lost the first four holes and wound up beaten by 4 and 2.

The other Walker Cuppers worked their way into the second round.

The original field of 250 was cut back by the 80 matches of the first day, but two days are required to complete the first round. Herb Fritz of Vancouver plays his first-round match today.

The winning 18 men of the British Walker Cup team are untouched by defeat. Apart from Campbell, the Americans have a nine-man challenge.

Also playing their opening rounds today will be U.S. amateur champion Lanny Wadkins of Richmond, Va., and Bill Hyndman, 55, of Philadelphia, who has been a finalist in this competition three times in 12 years.

Loaded Bases Don't Count

The bottom of the 13th inning was "loaded" with excitement last night as Rollins Construction escaped from a three-on jam to hold on to a 4-3 extra inning win over the Ellis Juniors.

The Commercial Softball League leaders had broken a pitching deadlock between Wayne McConnell and the Juniors' Ted Waite in the top of the 13th inning plating a pair of runs to give them a 4-2 lead.

Steve Ling and pinch-hitter Scott Reid opened the inning with base hits and were chased home on a wrong-field single by third baseman Wayne McTaggart before Waite was able to get out of the inning.

The Juniors battled back for one run on a single by pinch hitter Ron Rodgers who scored on a long triple to centre field by Danny Lupenette.

Infield safeties by Rick Graham and Ted Waite loaded the bases before McConnell was able to nail Lupenette at the plate and then strike out Ken Richardson, after falling behind 3-0 on the Ellis pinch-hitter.

The only earned run in the regulation seven innings came from the first two batters in the game as Ling led off with a triple for Rollins and then rode home on Chuck Rowbotham's base hit.

The Juniors scored a pair in the third inning on singles by Graham and Waite following an error and a fielders' choice.

An error in the top of the seventh allowed Rollins to bounce back from the 2-1 deficit. McConnell helped win his own game by chasing Cliff Scott home with a single after the outfielder had reached base on a fielding miscue.

The Rollins hurler gave up nine hits in the contest, fanning 17 batters and not walking a man. Waite also allowed nine safeties, while walking one batter and striking out 14.

Steve Ling tripled and singled for the winners while Jerry Hill's double was the only other extra base hit.

Rick Graham paced the Juniors with three singles followed by Waite with a pair of safeties and Danny Lupenetie with a triple.

Don't Blame John!

Even some heavy hammering by John Henry wasn't quite enough to prevent the Shopping Plaza from dropping a 17-15 Minor Softball Association squirt division contest to Wray's Furniture last night.

Henry clobbered three home runs for the losers, but it wasn't enough to offset Wray's attack which was led by Andy Plane's four doubles.

In tyke play, A and W Drive-In survived a 28-26 slugfest against Harbour Marine. Dave Wilton laced four triples for the winners while Steve Bennett responded with two homers in a losing cause.

In an inter - family fued, the Kinsmen Hawks soared to a 13-8 victory over the Kinsmen Bobcats.

Steve Paquet turned in an excellent pitching performance for the winners to best Danny Rose, who had home run support from Peter Bislee.

Malcolm Brothers tykes won the other divisional battle staged last night downing Gib Waite Trailer Sales 21-27 despite a grand slam homer by Steve Taylor.

Belleville goalie Paul Muldoon thwarts the scoring effort of Campbellford forward Wayne Teupah in the opening game of the Quinte Junior Lacrosse League last night. Muldoon played a key role for the locals who overcame a 7-2 third period deficit to record their first win in two years over the defending league champions.

Juniors Get One Good Bounce

Being made of India rubber, a lacrosse ball occasionally takes some funny bounces, and it took one last night for the Belleville Junior Lacrosse entry.

A long drive by Joe Clarke bounced off the boards behind the Campbellford goal and caromed into the net off the goalie to pull the home team even at 7-7.

The one break was all that Belleville needed as they came up with a scintillating 8-7 victory over the defending league champions in the opening game of the Quinte Junior Lacrosse League.

The Belleville Juniors, who had not won a game against Campbellford in two years, appeared headed for still another defeat with the visitors leading 7-2 mid-way through the final period.

An outbreak of penalties, most of them to Campbellford opened the gates for Belleville's Jim Lennox to display some of his fancy ballhandling manoeuvres counting three consecutive goals to pull his team to within one goal of the lead.

After Clarke's bank shot had tied the game, Danny Payne counted the winner with about two minutes left to play. The Belleville forward lost the puck in the attacking zone only to pick it up again and score on a close in drive.

Despite considerable scoring heroics it was goalie Paul Muldoon who played the key role for the winners coming up with some unbelievable stops against the potent Campbellford scoring attack.

Lennox, who gained his previous lacrosse experience in Brockville, was the drive shaft of the Belleville attack potting five of the eight goals. The other markers went to Clarke, Payne and Greg Scarlett.

Defensively the home team did an outstanding job of containing high scoring forward Fred Turner limiting him to a single tally. Dav McMillan and Gary Bennett scored three goals apiece to account for the remainder of the Campbellford total.

"I think that we wanted to win more than they did," was how coach Gary Curtis explained his team's win. "The guys just got sick of getting beat every time out and decided to stay out of the penalty box and play lacrosse instead."

Belleville, drew only 13 of the game's 33 penalties which included two match and one game misconduct penalties to Campbellford.

The locals, who are in dire need of a sponsor, are slated to play their next home game Monday against Cobourg.

Posties' Rally Trumps Card's

Except for a late delivery by the Post Office both Industrial expansion teams would have opened their season on a winning note last night.

Brooke Bond came up with a 7-2 victory over Deloro Stellite in their initial encounter, but the Post Office managed six runs in the last inning to hang an 11-10 loss on V. L. Card Construction.

A five - run outburst in the bottom of the first provided Brooke Bond with their winning margin as Bob Chambers hurled seven - hit ball over the route for the winners. He struck out nine batters and did not walk a man.

Gary Matier was tagged with the loss, allowing 12 hits issuing three free passes and fanning seven batters.

Lou Rivers slammed two doubles and a single for Brooke Bond, while Ken Tracy had one of each. Paul Trumpour's two singles were tops for the losers.

V. L. Card were cruising along with a 10-5 lead until the last inning when the Post Office put together their winning rally.

George Johnson and Dale Wallgren combined to pitch nine - hit ball for the Post Office, passing four batters and striking out a pair.

Sharp and Snell issued 13 safeties and six walks for the constructionmen, while firing third strikes past six batters.

Gord "Soup" Campbell lined two singles and a double for the winners and Denny Barngar and Harry Reid chipped in two hits each.

Cliff Loacks homered and singled in a losing cause, while Keith Dickey and Jarrell had two hits apiece.

Union Carbide handled Mead Johnson for their second win in as many games.

Junior Day threw 8x - hit ball for the winners walking three and getting six batters on strikes. Sonny Holoway took over from Boyle in the first inning and fired a five - hitter over the remainder of the route. Between them the Mead Johnson pitchers walked 12 and fanned five batsmen.

A homer and single by Jack Hughes paced the Carbide attack with Wayne Brown Sr., Bob Zalkowitz and Garnet Bird collecting singles.

Rick May tripled for the losers, while Blaine Young had a double and single.

Four runs in the fifth inning broke open a pitchers duel between John Edwards and Ron Conlon and gave the Intelligencer a 6-2 win over CNR.

Edwards went the distance for the winners allowing only five hits while walking three and striking out five batters. Conlon gave up six hits in four innings before giving way to Brian Plumbe, who hurled one-hit relief for the last two innings. Between them they walked three batters and had eight strike outs.

Bill Hoard picked up two singles for the winners, while Ron Culloden broke open a 2-2 game with his fifth-inning home run. Conlon led the CNR with a double and single.

Phils' Bunning Passes Young

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Bunning, Philadelphia pitching dean, notched five strikeouts Monday as the Phillies beat San Diego Padres 3-1 in the opener of a National League doubleheader and buzzed past Cy Young into second place on the all-time list with 2,823 victims.

"I know I have no shot at Walter Johnson's record," said Bunning, who's still well behind the Big Train's fabulous 3,508 strikeouts. "In fact, I'm even surprised that I broke Young's record of 2,813.

"When you stop and think about it, I've never been an overpowering pitcher like Sandy Koufax or Bob Gibson.

Bunning wasted no time in barging past Young. He struck out Garry Jestadt to tie the mark, then broke it by fanning slugger Clarence Gaston in the first inning.

The Padres earned a split of the holiday twin bill with a 6-3 victory in the second game.

In other league action, Pittsburgh Pirates hammered Chicago Cubs 6-0, Houston Astros slugged Cincinnati Reds 4-1, San Francisco Giants turned back New York Mets 2-1 in 11 innings, St. Louis Cardinals nipped Atlanta Braves 3-2 and Los Angeles Dodgers stumped Montreal Expos 4-0.

Bunning, in his 16th major league season after hitches with Detroit of the American League and Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Los Angeles of the National, didn't remember his first strikeout.

His toughest strikeout?

"Nellie Fox," said Bunning. "It took me 13 years before I got him."

The 39-year-old Bunning, along with Young the only pitcher to have 100 victories and 1,000 strikeouts in each of the American and National Leagues, was given the ball after the historic, first-inning strikeout and received an explosive ovation from the crowd at San Diego Stadium.

Rookie Willie Montanez' two-run double in the ninth inning snapped a 1-1 tie and gave the victory to Bunning.

Steve Blass, allowing only five hits in pitching Pittsburgh over Chicago, got home run support from Willie Stargell and Richie Hebner.

Larry Dierker won his ninth game in 10 decisions by spacing seven hits and Cesar Cedeno knocked in three runs with a two-run homer and double as Houston tripped Cincinnati.

JIM BUNNING

Willie Mays, whose eighth-inning homer tied the game, 1-1, raced home from third on Tito Fuentes' sacrifice fly in the 11th to carry San Francisco past New York for the Giants' fifth straight victory.

Jose Cardenal drove in the winning run with a two-out single in the eighth inning to pace St. Louis over Atlanta as Lou Brock's 26-game hitting streak ended. Brock struck out twice and bounced out two times in four appearances.

Richie Allen crashed a two-run homer in the third inning and reliever Jim Brewer saved Don Sutton in an eighth-inning jam for Los Angeles against the Expos.

Jock's Name Second Pick

MARAICAIBO, Venezuela (AP) — The name Canonero II is all right for a horse, but not for a child.

Cruz Paredes, a farmer, tried to name his baby boy after the Venezuelan-owned winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. But a Merida state clerk rejected his request, saying the name wasn't fit for a child.

Paredes then changed his son's name to Gustavo Franklin Paredes, after Gustavo Avila, the jockey who rode Canonero II.

Durocher's Days May Be Numbered

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Leo Durocher won't deny that his days as manager of Chicago Cubs may be numbered.

"I've been in this game a long time," he said Monday after the Cubs lost 6-0 to Pittsburgh Pirates. "There is no manager who is not vulnerable.

"And when the time comes —today, tomorrow, next week or next year—when it happens, am I going to be a baby about something like that?

"That's a lot of bull.

"If anybody wants to know what's going to happen, have him call Mr. Wrigley (the team owner) or Mr. Holland (team vice-president)."

The Cubs have lost 10 of their last 13 games and are hurting because of injuries and a weak bullpen which has picked up only one save all season.

"You put the eight best men on the field," said the 64-year-old Durocher, in his sixth year with the Cubs. "You can't go out and pick up the ball for them.

"I know one thing. They're trying, giving 100 per cent."

Durocher was thrown out of the game Monday in the fifth inning for protesting a third strike call to Rick Monday, Ferguson Jenkins, the Chatham, Ont., fireballer.

"I was just hollering at home (umpire Nick Colosi) to give him (Jenkins) the same kind of pitches you're calling against him."

The Pirates jumped on Jenkins, seeking his ninth victory of the season and 100th of his career, in the second for two runs when Willie Stargell hit his 17th homer and Oliver tripled and scored on a single by Manny Sanguillen.

Richie Hebner hit a homer in the third and drove in another run in a two-run fifth with a double.

The Red Sox weren't quite as lucky as Buford. They were hit over and over, mostly by Amos Otis but also by Paul Schaal and Cookie Rojas as Kansas City swept the doubleheader.

Otis drilled a home run in each game, added a pair of singles and drove in six runs for the day. Schaal had a pair of key hits in the first game and a big double in the four-run third inning of the nightcap and Rojas rifled a three-run homer in the second game.

Buford Swinging At Everything

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don Buford, Baltimore's record-sized outfielder, belted two home runs and tried for one pitcher and a fan in the Orioles' 11-3 romp over Chicago White Sox in the second game of an American League Memorial Day doubleheader.

The Sox won the opener 1-0 on Tommy John's five-hitter and the split enabled the Orioles to move within 1½ games of first place Boston in the East Division as the Red Sox took a 7-3, 9-4 doubleheader whipping from Kansas City Royals.

He was hit by a Joe Horlen pitch in the first inning and then ripped home runs in the third and sixth. When he came to bat in the eighth, reliever Bart Johnson hit him in the back and Buford went after the pitcher.

Beeches empty

Both benches emptied but no punches were thrown.

An inning later, Buford was in the on-deck circle when he became the centre of another battle.

"Kids in the stands nearby started throwing apple cores, paper cups and other things at me," said Buford. "I went over to warn them. Then some fan jumped me from the rear."

The Orioles ran to Buford's defence and when the mob scene was unscrambled, Buford had been ejected from the game and a fan was taken by police to the Stadium first aid room, suffering from a bloody nose and mouth. He later ran out of the room, and could not be identified.

'I'll Have Him in Me Power'

Stewart Arnott as Edward Middleton, hero of the play The Drunkard or The Fallen Saved, is innocently unaware of the pitfalls laid by his "friend" the villainous lawyer Cribbs, played by Lee Jourard, who is scheming for his downfall by persuading him to drink. The play will be presented in the manner of a 19th-century melodrama by the Belleville Theatre Guild from June 2 to 6 and June 8 to 12 at the Pinnacle Playhouse. Tickets may be bought at the playhouse and Frank's Cigar Store.

Melodrama Inspires Boos, Cheers

A troupe of travelling players will be camping in Belleville for the next two weeks to present The Drunkard or The Fallen Saved, starting tomorrow at the Pinnacle Playhouse. At least, this is the impression the Belleville Theatre Guild would like to convey in their manner of presenting this classic 19th-century melodrama, first done in 1844.

The Belleville Theatre Guild will try to present the play exactly as it was done then, with makeshift props, elaborate costumes and a highly stylized way of acting.

When the play was first enacted, the temperance movement had gathered momentum and the play was used to convey the temperance message to the public. Since the 19th century, however, the play has become a comedy in the light of today's standards and the contrast between the two attitudes to drinking is where the fun comes in.

The plot concerns Lawyer Cribbs, played by Lee Jourard, who, under the guise of friendship, tempts the hero, Edward Middleton, played by Stewart Arnott, to pave the way for his own downfall by drinking to excess.

Barroom brawls, a long suffering heroine, played by Linda Archer, and comic relief provided by a group of pompous tradigers, particularly Miss Spindle, played by Debbie Anderson, figures in the play in which the audience is urged in particular by cheering the hero, to boo the villain and sympathizing with the heroine.

The set was designed by Lawrence Ewashen, artistic director of the Guild. The play will run from June 2 to 6 and from June 8 to 12. During the intermissions, Mike Reed, Ken Ross and Herbert Mullin will entertain with songs and ballads.

Mulroney Tyke Win Tightest

Mulroney's Sunoco tykes emerged as victors in the tightest Minor Baseball Association bout Monday night by taking a 12-11 verdict from Hoskins Wreckers.

Greg McEachern and Paul Marzzaco hurled the win as Willy Gamer and Bob Hageman working for the losers.

Top Mulroneys batter was Steve Gilbey with a homer and two triples, while Greg McEachern had a home run, double and single.

Robert Landry blasted a home run and single for the losers while Bob Hagerman had a pair of singles.

Harveys Hamburgs was the other tyke bout in a 20-14 effort over Dcsronto.

Terry Kingsman and Mark Pearse looked after the pitching chores for Harveys with Peter Morris and Earl Hill working for Desernots.

Ritchie Giesey and Garfield Pennipington collected three singles apiece for the winners with two hits going to Shawn McDonell, Terry Kingsman and Pat Dunn.

Steve Blevitt, Blair Gingland and Earl Hill each had three hits in a losing cause.

Bob's Sports had a big night in the tadpole division coming up with an 18-8 win over Wannamaker's Esso.

Steve Molaski and Kevin Angus were the winning pitchers while Jim Gibbs and Jim McMullin took the defeat, despite striking out 19 batters between them.

Charlie Doran clouted an inside-the-park four home runs for the winners while Mike Vaal had a homer and two singles and Kevin Jones a home run and a single.

Sports on All Fronts

NEW YORK (CP—AP) — Ras Canonero II, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, been sold?

"No," says Pedro Baptista, here readying his horse to go for the third jewel in the triple crown—the Belmont—here Saturday.

"Yes," says a relative of Baptista, who declined use of his name.

The situation evolved Monday when the relative said in Caracas that Canonero II had been sold for $1 million in a deal concluded in Miami. He said Baptista travelled to Miami Sunday to complete certain conditions for the sale.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals have put ace right-hander Bob Gibson on the disabled list for 21 days.

The 33-year-old Gibson pulled a thigh muscle in his right leg while batting in the third inning of Saturday night's game with Atlanta Braves.

* * *

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves announced Monday they have purchased the contract of Zollo Versalles, former American League Most-Valuable Player and all-star shortstop, from Union Laguna of the Mexican League.

He replaces third baseman Clete Boyer on the roster. Boyer was placed on waivers last week after a dispute with Braves' general manager Paul Richards.

Versalles, a 30-year-old veteran of 11 seasons in the majors leagues, was the Most Valuable Player and shortstop on the American League All-Star team in 1965 when he helped lead Minnesota Twins to the world championship.

Howe Now Heard

Old Red Brick Post Offices Things of Beauty to Marvin

OTTAWA (CP) — Not only is the Liberal government engaged in a conspiracy to drive Prairie farmers off their lands, Progressive Conservative speakers charged in the Commons Monday, but it also is callously casting aside "beautiful old red brick post offices."

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin (Peace River) made the first charge in debate on a bill to include flax, rye and rapeseed under the Canadian wheat board. The bill was given second reading and sent to committee for study.

The second charge came from Marvin Howe (PC—Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo) as he opposed a bill to increase postal rates.

Today the House resumes debate on legislation to increase the salaries and allowances of MPs and Senators.

The postal bill would increase the minimum first-class letter rate to eight cents from six cents and would permit the postmaster-general to change rates on letter packets weighing more than one pound.

Stamp-selling agents would have their commissions raised to five per cent from two per cent.

Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible for the post office, said the effect on the general public of the increased rates would be marginal.

The rate would be increased in two stages—six cents July 3 and eight cents Jan. 1, 1972—to lessen the impact on business.

The average cost to the individual for a year's postage would rise 25 cents July 1 and 50 cents Jan. 1.

About 80 per cent of mail volume served business and industry and it was unjust for the general public to pay postal deficits through taxes.

Mr. Howe called the increases inflationary—businesses would simply pass the costs on to the consumer.

He also complained that "beautiful old red brick post offices" are being needlessly demolished or abandoned so that new post offices could be built. He said they would be renovated instead.

Rod Thomson (NDP—Battleford-Kindersley) said:

"Despite its problems and recent troubles and disruptions as well as the curtailment of service, the post office provides a very good service."

But it had been handicapped by a series of transient postmasters-general—11 in 14 years.

He opposed any first-class increase, suggesting instead raising rates for second- and third-class mail. The second and third classes were the areas of greatest deficit for the post office.

Louis Comeau (PC—South Western Nova) said he might have supported the increases if the government would use them to improve the present lousy postal service.

But he opposed having the higher revenues "join the millions of dollars in the bottomless pit of post office deficits."

On the wheat board legislation, Mr. Baldwin criticized government agricultural policy in general.

"The over-all package of federal government agricultural legislation, of which this bill is part, contains a collusive conspiracy on the part of the government to depress the rural areas of Western Canada of farmers, particularly small family farmers."

That brought a sharp reply from Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board. He referred to "the mischievous and indeed malicious suggestion that in some way someone is out to get farmers off the farm against their will."

The suggestion was part of a "continuing attempt to put fear into the hearts of people whose economic and social difficulties are already great enough."

He repeated his assurance that neither rye nor flax nor rapeseed would be marketed by the wheat board without "the clear and substantial support of producers."

Eldon Williams (PC—Calgary North) said that if flax, rye and rapeseed are placed under the wheat board, farmers may find themselves without a cash crop.

The wheat board could impose quotas on delivery of those grains, which many farmers used as a source of ready money for current expenses.

"The farmers in Western Canada do not need handouts and they are not asking for them. What they need is a market for their produce."

Mr. Thomson said the wheat board has not done too bad a job but it has on occasion been hindered by lack of the tools required to do the job.

He said it is high time the three grains were placed under the board to give farmers better prices.

Other speakers in the postal debate included Ron Harding (NDP-Kootenay West), who said a donkey could walk across Canada faster than the 10 days British Columbia newspapers take to reach Ottawa, and Cliff Downey (PC—Battle River), who suggested war amputees be given free mail service, while Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington) scolded the post office for having "the worst postage stamps of any country in the world."

Low Blood Sugar Remedy Altered

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

During the past year or two, many books, newspaper columns and magazine articles have informed millions of readers about low blood sugar (hypoglycemia). Yet, in confrontation with this problem, many still are not sure of how to manage it.

Unfortunately in some cases this is due to doctors who disagree. Some still prescribe away from it". For example:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Both my husband who is 23 years old and my mother who is 64 have been diagnosed by separate doctors as having low blood sugar. The glucose tolerance test was used by each doctor to make the diagnosis. snacks, he is to eat high protein foods. But my mother was advised by her doctor to eat a piece of candy whenever she felt weak or dizzy. Nothing about eating high protein diets.

Are there different ways of treating low blood sugar, or is one of the doctors wrong? How does one make the correct choice? Thank you in advance for your answer. — Mrs. K.

COMMENT: I think it will help you make your decision if you realize that only during the past few years has it become apparent that patients with low blood sugar should take high protein diets, rather than try to raise an abnormally low blood sugar by feeding on carbohydrates.

Unfortunately, some doctors still are not aware that too much sugar in the diet subsequently lowers the blood sugar instead of raising it. Sugar stimulates the pancreas to secrete insulin, which burns the sugar. In patients with idiopathic hypoglycemia (low blood sugar of unknown cause — the most common form) — the pancreas responds by oversecreting insulin. The result is abnormally low blood sugar causing the common symptoms of nervousness, weakness, dizziness, extreme hunger, faintness, etc.

* * *

The reason a high protein diet helps is that not so much insulin is called upon to regulate smaller amounts of sugar in the diet. Although it's true that we still give some patients sugar by mouth or into a vein to overcome sudden fall in blood sugar, the overall plan is to keep patients on a high protein diet and medication rather than on a high carbohydrate regimen.

To be more specific in answer to your question, Mrs. K. I suggest that you advise your mother to ask her doctor to call in a consultant. In managing hypoglycemia it's vitally important that the patient's intake of carbohydrates be restricted.

* * *

For Mrs. H.: As your question is made in general terms it can't possibly be answered specifically, so I hope you will excuse an apparent attempt to evade it. What Fallopian tubes have been blocked and pregnancy seems impossible, it all depends upon the reason for the "block".

For example, some women who have had their tubes tied (or cut) to prevent conception, have at least some chance of having them repaired by a gynecologist. Pregnancy is possible in the future, assuming that the husband's sperm production and activity is normal.

But when tubes have been scarred and blocked by infection, chances of re-opening them are very much less. Only your gynecologist (specialist in the care of female organs), can give you the answer you seek.

Sydney J. Harris Says

'Relevant' Is Indefinable

Although the word "relevant" has become among the most used, and abused, of slogans today — especially in education — it remains a fact that there is no satisfactory definition of the word.

"Relevant" the dictionaries tell us, is an adjective that means "having upon or connected with the matter in hand; to the purpose; pertinent." Some of the synonyms are "applicable," "germane" "suitable," and "fitting."

But "relevant" has no object of its own. Relevant to what? In modern jargon, education should be relevant to "what's happening now." It should be HERE to current events, should be helping people solve problems.

But the basic problem of mankind has always been, and remains, twofold; how to think clearly, and how to establish the best relationship between our thoughts and our feelings.

If we think poorly, our good feeling will be subverted by ignorance and muddled logic; and if we are dominated by our feelings, then our intellects will be controlled by our appetites, and we will use our knowledge for selfish purposes.

The students and activists are confused about "proximate" ends and "ultimate" ends. The ultimate end of education — like that of all institutions — is to make a more liveable, civilized and humane world for all of us.

But the proximate end — the immediate intention of education — is to turn out young men and women who have learned how to use those tools who have been given access to the best minds of the past, and who are disciplined in their thoughts and feelings.

You cannot create a better world if you are ignorant; with all the good will in the world, all you can do is replace current evils with different ones. You cannot work for "justice," "peace," "brotherhood" or any such abstraction, until you understand their philosophical roots, their implications, and their perversions.

The trouble with the schools is that they have dealt with these glorious, but frequently and have not applied them to our society; this much is true when they are criticized for being "irrelevant". But the way to change this is not to concentrate on the immediate problems but to construct a solid bridge of knowledge leading from the theoretical to the practical, from the useable past to the present and future.

Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida" can tell us more about the nature of war and the erotic impulse than anything in the headlines about Vietnam. "Relevance" means going back as much as going forward.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 3

Your birthday today: Today begins a year-long effort to get your material affairs settled into more efficient, easier handled routines. Income promises to improve, likewise your judgment as to what to do with it. Emotions deepen in daily use. Past events fade rapidly from your memory as a new world demands more of your attention.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You are invited to take sides in issues ranging from the subtlest to the crudest. Efforts to stay out may be misunderstood as fail of acceptance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Bright ideas pop up all around, including some you haven't the time and money to pursue. If you take a fresh look, there is something to learn in the most simple and well-worn routines.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Rise and shine early. Your optimism makes a great difference in the lives of others around you.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Consider what you are using your money to buy and where the benefits fall. Take a more impersonal course for healthy self-interest.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Direct methods are not as effective as broad and well organized diplomacy this month. Avoid risk on spending at present; more interesting subjects for your resources are coming up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Revision, change of direction are in order. Even long-standing projects lack feasibility in today's conditions. You may be called upon for definite promises before you learn enough to decide what to do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): News includes an idea which applies to your own situation. Catch up on correspondence with particular reference to promises you have made about sending information, small objects, samples to distant places.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): In the build-up phase which should be in progress, a side issue is resolved or an obligation lifted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Resistance or delay is encountered before the day is out. Get as much done while early opportunity exists.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Subtle signs of coming trends show for those who watch. Follow intuition in all things, particularly unaccustomed experiences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): In this generally conservative month of material concerns, the relatively minor projects this morning turn out better than anticipated.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Prepare for future changes, make room for new activities, clear out space and leave it open. Balance demand for your needs, giving equal value to both.

Nixon Warns USSR

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon urged the Russians Tuesday night to show military restraint in the Middle East, warning that large-scale deliveries of weapons to Egypt would open a new arms race and sharply increase the danger of war.

Nixon addressed his appeal to the Soviet leaders when he discussed the new 15-year treaty between Cairo and Moscow at a televised news conference.

He said the treaty, signed in Cairo last Thursday by Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, would not discourage U.S. peace efforts in the Middle East, and he acknowledged that he did not know whether it would be followed by new Russian arms aid for the Egyptians.

His warning about a possible new arms race indicated he was prepared to step up American military aid to Israel to prevent the military balance from swinging to the Arabs.

In other areas during the 30-minute session, the president said:

—The administration soon will announce a four-front "national offensive" against drug abuse and narcotics addiction.

—Easing curbs on trade with China will be announced June 10 and a policy regarding a seat in the United Nations for the Peking government will be formulated in about six weeks.

—No foreign travels are planned in the near future but the president will pack his bags if it becomes necessary to promote an East-West troop cut in Europe as an American-Soviet accord on arms limitations.

The president said the United States will consider negotiating with Soviet Union on mutual troop reductions in Europe after Washington has consulted with Atlantic Alliance leaders.

Noted Protestant Theologian Dead

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr, 78, famed Protestant theologian and crusader for social change who was considered one of the greatest Christian thinkers the United States has produced, died Tuesday night at his summer home after a long illness.

Dr. Niebuhr taught that religious faith is "basically a trust that life, however difficult and strange, has ultimate meaning."

He intertwined his theology with a hard realism and a belief that Christian morality should be manifest in social and political action.

He disputed the teachings of evangelist Billy Graham and Rev. Norman Vincent Peal's emphasis on the power of positive thinking. Their "wholly individualistic conceptions of sin," he said, were "almost completely irrelevant" to the problems of the nuclear age.

He believed that the remedy for social ills was not religious conversion but the Christian realism by which man sought to change his environment as best he could.

Kidnapping Charges Laid Against Six

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Eighteen prisoners have been charged as a result of the four-day rebellion at Kingston penitentiary last April that left two convicts dead and the institution wrecked. Ten other prisoners were injured.

Thirteen have been charged with non-capital murder in the two deaths, city police announced Tuesday night. One of the 13 and five others are charged with kidnapping six guards at the start of the April 14 uprising.

Inspector Wilfrid Kealey said in an interview that the charges were laid Monday. No reason was given for the delayed announcement.

Those charged will appear in provincial court here Friday.

Appearing Thursday in court at Napanee, Ont., will be 11 guards from Millhaven penitentiary where about 300 of the Kingston prisoners were moved after their rampage caused damage to the old building estimated at between $300,000 and $1 million.

The guards face charges of assaulting prisoners involved in the unrest.

When the prisoners ended their protest and released the guards, officials found the body of Brian Enser, 26, of Hamilton, in the rubble.

Bertrand H. Robert of Chatham, Ont., died later of massive head injuries suffered during the final hours of the disturbance.

Insp. Kealey said Tuesday that more than 500 prisoners involved in the riot were interviewed.

In a Toronto interview, Attorney-General Allan Lawrence said the investigations resulting in Monday's charges had been conducted mainly by Kingston police with some assistance from provincial police.

Last Thursday, Mr. Lawrence said that the 22 counts of assault laid against the Millhaven guards involved eight of the transferred prisoners.

Prisoners were transferred to Joyceville and Collins Bay, both at Kingston, and Warkworth, about 15 miles northwest of Trenton, as well as to Millhaven.

Included among the 18 prisoners charged is William James Knight, 27, one of three men who negotiated with a citizens' committee during the revolt. He is charged with kidnapping the six guards.

Charged with non-capital murder are: Glen Archer Morris, 24; Wayne Herbert McGurin, 27; Edward Maxwell Fowler, 18; Robert James Robidoux, 18; William David Sopley, 24; Harold Kenneth St. Amour, 23; James Robert Ogg; Donald Ogg, 20; Ernest James Bugler; David Silvester Birt, 24; Brian Lester Beaucage, 23; Edward Fulton Johnston, 22, and Brian William Dodge, 27.

Charged with kidnapping are: Dodge, Leo Joseph Paul Berriault, 24; Allan Laflenfere, 25; Charles Wayne Saunders, 22, and James Robert Adams, 31.

A federal commission into the uprising met briefly at the Royal Military College here May 17. It resumes June 7.

Tanzania Urges Canada Stop Citizens Moving to Rhodesia

DAR ES SALAAM (Reuter) — Tanzania's government-owned newspaper The Standard suggested today that Canada should refuse passports to Canadians planning to settle in Rhodesia.

The paper remarked on Tanzania's friendly relations with Canada and recalled how President Julius Nyerere last year singled out Canada as one of the developed Western countries which aids Africa economically without any interest in extending power politics to the continent.

But friendship between governments could not prevent a Canadia from emigrating to Rhodesia.

"If the emigration means immigration into another country in which it will contribute to the oppression and misery of human beings, then the government of the source country has the responsibility to curb its citizens," The Standard said.

It suggested the banning of the advertisements in question, public disapproval of emigration with a view to settling in Rhodesia, and "refusing or withdrawing passports from people with such aims."

The Standard said the immigration of skilled people to Rhodesia was an economic factor which fell under the category of United Nations voluntary sanctions against the regime.

"Nothing binds Canada to apply sanctions which are voluntary," the editorial concluded.

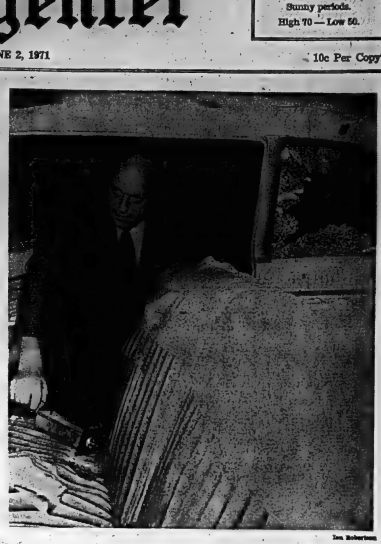
"Nothing that is except humanity, from which springs the meaning of our friendship."

Air Canada Agreement Said Sanctions Breach

OTTAWA (CP) — Two University of Toronto professors said Tuesday Air Canada has an agreement with South African Airways that breaches Canadian government economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

In a brief to the Commons external affairs committee, Robert Hindmarsh and Gerald Helleiner said the sales agreement between the two airlines has "produced seriously misleading advertising in Canada," and contradicts "the government's decision of withdrawing $4 million of investment in South Africa by the Polymer Corporation."

Air Canada involvement with tourism in Rhodesia, also ruled by a white minority, contradicts a Canadian order-in-council endorsing United Nations sanctions against trade with Rhodesia, the brief said.



Air Canada, like Polymer, is a Crown corporation.

The committee is hearing submissions on the government's white paper on foreign policy.

The YMCA of Canada, Canadian University Service Overseas and the NDP launched a joint attack against Canadian involvement in construction of the Cabora Bassa Dam in Mozambique, a Portuguese colony.

"Two Canadian firms are selling aluminum rods to the construction company building the dam.

"The Cabora Bassa Dam . . . has become . . . a test of the integrity of Western condemnation of apartheid," the YMCA said.

A Thorough, Destructive Job

Tires, upholstery, battery and the outside body had been slashed and shredded and the windows and headlights were all broken. This is the second car similarly damaged in the past two months.

Alleged Mass Murderer Granted Closed Hearing

YUBA CITY, Calif. (Reuter) — Accused mass murderer Juan Corona goes into court today on charges linking him to the brutal slaughter of 23 drifters, itinerant workers or winos.

Corona's court-appointed lawyer, Roy van den Heuvel, said the 37-year-old Mexican-born farm labor contractor would plead not guilty.

At the lawyer's request, Judge J. J. Hawkins ordered the arraignment held behind closed doors with press and public barred. Van den Heuvel said he planned to file a motion requesting access to police evidence against his client.

Corona was charged with murder after the first 18 bodies were recovered from makeshift graves in orchards along the Feather River.

Sheriff Roy Whitenker earlier had arranged for a light plane to fly over the orchard area along the Feather River, using photo-spotter techniques in an effort to uncover more grave sites.

Whitenker said he believes there are more bodies in the area although some of them never may be recovered by searchers because irrigation projects have flooded some parts.

No bodies have been found since Saturday when the 23rd victim was disinterred.

Authorities believe the victims found since digging operations began all were slain between April 1 and May 23. All had been stabbed or hacked with a machete, a common implement in Southern California fruit farms.

Police, meanwhile, continued the search for the spot where the victims were butchered.

Doctor Plans 'Do Not Open' Chest Tattoo

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto doctor says jocularly he plans to have a tattoo put on his chest and it will read: Do not open.

Dr. G. D. Saxton, head of thoracic and cardiovascular surgery at Vancouver General Hospital, told the Canadian Tuberculosis and Respiratory Association that he is concerned about some old people who are treated in hospitals.

He said "old crocks who have had it" are put through the strain of long, costly courses of treatment but then stumble out of hospital unable to function effectively.

He said many would prefer to "have life over with."

Dr. Saxton said he plans the tattoo so that when he is taken to hospital with a ruptured blood vessel he is not subjected to such heroic measures.

Queensboro Festival To Go Before Court

Rock Acres Peace Festival goes before the courts next Monday, The Hon. Mr. Justice Lieff of the Supreme Court of Ontario will preside over a hearing for an injunction, brought by Madoc Township council to halt the rock festival next month near Queensboro.

The court hearing will be held in the Supreme Court chambers at the county court house in Belleville at 2 p.m. June 7.

A spokesman, at the county building said the principals in the family enterprise sponsoring the festival, July 3, 4, and 5, James Quinlan and his sons James jr. and Leon, were served with subpoenas Monday night.

The Quinlan family, owners of the farm about 15 miles north - west of Madoc where the festival is slated to be held, have consistently affirmed their intention of going ahead with the event in spite of township bylaws aimed at discouraging rock festivals.

One "regulatory bylaw" includes posting of a $200,000 public liability bond and a $500 license fee to hold a festival.

Another is a land use bylaw, forbidding the use of agricultural land for anything but farming. This bylaw is now before the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

The festival has been widely advertised throughout the United States and 11,000 tickets are reported to have been issued.

Which One Do You Obey?

Peter Ticktin of the Temple and Russell law firm, yesterday contested the jurisdiction of signs prohibiting parking at coin-operated meters during certain hours of the day.

Acting as counsel for his wife, Eva Ticktin, on a parking ticket offence, Mr. Ticktin referred to city bylaws which regulate the use of parking spaces by meters. He said the signs posted over certain meters, labelled "No Parking, Loading Zone, 9 a.m.-11 a.m." conflict with signs posted on all meters which allow for parking between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily except for Sundays and holidays.

"There is a conflict here between the meter and the signs," he told Judge T. V. Wills.

Judge Wills agreed. "That should be modified . . . there are two sets of signs not consistent with each other. I agree that the signs, the upright signs, are in accord with section 18, subsection four of the bylaws, but when you have the parking meter, with information below and this is not modified, there may be a misleading conflict."

Mr. Ticktin suggested a bylaw amendment or special signs for meters in restricted zones.

Judge Wills made no decision yesterday. "I will reserve judgment for a couple of weeks to study the matter," he said.

The judge expressed concern that motorists would park in areas such as Bridge Street East during rush hours if the signs were not amended.

Trenton Official Plan Now Ready for Council

TRENTON (Staff) — Council will soon be considering the new official plan for the town in its revised form but they may have to look hard to find the revisions.

At Tuesday's Trenton and Suburban Planning Board meeting, a report dealing with the grievances of the Quinte Homebuilders Association was received from the board's planning consultants.

The planning board wasted no time approving the single amendment to the plan suggested by Dennis Flood of the Toronto firm, Project Planners in the short brief.

Quinte Homebuilders had made a number of recommendations for changes in the plan but only that for alteration of plot ratio densities was considered.

By the resolution approved last night, density schedules were revised so that lots less than one acre in size may now contain up to 14 dwelling units per acre, one to four acre lot 20 units per acre, one between two and four acres 16 units per acre but no more than 45 per acre.

The plan's original scale provided that a property under five lots acres must contain no more than 14 units per acre, one between two and three lots acres must be between three and four no more than 30 and, as remains one over four no more than 45.

The homebuilders' group had objected to several land use designations in the new plan, particularly reclassification of property on Harry Place Road from residential to industrial, a projected large - scale expansion of Hanna Park and the retention of the area between Mount Pelion and the river for industrial use instead of making it residential.

In the consultant's report, he states "the questions raised concerning the industrial designation along Highway 33 toward Carrying Place Road, as well as the open space just below the mountain and adjacent to Hanna Park are not clear and it is not possible therefore to give any specific comment."

Consideration of aspects of the homebuilders' brief other than densities was dismissed early in the meeting by Paul Tripp, who said the density would felt the board was "talking potential residential area and turning it into unneeded open space."

Board member, Doug Livingstone, told him that the large open space provisions were appropriate in view of trend to shorter work weeks and increased leisure time.

Council had given first and second reading to the new official plan but delayed final ratification until the planning board had reviewed the presentation of the homebuilders with its consulting engineers.

During last night's board meeting, chairman Dr. Robert Patrick, refused to hear further complaints about the plan from solicitor William Ward who was trying to present comments of Sunrise Developments and contractor Wasil Sidor.

Bogus Bill Possession Confirmed

William Stuart Burns, 24, of 343 Dundas Street West, Napanee, described by his accomplices as "The Boss" was found guilty of possession of counterfeit money circulated in the Quinte area at Christmastime, 1970, when he appeared in county court Monday.

The 12-member petit jury returned its verdict following 35 minutes of deliberation.

Wilfred Champagne, RCMP counterfeit identification examiner from Ottawa, described the bills seized as "the best phony $10 I have ever seen".

Police testified Henry Evan "Happy" David was arrested Dec. 22 at the Towers store in Belleville and a fake $10 bill bearing $10 note serial number R-E 5011078 was confiscated. David later served 24 days in jail for passing.

Officers told the eight-man, four-woman jury they attempted to close in on a car driven by Burns as it waited for the return of David. However, the occupants were alerted by the presence of police and Mrs. Linda Alabbas of Kingston slashed 11 bills in a snowbank. She also served a 14-day jail term for passing.

A third occupant of the car, involved in a counterfeit bill passing trip from Kingston, to Napanee, Picton and Belleville, was Margaret Ked di Kingston. She testified she was arrested during a raid on the Alabbs home Dec. 24. She received a two-year suspended sentence for passing.

Burns appeared in court today and a complete pre-sentence report was studied by county court Judge Gerald F. Smith.

Previous to Monday's trial, Burns had been free on $1,000 bail.

CMHC Aid Asked On Sewer Project

TRENTON (Staff) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation funds to finance municipal projects are now in very short supply but Trenton needs such money for the pending Front Street sewer project.

"We have not lost the hope of having it financed by CMHC," said Mayor Duncan McDonald in a report to council Monday night.

He said that Quinte MPP, Dr. Richard Potter, has been advised of Trenton's position and is acting on the town's behalf.

Cost of the new sewer on Front Street from Bondhead to the Water Street pumping station would be about $100,000. Trenton is trying to negotiate a loan for about $50,000 of which a quarter would be forgivable.

If CMHC money is not available the project will be delayed until next year.

Counselling Centre Ready to Go

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The United Community Services and the Social Services Department of Hastings County have succeeded in planning and opening a wide-spectrum counselling centre for the city of Belleville.

The plan for the counselling centre started last summer when Isidore Cooperman, executive director of the United Community Services approached his board of directors for their permission to undertake the idea of community counselling.

Reginald Tucker, director of the social services, met with Mr. Cooperman to discuss ideas and to approach the provincial government for guidelines for the scheme.

"At this time," said Mr. Cooperman we were the only people working at a program of this kind and therefore there were no guidelines to be had. We found out that we can be supplied with monies from the Canada Welfare Assistance Act for counselling purposes."

For the past few years there has been no counselling available for persons above sixteen years. The family and children's services had originally provided this counselling but, with new legislation, it was curtailed.

By starting this counselling centre, "we are stepping into a void that no one else is handling," said Mr. Cooperman.

Counsellors and facilities are available right now to be put to work on the referrals of the social services department, "who we are now contracted to deal with for obtaining clients," said Mr. Cooperman.

"Because of growth and organizational problems," said John Adams member of the counselling committe, "we cannot, at this time offer the service to anyone other than the referral cases from the social services department."

Family counselling, budgeting, personal problems and group counselling will all be within the realm of the centre and "we will, when possible, be expanding our operation to accommodate referrals from other areas besides the social services," added Mr. Cooperman.

Elected president of the new organization is Douglas Boyle and his treasurer will be John Adams.

"The United Community Services," said Mr. Cooperman, "will remain in a supervisory role for the program until it gets on its feet and can be handled by a more competent, full-time staff."

Board members for the centre are Everett Fairman, Mrs. Vera Morphy and Alderman Jean Smith.

Twenty Eight Decorated

TRENTON (Staff) — In a special award ceremony here yesterday afternoon, 28 members of CFB Trenton's 424 Squadron received merit medals from the Government of Peru.

Five officers had received similar decorations in Ottawa in December, but Lieut.-Gen. John Walduck, Chief of Staff, Technical Services, in presenting the awards during proceedings in the Hangar said the further presentations mark further "tangible evidence of Peru's appreciation for the squadron's assistance in relief operations following the earthquake disaster there last July".

Lieut.-Gen. Wolduck was filling in for Vice-Chief of Defence Staff, Lieut.-Gen. M.R. Dare, who had been originally scheduled to distribute the Jorge Dartnell Medals. The general flew into the baseby executive jet. Head of the ceremony, returning to "Ottawa at its conclusion.

During his brief address, he referred to 424 Squadron's involvement in the South American relief job as "a hazardous and invaluable operation"...

'Bankrupt' Sales Concern Chamber

TRENTON (Staff) — The Chamber of Commerce here will consult town officials to investigate the possibility of clamping down on so-called bankrupcy sales.

Decision to seek control of close-out sales was prompted by a request from Larry Morse, head of the Chamber's retail branch.

"There have been four or five sales in Trenton in recent months, each 'well promoted' and offering substantial competition to other storekeepers.

Jack Wilson, the Chamber manager, said the board members last night that such sales are now controlled in Belleville to prevent irresponsible being shipped in to be sold in bankrupt stores. Items not part of the regular stock.

He suggested that a municipal representative could go over the inventory of the business and make sure that this material is sold and that the flow of other merchandize into the premises prevented.

"We have people coming in from out of town and operating these things . . . it is a racket," said Chamber director Bernard Blamire.

Concern was also expressed by directors that sale prices are often not reduced measurably from the usual ones and bankruptcy sales continues over far too long a period.

Dozen Teachers Sought by Board

Hastings county board of education is seeking nine elementary school teachers and three secondary school teachers for next year — the final score with all teacher resignations in by the final date of May 31.

A total of 1,183 teachers will be employed by the board when school reopens in September. No additional elementary school teachers will be hired — the board has sought only replacements for those who have resigned or retired.

An additional 28 secondary school teachers will be added to the staff next fall to handle increased enrolment in the secondary schools. Opening of the new Bayside Secondary School will account for many of the additional teachers.

This spring, the board appointed nine additional elementary school vice-principals for schools of 30 or more pupils. These are schools whose boards, before amalgamation in 1969, did not employ vice-principals in schools of 300 enrolment.

Injured in the mishap were two Montreal women, Anne Schecter, 70 and Bernice Levitt, 64.

Victoria Ahoy!

Constitutions . . . even the postal union people have been mulling over the subject in Calgary, and it has been, in the words of one observer at least — a CBC man — "pretty dry stuff."

We are always a little sorry for people who have to deal with this kind of thing. To be sure, it has to do with the ordering of a society, with the rights of individuals and so on, but in thrashing it all out it it a dehumanizing process. Like those all-night bargaining sessions involving unions, management and government (incidentally, which order should they go in . . . who is first in the pecking order these days?).

And of course where constitutions are concerned, in this part of the world, there is THE CONSTITUTION. Like when the subject is pills there is only THE PILL, if you will pardon the simile.

Again pretty dry stuff, like that article in The Globe and Mail recently by Maxwell Cohen, professor of law at McGill University. "The most urgent problem for Canadians," wrote Mr. Cohen, "continues to be the general quality of French-English relations along with the aspirations of French-speaking Quebec, federal-provincial positions on the issues of powers and revenues, and the resulting accommodations required for an effective federal system."

Readers may be pardoned if on reading this they stifle a yawn. It is evident that the forthcoming deliberations in Victoria will be the same old drag — but, admittedly, with the important difference this time that satisfactory accord must be reached lest we are to witness the beginning of the break-up of Confederation.

It is so important this time that Quebec Premier Bourassa has been having preliminary talks with Prime Minister Trudeau.

Still, as with the people who must write the fine print in contracts, insurance policies and all that sort of thing, we can think of more elevating pastimes. As the CBC man said, it is pretty dry stuff. Professor Cohen's article — it is entitled "Facing the Challenge of Constitutional Change" — bears this out. Consider this extract: ". . . There were hints therefore that Quebec would want some concessions here unless other provinces agreed to similar non-discriminatory provisions binding upon themselves.

"Hence the homework, done through individual visits by Justice Minister John Turner, officials of the Prime Minister's staff and of the Department of Justice. In preparation for the June meetings, had to meet the challenge of the acceptability of specific documents drafted to implement the various points agreed upon in February. Also Mr. Turner had to discuss with frankness both in Quebec and elsewhere what could be agreed upon as a promise for redistribution of powers in order to ensure Quebec's support for the patriation and amending formulas as well as the other matters more or less agreed to in February."

Well, if Canadians more or less understand all that, or if they have already read Professor Cohen's entire treatise, their fortitude is commendable.

Seriously though, these things, constitutions, contracts and the like, are the glue that make for an ordered society. Somebody has to put them together and, as in the case of the coming federal-provincial conference, amend them to better fit the circumstances of our day.

Seal of Approval

After that scholarly and well-bred treatise on hot pants and how the Commons staff should react when confronted by visitors wearing them — by the NDP's Arnold Peters — we think the final seal of approval should be given this interesting new offering of the fashion world.

Fashion has a way of making the scene whatever the opposition or sucking of disapproving teeth. Consequently there was the spectacle the other day, at the University of Western Ontario, of a young lady called Libby Stephens, riding her bicycle in happy mood and wearing regulation cap, gown . . . and slightly less regulation, but nonetheless natty, polka dot hot pants.

Miss Stephens' jaunty outfit seemed to go well with the fact that she had just graduated with a B.A. in French. And it only remains for us to wish her well — and hope that she gets a job.

Lake Erie Clean-up Would Cost $40 Billion

International Talks on Great Lakes Pollution

The Globe and Mail

For all of those who have watched with increasing dismay the growing pollution of the Great Lakes, it has been an encouraging week.

In Traverse City, Michigan, delegates from a wide range of Canadian and United States agencies examined in detail the impact of continued urban development along the shores of the Lakes. There was evidence that somebody more than moaning is to be heard in the land.

And in Washington and Ottawa, word leaked out that Canada and the United States may be nearing agreement on a new program to save the Great Lakes from choking on the human and industrial wastes that both countries have spewed into the entire basin. Nothing is official yet, but chances are that we will soon see a significant expansion of role of the International Joint Commission and some co-ordination of legislation and regulations among the two federal, nine provincial, eight state and countless municipal jurisdictions involved.

If the reports are correct, there is reason for optimism. But before anyone is carried away with enthusiasm, perhaps a pause is in order to consider some advice that Norman Pearson, chairman of the University of Guelph's Centre for Resources Development, is planning to give the annual meeting of the Canadian Audubon Society today.

"The plain fact is that we have over-committed the Great Lakes in terms of our present ways of development," says Mr. Pearson. "It has been established that the reversal and restoration of the degradation of Lake Erie would cost some $40-billion . . . yet there is no sign that such funds are committed . . . The United States had almed at a clean Lake Erie by 1972; in the spring of 1970 the U.S. federal Government stated that 78 of the 118 cities involved and 44 of the 138 industries had fallen behind schedule in the pollution control program."

He points out that while Canada has passed the Canada Water Act, designed to set up water quality management areas and to designate water courses in which there is a national interest, there has been no great example of implement the legislation.

"This," he says, "is a familiar pattern: in 1897 legislation was passed for the preservation of Lake Ontario salmon and now we do not have any. Indeed, all legislation has consistently prevented what it is manifestly happening. All pollution is illegal—some is more illegal than others."

He has a very comment on the politics of the situation: "It provides the finest political cinema that can be imagined; the great political monster, pollution, always present as a menace, always to be fought, never capable of being beaten, directly resulting from people doing exactly what they want and and precisely what they please, yet allowing them to collectively humble in the contemplation of their sinfulness."

But Mr. Pearson does not think the battle is lost. He puts forth an idea that authorities on both sides of the border would do well to consider—the creation of a Great Lakes Planning Authority that would be rooted in water management but would also have the statutory duty to produce a planning process for the Great Lakes basin.

It would operate much the way Ontario's Department of Municipal Affairs operates in relation to the various official plans of municipal governments. For instance, it would not really mind what Toronto did with its detailed planning, but would very much care about the main growth pattern, the water use and the land management around Toronto. In short, it would see to it that urban development, the source of the Great Lakes disaster, fits in some overall process.

It is an immense task and Mr. Pearson acknowledges the size and complexity of what he is proposing. But the basic principles already exist in such organizations as the Tennessee Valley Authority and our own Conservation Authorities. There is no denying the challenge. Nor the alternative.

Let Mr. Pearson have the last word: "If we persist in the abuse of these natural resources then we will first experience catastrophic situations (and it can be argued that we are already getting into that situation), then suffer a setback in our living conditions, then experience major disruptions of our civilization."

"Mr. Turner was right — it IS a young, vigorous country."

A Violent Society Is Nothing New

Ottawa Journal

Violence often seems a routine way of political debate. Consider these examples of the past week:

Abbey Dawn

Highway 2 Sanctuary for Sale

Kingston Whig Standard

Abbey Dawn, a 50-acre bird sanctuary on Highway 2, east of Kingston, has been closed to the public for a number of years. After Highway 401 was constructed attendance dwindled. The news that Abbey Dawn has been offered for sale is not surprising, yet for many people it will represent a finality difficult to accept.

Abbey Dawn, created by eminent Canadian poet Wallace Havelock Robb, was not a tourist attraction, although it attracted many travellers. It was the embodiment of one man's thoughts and feelings. The real importance of this peaceful sanctuary lay in what it had to offer the individual who visited it and strolled with Mr. Robb. At the "Cathedral of the Pines", for a brief moment, one could forget the hustle and bustle of twentieth century Canada and return to a time when the Indian walked the land and wildlife existed in abundance.

Mr. Robb's stories and poetry, the Indian artifacts, the Poets' Bell — all were part of the quiet charm of Abbey Dawn. To applaud Canadians these things may not seem very significant. For many people, but it is to be hoped that it can remain a Crown wildlife preserve. Even in this great country, quiet sanctuaries for man or wild creatures are too few.

Tale of Two Lakes

Public Opinion in Russia Saved Famed Lake Baikal

Editor,
The Editor.

"One Alive, One Dead," the two articles in Weekend magazine, left me feeling as helpless as an insect under the impending crush of a gigantic foot.

The people of the USSR who are directed and controlled in puppet fashion, whose minds from childhood are swamped by Communist doctrine about their "glorious revolution," progress through production and triumph over superstitious like God. HALTED the destruction of the great Lake Baikal by a massive uproar of dissent. They were coerced, cajoled and sometimes threatened by the State for their reaction to progress by production; still, they continued their protesting and won. The state backed down.

Canadians and Americans, who control their governments, are taught to think for themselves, have the freedom without fear of retribution to denounce or protest any and all things with which they disagree FAILED through apathy and carelessness, to halt the destruction of Lake Erie.

How much evidence do we need? How long will we maintain the "let-the-guy-do-it" attitude? How much of our natural environment will be destroyed before we take strong, forceful action by a roar of protest from all Canadians to our government representatives?

What man has destroyed, surely with the help of God, he can restore. I have never felt fear in this manner before. It's an awesome thing.

QC Blasts Tax Plans

Brockville Recorder and Times

While Canadians anxiously await Finance Minister Benson's budget, attacks on his White Paper on Tax Reform continue. It is a frightening act of repression which will eventually produce a downgrading of Canada's economic position in the world and limit the country's ability to compete. This is the opinion of one of the country's leading tax lawyers, H. Heward Sikeman, Q.C., who thinks Ontario has better ideas for tax reform than those of the federal government.

Chamber to Poll Merchants on Mall

TRENTON (Staff) — The Chamber of Commerce will begin polling Dundas West merchants shortly to see if they want the main business artery turned into a pedestrian shopping mall.

The specific proposal to be presented to merchants was approved at the regular chamber directors' meeting Tuesday. By the plan, an experimental mall would be established for three days during the town's annual sidewalk sale, July 29-31.

"We can spearhead this but there is no way we can put any money toward it," said chamber manager Jack Wilson.

Trenton's mall will be located on a two-block length of Dundas between Division and Front Streets and may well become, at least, a seasonal core area feature, if it is successful.

All indications show that merchants here are quite interested in the prospect, with councillor Pete Aziz acknowledging this in council Monday.

"It is clear we have to do something to compete with Quinte Mall," Wilson said.

The idea was raised in council by Paul Trigg Monday night that a mall may work in Trenton as it is now doing in Tofnoio. This comment prompted Mr. Aziz to reveal that merchants here were already giving such a scheme serious consideration.

If the town's merchant community opt for the plan, approval of council will be sought. One councillor says it is doubtful money could be made available to establish something of a permanent nature in the near future.

The chamber will also be seeking views of police and fire departments as well as the parking authority to iron out the mechanics of setting up the mall.

With the new Post Office development complex and a pending large expansion to the Woolworth's store, the pedestrian mall concept is seen by downtown area.

Safari for Charity

Ronald MacDonald is off on a 25-day trip to Africa to present a Zambian leper colony with a $10,000 cheque from the Kinsmen of district six. The Picton Kinsmen Club president won the honor of representing Kinsmen Clubs from the district on the tour of 23 African clubs, including those of Zambia and Umtali, two points he is checking on the map.

MacDonald to Africa With $10,000 Cheque

PITTON (Staff) — President of the Picton Kinsmen Club, Ronald (Mac) MacDonald, will go on safari in Africa, June 17, armed with a $10,000 cheque for presentation to a leper colony in Zambia. Mr. MacDonald, in charge of the shipping department at the Procter-Lovejoy Division of SCM (Canada) Ltd., won this 25-day all-expenses paid trip last weekend during a Kin convention in Brockville.

Support of the St. Francis leper colony has become the special project of Kinsmen clubs in district six, extending from Campbellford to Quebec City. This program involves more than 1,000 Kinsmen and was initiated by Harry Moll, a Montreal resident, who is a past national president of the club. Mr. Moll visited the Zambia leper colony on two occasions and advanced its support as a possible project for Kinsmen clubs in district six. The response was enthusiastic and Kinsmen have staged numerous fund - raising events to obtain the needed money.

When Kinsmen from district six met in Brockville last weekend, an elimination draw determined which club would present the $10,000 cheque. To select a representative from the winning Picton Club, a second draw was held. All members of two years' standing in the Picton club were eligible in this final draw. Mr. MacDonald, a surprised winner, recalled, "I couldn't say a word, it was quite a shock."

He will be the guest during his trip by Round Table, Central Africa's various clubs and will attend its general annual meeting July 2 to 5 at Umtali, Rhodesia. While in Africa Mr. MacDonald will visit 23 other service clubs. He will be accompanied by his wife, Marilyn a Prince Edward County school teacher.

30,000 Legal Ontario Lotteries Are Too Many For Wishart

TORONTO (CP) — Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and commercial affairs, said Tuesday he is seriously thinking of curbing the proliferation of lotteries in Ontario.

Last year there were about 30,000 lotteries, including bingo, licensed in the province. Those with prizes up to $3,500 are licensed by municipalities, the rest by the province. Legislation provides that the money is to go to religious or charitable organizations.

Mr. Wishart told the legislature some lotteries are trespassing on provincial government responsibilities by benefitting such things as education.

Opposition leader Robert Nixon asked whether the province would create a single province-wide lottery such as that run by the Quebec government.

The minister said he favors neither a government-run lottery nor province-wide lotteries run by service clubs.

Outside the house, he said the government has been "generous" in interpreting the lottery law so far. But he sees a tendency for lotteries to proliferate to the point where the government may need to change its policy and restrict the scope of licensing.

He would not answer directly when asked whether such groups as the Art Gallery of Ontario might lose their lottery licences.

Mr. Wishart indicated he is not worried that criminals might infiltrate lotteries but he is concerned that some people might make money out of them, either from the take or from advertising.

He said he will discuss lotteries with the cabinet.

In other business:

—John Yaremko, provincial secretary and minister of citizenship, criticized Prime Minister Trudeau for "giving respectability" to communism on his recent tour of Russia. He said Mr. Trudeau had made certain comments that "will equate Canadian democracy" with the system of government in Russia and its satellite countries.

Opposition members jumped to their feet to protest Mr. Yaremko's statements, which were finally ruled out of order by Speaker Fred Cass.

—Allan Grossman, minister of trade and development, said the federal government appears to be encouraging a merger between de Havilland Aircraft and Canadair of Montreal;

—Premier Davis was accused of trying to destroy the Niagara leader of the Ontario New Democratic party, who questioned him about 27 permits to quarrying companies;

—Premier Davis, in reply to a question from Fred Young (NDP—Toronto Yorkview), said he had no intention of asking Ford of Canada to open its books to justify an increase of from $200 to $500 in list prices for minimum-equipped cars.

U.S. General Charged with Murder in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army said today charges have been preferred against Brig.-Gen. John W. Donaldson, accusing him of murder and assault involving eight Vietnamese civilians.

The Associated Press learned a formal announcement was due within a few hours at Fort Meade, Md., where Donaldson now is assigned.

Donaldson, until recently a top planner for the joint chiefs of staff, is the highest ranking officer accused of killing civilians in the Vietnam war.

The 47-year-old West Point graduate also is the first U.S. general charged with a war crime since the Philippine insurrection 70 years ago.

The army said the incidents on which the charges are based took place between November, 1968, and January, 1969, in Quang Ngai province, where the My Lai massacre occurred the previous March.

Donaldson, then a colonel, commanded the 11th Infantry Brigade, which included Lieut. William Calley's platoon at the time of the My Lai massacre. However, Donaldson did not take over the brigade until October, 1968, more than six months after My Lai. Calley has been sentenced to a life term for murdering civilians at My Lai.

No details of the Donaldson case were provided, but sources said an investigation was started after statements were made by a helicopter pilot attached to the 11th Brigade during the period.

Lt.-Gen. Claire Hutchin, commanding general of the 1st Army with headquarters at Fort Meade, has not yet announced what course he will follow. Army officials said Hotchin could dismiss the charges or order a grand jury-type proceeding to carry the case further.

It Seems, They All Want Sex

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: The reason I am not married, at 30, is because the men I have met will invite you out for a hamburg and coke but they all want sex. You have to fight them to be decent. I am not a cheap tramp.

Are there any men left who can respect a girl like me? And care enough to wait until after marriage for sex? — Confused

Dear Confused: Indeed there are. Fine young men who respect their own bodies and have the discipline to wait for the physical satisfactions of love in marriage.

Granted, you need a magnifying glass to find one. But the search is worth it.

Dear Doris: The girls want to give my daughter a shower but really, she doesn't need a thing. She has already had three showers and I am concerned about people spending any more money on her. She says it would just be embarrassing. — D. Never Rains But It Pours

Dear Pours: A heavy shower of showers means donors may be blooded again and again. Not many pocketbooks can stand the strain.

Here are some ideas for low - cost showers:

1. Pantry Shower contributing staples for the kitchen, each to be under a dollar.

2. A paper shower — with everything under a dollar.

3. A favorite recipe shower. Every guest brings her own, nicely typed out, and the group pools dimes or quarters to buy a recipe filing box.

4. A shower of household hints, each one typed out.

5. A girl promise of time, to be allocated to help with a party or drape hanging or reception in the new home.

If the family wants to do something, let them give a party; never a shower.

* * *

Confidential to Senior Lodger: Glad you have found a pleasant place to live. I hope it helps when you sound off to me about your crosspatch husband! A man who has never been easy to live with can become simply impossible in old age.

What were the mutual interests which drew you together in the first place? Try to meet his grumbling with a smile. Even the most confirmed grouch can't hold out indefinitely against a perpetually cheerful companion.

* * *

Confidential to J.A.: There is too much I don't know about you, like your age and his, what your disagreement was, why the welfare workers think your marriage won't work. And you have given me no name or address to reply to.

Marriage takes unselfish cooperation, kindness, a reliable working together. And a love based on something more than physical attraction. If you and he show signs of even understanding these things, it might be worth trying again.

* * *

Try turning your trouble into triumph by getting help from a trained social worker. Doris can put you on the right track.

A WOMEN'S NEED

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A Vanderbilt University psychiatrist says "women have a wish, or a need, to be held." Dr. Marc Hollender told the Dallas Southern Clinical Society, "some women will barter sex interest for the purpose of being held." Men, he said, don't feel the cuddling urge quite as strongly and usually interpret such advances as a desire for sex.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

BY MARY BRYSON

Set aside a drawer or a shelf in several rooms of the house for your preschooler's possessions. He soon will learn that "these things are for Johnny; these other things belong to Mommy or Daddy." His own low shelf of books will help him resist pulling books off the adult library shelves; his own supply of dishes will keep him out of Mother's kitchen cabinet; his own paper and pencil will be as enchanting as are the contents of Mother's desk.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. Donald DeMille, RR 5, Belleville announce the forthcoming marriage of their only daughter Linda Lee, to Peter Frank Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ruman, Belleville. Marriage will take place Thursday, July 1, 1971 at 2 p.m. in Westminster United Church, Wallbridge Road.

WEDDING

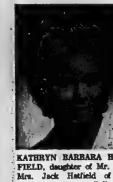
BROUSSEAU — FULTZ

Ola Fultz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Fultz of Belleville became the bride of Harry Brousseau, son of Mrs. E. Brousseau of Serpent River, at a ceremony held on May 22 in Our Lady of the Highway Church, in Cutler, Ont. Father McHugh officiated while Maureen Dumas provided the music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore the traditional long white gown. It was empire styled with a stand-up collar and three-quarter length sleeves. The train flowed from the bride's waist. Her bouquet consisted of white daisies, pink stephanotis, carnations and yellow mums.



Maid of honor, Linda Groves wore a pale yellow floor length dress. She wore a white floppy hat and carried a bouquet of daisies, carnations and mums. The bridesmaids Sharon Ravignat and Linda Dobinson wore identical mauve empire styled dresses. Their hats were floppy with mauve scarves around the tops.

John Brousseau attended the bridegroom while the ushers were Ernie Spencer and Stan Johnson.

The reception was held in the Lion's Club Hall, Serpent River where the guests were greeted by the bride's mother wearing a light green and silver dress with a corsage of mums and carnations. The bridegroom's mother wearing a green dress and matching accessories and a corsage of mums and carnations, assisted the bride's mother.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a moss green pantsuit with a knee-length vest, pink blouse and white floppy hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Brousseau will reside at 428 Struthers Street, Sudbury.

KATHRYN BARBARA HATFIELD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hatfield of 17 Woodland Acres, Belleville graduated from the University of Waterloo with a Bachelor of Arts degree in the convocation took place on May 28. Miss Hatfield is a former graduate of Moira Secondary School.

Ann Landers

There Is No Operation Completely Risk-free

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back you were comforting a flat-chested girl by telling her to "fill with cotton what God has forgotten." Why blame God? It's the genes that have it — or don't have it —and this means parents.

I'm glad you told the girl to stay away from silicone shots. My buddy's girl friend tried those shots and ended up in the hospital with floating tumors. I'll get to the point of this letter because I know you are busy. I'm going with a girl who is very attractive but she is built like a nine-year-old boy. She has heard about the breast implant operation and wants to have it done. Is it dangerous? Does it work? How much does it cost? If you say O.K. I will give her the operation for a birthday present. Please advise. — MICKEY.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MICKEY: No operation is completely risk-free. Generally speaking, however, the breast implant operation is not dangerous. It does "work" and it costs anywhere from $500 up — depending on the doctor. This procedure is done by plastic surgeons almost everywhere.

A word of caution to flat-chested girls who believe a blouse full of goodies will suddenly change your lives: It won't. Any guy who would look at you with renewed interest because of a new front porch isn't worth bothering with. P.S.: Do not write to me for the names of plastic surgeons. Ask your family doctor.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am an American who lives in Madrid. I read your column in Stars and Stripes. Since people write to you about whatever is bothering them I decided to do the same.

Recently I read where the Supreme Court had ruled that a man may not be imprisoned because he is too poor to pay a fine. I think this ruling is bad and I will tell you why.

Thirteen years ago when I was in Hawaii, I was informed that my 23-year-old son who was then living in Los Angeles, was in jail for some "minor" offenses which included 30 unpaid parking tickets. When he was halted for ignoring a stop sign, he had no registration for his car.

I paced the floor for several hours trying to decide what to do. I realized if I didn't come up with the ball, my son would have to sit in jail for 20 days, which would ruin his college semester, I knew, too, if I did bail him out he might never learn to respect the law. I had to decide which was more important. Finally I phoned my family in L.A. and told them to let him sit in jail. It was the most difficult thing I have ever had to do. But I'm sure that decision changed his life. My son is now a successful, upstanding citizen and a wonderful person. When people know they have to pay for their mistakes they are inclined to behave in a more responsible manner. — MADELENE.

* * *

DEAR MADELENE: I agree — but this is not what the Supreme Court ruling is all about. The ruling was designed to protect the family man from sitting in jail awaiting trial for a minor offense because he can't afford bail. The kid with a record of 30 unpaid tickets is a different kettle of fish.

I applaud your courage but your criticism against the court ruling is unjustified.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM GOODY

Goody — Rae

Judith Florence Rae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hills became the bride of William Roy Goody, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Goody of Marmora at a ceremony held in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville. Rev. H. M. Davis was the officiating clergyman while Alec Gordon provided organ music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father Gordon Hills, the bride wore a full-length empire style gown of white taffeta. The bodice including the bracelet length sleeves was composed of lace and seed pearls. Seed pearls adorned the A-line skirt and formed the mantilla head piece which held in place the finger tip veil flowing into a full-length cathedral train. The bouquet was a cascade of gardenia and lily of the valley interspersed with asparagus fern designed by the bride herself.

Miss Debbie Bambrough, the bride's cousin who was maid of honor wore a floor-length A-line gown of yellow chiffon over taffeta accented with orange roses and green leaves. She wore a matching yellow headpiece and shoulder-length veil. Her bouquet was a full cascade of Woburn Abbey sweetheart roses with three large yellow roses in the centre.

Dressed identically to the maid of honor but in green were the bridesmaids Miss Brenda Jackson, the bride's cousin and Miss Elizabeth Rae, the bridegroom's sister. They carried cascade bouquets of miniature yellow carnations, orange roses and a green cymbidium orchid in the centre. The train bearer was Brendon Hilks.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother Patrick John Goody as best man. The ushers were Jeff Rae, the bride's brother and Rick McInroy.

At the reception held at Club Caesars guests were greeted by the bride's mother whose coat and dress ensemble of pink crêpelene was accented with a pink and white checkerboard design at the neckline and waist. She wore pink shoes, a white hat and purse and a corsage of white gardenia and lily of the valley.

She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore an aqua dress and coat ensemble trimmed in white. Her accessories were white and her corsage was of white gardenia and lily of the valley.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride donned a going away outfit consisting of a multi-colored flowered dress over white pants. She wore white accessories and carried part of her bridal bouquet which could be detached. Upon return the newly married couple will live in Madoc.

MISS BRENDA ETHIER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ethier, Point Anne graduated from Queen's University with a BA degree (French and psychology). Miss Ethier plans to continue her studies at the University of Guelph to obtain an honors degree and later to attend Alhouse College of Education in London. Miss Ethier was an Ontario scholar on graduation from Moira Secondary School, Belleville.

Church Groups

STOCO C.W.I.

The May meeting of the Catholic Women's League, of Stoco, was held recently at the home of Mrs. Frank Genere. The financial report was read by Mrs. Lou Vandervoy and it showed a very successful year.

The membership fees are to be collected in June and members are to hand them in as soon as possible.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Patrick Molloy and Mrs. Paul Healey, who gave an interesting talk on the care of foster children. They then answered questions from the audience. There were many questions asked and a great deal was learned about this subject.

A vote of thanks was given the two ladies by Mrs. Vandervoy.

SOCIAL

Prior to her recent marriage Mrs. William Goody (nee Judith Rae) was honored at a shower given by members of her family with Miss Debbie Bambrough as hostess. Another shower was given by her co-workers at Templer Flower Shop.

Sweet and Sour Recipe Popular for Meat

By MARY MOORE

You would be surprised at the number of requests we receive for sweet and sour recipes for meats. We echo the releases out by the dozen.

But what about sweet and sour beef? The Europeans are expert at that so we have borrowed their idea and made Sweet and Sour Pot Roast. The beef is tender but the gravy is the feature of this dish — rich dark brown and zesty. To make the whole operation easier for you I cooked mine in the oven.

SWEET AND SOUR POT ROAST

4 or 5 lb. pot roast (see note for cuts to buy)
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. thyme
¼ tsp. pepper
1 cup chopped onion
½ cup beef bouillon (b o t tled)
2-3 tsp vinegar
2-3 tsp honey
1¼ cups water
2 tbsps. flour

NOTE: Cuts to buy: Cross rib, chuck rib, blade or round bone shoulder.

Place the meat in a medium - sized roasting pan. Mix together the salt, thyme and pepper and rub into the cut surfaces. Turn roast to side where there is some fat. (If necessary add 1 tbsp. fat to pan). Sear it over high heat until dark brown, then keep turning until all sides are seared and dark brown. This takes about 15 min. Mix together onion, bouillon, vinegar and honey and pour over meat. Put on lid and transfer to preheated oven of 275 deg. Fahr. for 3 hrs., turning over and basting roast every hour.

Transfer roast to preheated platter.

You will have a little more than 1 cup pan gravy. Tip it into a saucepan using a rubber scraper to remove all. Using rotary beater make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Stir into pan gravy over heat until thick. Pour into preheated gravy boat.

When the host carves the pot roast he should spoon some of this rich sweet and sour gravy over each serving. The knowing hostess will realize that fluffy moist mashed potatoes are the ideal accompaniment. Second choice would be unbuttered noodles.

This dish will be a natural for the male cooks in this audience for it is a he-man's dish.

A European Favorite

Rich sweet and sour brown gravy is the feature attraction of Mary Moore's pot roast today. The male cooks in this audience will enjoy making this he-man dish.

Store packaged meats such as beef, pork, chicken and veal, are also on Freshness Code Dating. The actual date the meat is packaged in the store is printed clearly on the price label, i.e. May 26.

FOOD CITY CODE DATING

All processed meats such as wieners, bacon and sliced cooked meats are dated, according to the recommended Code of Practice for product dating of the Meat Packers Council of Canada. The code date shows the month and the day of the month. This allows you to always select the freshest product in the meat counter. For example, two packages of wieners are coded 0323 and 0525, the 3 represents the fifth month (MAY) and the second number the date. So in this case, the package with the 0323 code is the freshest.

Oblivious to the quiet Trent River fishing scene behind him, Rossmore hydroplane enthusiast Denny Hogue prepares his A Stock boat for a test run. Hogue will be one of 75 drivers entered in Sunday afternoon's fourth annual hydroplane racing program off the west shore of Belleville's Victoria Park.

Imagine squeezing 60 miles an hour out of your little two-horse trawling outboard, and you've got some idea what Denny Hogue does for fun.

Hogue, a Rossmore mechanic who turns his motor-tinkering talents to outboard motors each summer, will be one of about 75 entrants in this Sunday's fourth annual Victoria Day races staged off the west bank of Belleville's Victoria Park.

Victoria Day?

"Well, we hadn't really planned to have our race this year," explains Quinte Hydroplane Racing Club organizer Bill Bolter, "but we got this letter . . ."

The correspondence that ensured the fourth annual harbor hydroplane race was from a Toronto film company commissioned by the Ontario Department of Tourism and Information to produce some province - promoting footage.

"They wanted to come down and film our boat race, so we decided it would be a good idea for the city if we had one after all," mused Boulter. "We hope everyone turns out Sunday — they could appear in the film. I understand it's going to be shown at Ontario Place."

Most of the time however, the cameras will be trained on the mile and two-thirds oval harbor course over which seven classes of boats will churn their three-lap heats.

As in the previous three meets, there will be some area entries to give local spectators something to root for. Wellington veteran Doug Thompson, who was making inroads on the provincial snowmobile racing circuit this winter, will be driving boat 42 in the grand-daddy of the afternoon's events, the powerful "B Alky" class in which speeds of 80 miles - per - hour and up are not unusual.

Belleville's Tom Boulter, son of race organizer Bill, will be racing his RC5 in B Stock, the class in which he was rated second in the country in 1970 Canadian Boating Federation standings. Boulter pit crew hand John Royle will make his driving debut in C Stock Hydro in Sunday's racing program, which gets underway around 1:30 dff Victoria Park.

Rossmore's Denny Hogue hopes stepping down into A Stock will give him more results in proportion to the amount of time he can afford to put into his racing sideline.

"I ran C Stock in my first year three summers ago and finished second highest in points in Canada," Hogue recalls. "But that was my best year. I went from C Stock to B Alky, but you just have to spend too much time on keeping those things in tune.

"My A Stock is basically a ten-horse fishing engine, and you're not allowed to modify them at all. The record is only about 60 miles an hour, but the good part about "A" is that there are a lot of entries, and the competition is closer than in some of the higher classes."

Hogue had another good reason to stay with the A Stock rig he first tried out near the end of last season.

"I went down to North Tonawanda and won a trophy about that high," he levelled his palm about three feet off the ground. "I won my first heat. But in the second, I was running first when a gust of wind caught me and knocked me about 20 feet out of my boat.

"I climbed back in, got her started, and went over to the starter to see if I could keep going. He said I could and I still finished high enough to place third over-all."

Gregory Wasn't Always A Racing Fan

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Gregory Short wasn't a motorcycle racing fan until last summer. But then there's nothing unusual about a nine-year - old having better things to do than watch a bunch of guys chase each others in circles.

The problem is, Gregory doesn't have too many better things to do, not since Muscular Dystrophy confined him to a wheelchair.

Gregory was a guest of honor at last year's third annual Muscular Dystrophy Benefit Races at the Belleville Fairgrounds, a joint project of city firefighters and the Pinion Pushers Motorcycle Club. And he says he'll also be at the fourth annual race, scheduled for Sunday, June 13.

The bespectacled Belleville tyke, slightly on the pudgy side from not enjoying the hectic life that most nine-year-old boys lead, is one of 30,000 Muscular Dystrophy patients in Canada.

Fighting MD is the favorite fund - raising pastime of Canadian firemen, who donate 67 cents out of every dollar contributed to that cause. Belleville's firefighters, representing only one of 600 fire departments across the country, raised $3,000 in their first three motorcycle benefit programs, which they prefer over tag - day or ticket-selling formats.

Through the races, the firemen feel, the public gets something tangible in return for their donation, over and above the chance to fight a child - crippling disease. What the Belleville public has been getting for the past three years is one of the most exciting exhibitions of motorcycle dirt-track racing staged anywhere in the country.

This year's Fairgrounds program of junior and expert 250 and 500 cc heats, again staged with the co-operation of the Pinion Pushers Motorcycle Club, will attract the usual array of Canadian motorcycle racing talent.

Anticipated entries include Hamilton's Maurice "Moe" Fraser, who last year won the coveted Number One plate thanks to performances on the Belleville track.

Fraser is also expected to run his Triumph at the two other race programs on the Belleville calendar this summer: the 11th annual Ontario Championships Sunday, July 4; and the fourth Belleville edition of the National Dirt-track Championships Sunday, September 12.

Osborne Plays Right Cards

Ken Osborne was playing his Cards right last night as the Union Carbide hurler fired a two hitter to lead his team to a 17-6 Industrial Softball win.

The Union Carbide ace handcuffed V. L. Card Construction, allowing only singles by Genereaux and Aikman while striking out seven batters and walking only one.

The winners counted 11 times in the sixth inning after building up a 6-0 lead over the opening five frames. Sharpe and Snell gave up 11 hits for the losers, walking four and fanning five batters.

Wayne Brown jr. crashed a homer and double for Union Carbide while Zolkowitz also had a circuit blast. Junior Day, Osborne, Ron Marshall and Garnet Bird all had a pair of hits for the winners.

AOCO recorded their initial win of the season by stopping the Post Office 8-3.

Genereaux fanned the first three innings for AOCO before leaving the game with an injured ankle. Bells took over for the remainder of the game as the pair combined for a four - hitter. They sent 29 opposing batsmen down swinging and struck out eight.

Sagniff had three hits to pace AOCO.

Kinsmen Track Club, dubbed the Galloping Grapes, because of bright purple uniforms appears to be there. A total of close to 70 competitors signed up for last year's program.

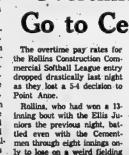
Sponsorship doesn't appear to be a problem either. The Belleville Kinsmen Club has backed the operation for the past two years and according to one official, "we haven't approached them yet about this year, but I think that they're pretty satisfied with the venture and I think that they'll give us a hand again this year."

What the team does need are qualified adults to help with the coaching duties. Last year's coach Gord Smith has indicated that he won't have the time to devote to the club, as he has done in the past three years, and so a successor will be required to head the program.

The Kinsmen competed in eight meets last season and should participate in about the same number this season. There has also been some talk about similar clubs being organized in Kingston and Napanee with the possibility of a number of tri-club meets being held.

The team has participated in a total of 20 meets in the past two seasons under the Kinsmen banner and has produced three provincial champions.

All people interested in helping with the 1971 program are asked to attend a special meeting Thursday night at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street.



Bob Milne, special co-ordinator for the track and field program of eastern Ontario will be on hand for the meeting, which is slated to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Overtime Wages Go to Cementmen

The overtime pay rates for the Rollins Construction Commercial Softball League entry dropped drastically last night as they lost a 5-4 decision to Point Anne.

Rollins, who had won a 13-inning bout with the Ellis Juniors the previous night, battled even with the Cementmen through eight innings only to lose on a weird fielding play in the ninth.

WAYNE McTAGGART

With Bruce Sickle on base as a result of an infield error Point Anne catcher Doug Olsen attempted a sacrifice bunt. First baseman Jerry Hill of Rollins, thinking that the ball was in foul territory then kicked it under the players bench in an attempt to keep it from rolling back onto the playing field.

It was ruled, however that Hill had touched the ball in fair territory and Sickle was able to race home with the winning run on the miscue.

Trailing 4-2 in the final inning of regulation play Rollins had come up with a clutch rally to send the game into extra frames.

Singles by Chuck Rowbotham and Steve Ling put two runners on base and third baseman Wayne McTaggart chased both home with a key base hit.

Earlier in the contest McTaggart had slugged a tremendous home run shot over the fence in centre field.

Jamie Hunter went the full distance to record the win for Point Anne. He allowed 11 hits and walked only one man, while fanning four batters.

The loss went to Scott Reid, despite his four-hit batting over the nine innings that he pitched. He retired 11 batters on strikes and issued five free passes.

McTaggart was the top Rollins batter with a homer and double, while shortstop Paul Goodfellow drilled three singles. Olsen led the Cementmen with a double and single followed by Eric Maher and Rick Rokebush, each with a single.

Larry Marshall, who saw a fine pitching performance go down the drain in an opening 1-0 loss last Tuesday to the Juniors' Ted Waite, turned the tables on Quinte Hotel's Pat Scollard last night.

The Howard and Robert righthander threw a nifty one-hitter at Quinte to give his team a 2-0 victory. Marshall walked only one batter and recorded one strikeout.

Scollard took the loss despite a strong four-hit performance in which he issued one walk and struck out two batters.

A hit batter, Pug Keller's double, an RBI single by Lorne Blatchford and a bases loaded walk to Marshall in the bottom of the second accounted for the game's only runs.

Rick Denard was the only Quinte batter to solve Marshall's deliveries poking a fourth-inning single. Keller, Blatchford, Rusty Garvin and Larry Potter hit safely for Howard and Robert.

Pittsburgh Mound Staff Real Pirates

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pittsburgh's swashbuckling pitchers have been leaving their mark on National League hitters . . . the Mark of Zero.

"It's quite a feat," boasted Pittsburgh interim manager Bill Virdon, referring to three straight shutouts and 30 consecutive scoreless innings by the Pirates' new-found strong arm staff.

It is quite a feat—for Pittsburgh. Before Dock Ellis silenced St. Louis Cardinals 9-0 on three hits Tuesday night, the last time the Pirates put three shutouts together was in 1950 with Ron Kline, Vernon Law and Bob Friend.

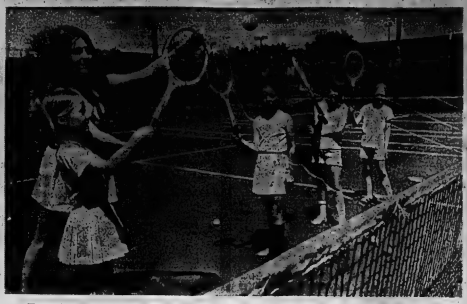
Before Ellis, Bob Moose and Steve Blass spun consecutive shutouts over Chicago Cubs.

Houston Astros nipped Atlanta Braves 7-6, Montreal Expos downed Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2 and New York Mets beat San Francisco Giants 5-4 in the league's other games Tuesday.

Ellis didn't overpower the hot Cardinals as he ended their seven-game winning streak.

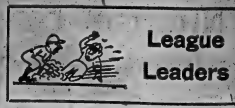
"You don't have to strike out anybody to win in this game," said Ellis, who struck out four as he won his seventh game in 10 decisions. "I'm relying more on the slider and starting to use a sinker even more."

The sinker and the curve were low Tuesday night and the Cardinals kept battering the ball into the ground.



Actually, it was all over in the first inning when Pittsburgh shelled the Cardinals' Chris Zachary from the hill with five runs.

Cesar Cedeno and Jesus Alou each got four hits and knocked in three runs apiece to pace Houston over struggling Atlanta, which lost its 11th in 13 games.



Cedeno increased his average 20 points to .316 with the three-hit night. It was his second hot game in a row. He was 3-for-4 against Cincinnati Reds Monday.

A throwing error by third baseman Bobby Valentine permitted Montreal to score two unearned runs in a three-run second inning and the Expos made them stand up for their victory over Los Angeles that snapped a six-game spin.

Dodgers' Willie Davis continued his hot streak, batting safely in his 20th straight game with a fifth-inning single.

Blue Mows Yanks For Win No. 11

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Elliot Maddox delivered a pinch-hit single in the sixth inning, then crashed a three-run homer in the bottom of the seventh that provided Washington Senators with a 6-5 victory over California Angels Tuesday night in an American League game delayed 32 minutes by a power failure.

Elsewhere, Oakland Athletics' Vida Blue won his 11th game, beating New York Yankees 5-2, Kansas City Royals downed Boston Red Sox 4-2, Minnesota Twins trimmed Detroit Tigers 3-1 and Milwaukee Brewers defeated Cleveland Indians 5-0. Baltimore Orioles and Chicago White Sox had the day off.

Maddox, one of the bodies involved in the Denny McLain trade last winter, was on the bench strictly on merit. He had just a dozen hits all year before Tuesday night. The homer was his first of the year, increased his RBI total to eight and lifted his batting average to .177.

The Senators were leading 3-2 when half of the lights went out in Washington's Robert F. Kennedy Stadium while California was batting in the top of the seventh.

Blue retired 17 consecutive New York batters and moved down the Yankees to run his season's record to 11-2. After the Yanks nicked him for a run in the first, he didn't allow another base runner until the seventh.

In between, Reggie Jackson ripped a two-run homer. Blue struck out six, increasing his total to 106 for 112 1-3 innings.

Kansas City tagged Boston with its third straight defeat and cut the Red Sox' first place edge in the American League East to one game over idle Baltimore.

NHL Intra-League Ante Increased to $40,000

MONTREAL (CP) — While president Clarence Campbell admits there is plenty of important business to be conducted throughout next week's National Hockey League annual meeting here, he says it's likely one of the busiest sessions will be Monday to Thursday affair will be on the final day.

That's the day of the amateur draft when the 14 NHL clubs draw from this year's pool of 8,869 eligible amateurs in an effort to find potential super-stars that never come their way through the normal channels of the league's intra - league draft.

This year, each club may protect 18 players, plus two goaltenders, when the teams take part in the internal exercise next Tuesday for the new $40,000 asking price—up $10,000 from previous years.

And with the 18-2 limit in effect, and exemptions granted to each club to protect first - year professionals, Campbell feels the trend of future drafts will turn to the amateur aspect.

"You'll find the amateur draft getting bigger all the time," Campbell said Tuesday. "This year said be the biggest in history, and I feel it will continue to dominate for the next few years."

The professional clubs pay $3,000 for each youngster picked — players who attain their 20th birthdays in 1971—and contribute another $3,000 when the player signs a professional contract. An additional $4,000 is paid if the selectee plays 25 or more regular season or playoff games in the NHL next season.

The possible $10,000 fee is paid by the NHL to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. Last year saw the 14 clubs pick 115 players—a record—with 90 turning pro and 11 of them drawing the maximum $10,000 stipend for the CAHA.

The order of selection among the NHL clubs in the amateur draft is conducted in the inverse over-all order of points earned in the 1970-71 schedule, rather than final standings in each division.

However, previous deals by some of the weaker clubs whereby they relinquished their amateur picks for immediate help still leave the stronger organizations in the driver's seat.

Montreal Canadiens for example, own the first choice of California Golden Seals and the seventh first-round pick by Minnesota North Stars as well as their regular 11th-place choice. Boston Bruins, New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers each have two picks in the first round.

In addition to the all-important intra-league and amateur drafts, two others are scheduled.

The inter-league draft takes place Monday, when the NHL teams draw on the American and Western Hockey League teams for talent at the price of $30,000 for each player drafted.

Wednesday features a reverse draft when the AHL and WHL may pick up players from the major league at a cost of $15,000 in the first phase and $7,500 in the second.

While Campbell will be preoccupied much of the time with the various player drafts, there appears to be plenty of other business to be taken care of during the meetings.

Probably one of the most contentious issues the governors must deal with will be appeals by Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins against disciplinary fines levied by Campbell against each club.

Both clubs were hit by fines after their players left the benches in two separate incidents to take part in general on-ice melees. The Leafs are appealing a $5,000 assessment, while the Bruins object to the $1,000 fine assessed by Campbell.

In a similar vein, the rules committee will be asked to consider a proposal that will put further teeth into existing regulations aimed halting such behavior.

It is proposed to retain the rule that a bench minor penalty be assessed against the team that first clears its bench to engage in an on-ice fight. But in addition, the league president hopes to add former measures.

"It will be proposed that the first identifiable player who leaves the bench to engage in such a brawl will be given a game-misconduct penalty," Campbell said. "Further, any additional players who leave the bench and incur a minor or a major penalty as a result, would also be subject to a game-misconduct penalty."

A game misconduct penalty carries an automatic $100 fine, with the league president empowered to take further disciplinary action.

Riders Get Lion Receiver in Return for Washington

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Canadian Football League star Vic Washington, a pass receiver last year with British Columbia Lions, plans to sign a contract today with San Francisco 49ers, the National Football League team announced Tuesday.

Washington, a five-foot-eleven, 190-pounder who played for the University of Wyoming, became eligible to move to the NFL when his CFL contract expired Tuesday. He agreed to terms, which were not disclosed, by telephone, the 49ers said.

Provost Opens Comeback Door

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Provost, who retired from hockey last year after 15 seasons with the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens, said Tuesday he would like to play in the NHL next season.

The 37-year-old right winger said that he is "still in good shape" and he "really missed the game last year."

Provost's desire to play means that he could be claimed from Canadiens roster in the intra-league draft at the NHL meetings here next week.

"Now if some club thinks I can help and the offer is good enough, I'll sure think about it, Provost said in an interview. Of course, I'd like a job in the Montreal organization. There's no way the Canadiens have room for me as a player, though, and I won't play in the minors."

Provost was waived out of the NHL last fall after he said he would not play anywhere else. He signed a contract as an assistant coach with Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League, but the contract stipulated that he play for the team as well as coach.

CLAUDE PROVOST

He did not want to play hockey in the minor leagues and retired.

Howe Behind Wing Bosses

OSHAWA (CP) — Gordie Howe will be behind Detroit Red Wings' management 100 per cent when he returns to play for the National Hockey League next season.

Howe confirmed he will enter his 20th season with Detroit, at a sports celebrities dinner here Monday night.

Up until then, there was speculation Howe would retire because of problems with his arthritic left wrist and a shakeup last season in the club's management in which Howe's former team-mate, Sid Abel, was replaced as general manager by rookie coach Ned Harkness. Doug Barkley replaced Harkness as coach.

Detroit dropped to the bottom of the NHL's East Division last season after a third-place finish the previous year.

"Sid Abel is a friend of mine and I like him very much, but he was too lenient," Howe said. "He didn't like to cut guys.

"He would send them a letter or get someone else to tell players that they had been cut. And he had a tendency to hang on to guys who had played for him for a long time, instead of cutting them.

GORDIE HOWE

"Our trouble was that there were two factions running the team. The two sides couldn't continue to exist. One had to go and . . . it didn't necessarily matter which one."

New Flyers' Coach Minor League Whiz

PHILADELPHIA (CP-AP) — Fred Shero, whose teams have won championships in minor pro leagues the last three years, is expected to be named coach of Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League at noon today.

The 46-year-old Winnipeg native had been mentioned prominently as Vic Stasiuk's successor and a decision close to the Flyers said Tuesday Shero's appointment remained only a formality.

Shero, an NHL defenceman three years with New York Rangers who ended his big league playing after the 1949-50 season won successive American Hockey League championships with Buffalo Bisons in 1968-69, 1969-70 and last year took the Central League title with Omaha Knights.

The soft-spoken Westerner began his coaching career with St. Paul, Minn., of the International League in 1958 but has never coached in the NHL.

Stasiuk, 42, was fired by Flyers' general manager Keith Allen last Thursday.

Under Stasiuk, the Flyers finished third in the NHL's West Division this year and dropped four straight to Chicago Black Hawks in Stanley Cup quarter-final playoffs.

Shero, who played in 138 NHL games and scored 20 points—10 in his final year—said:

"I've never coached in the major leagues before. But I have a good idea of our players."

Win Or Lose, Canonero II Will Be Sold

NEW YORK (AP) — Canonero II is on the market whether he wins or loses the Belmont Stakes and his bid for racing's Triple Crown, his owner said Tuesday.

"A decision will not be announced until after the Belmont Stakes," said Pedro Baptista, who owns Canonero II but races him in the name of Edgar Caibett, his son-in-law.

But win or lose Canonero will be sold after the Belmont. This, provided the price and conditions are those we seek."

A victory in the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes Saturday at Belmont Park would make Canonero II the first winner since Citation in 1948 to win thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown—the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont. Canonero II would be the ninth to achieve the feat.

"He'll be in the race," said Dr. William O. Reed, one of the veterinarians who has looked after the Kentucky-bred colt since his arrival here. "Don't worry about that."

Canonero II has been inflicted with a skin rash and an infected right hind foot, but Reed said the rash has all but disappeared and the foot infection is responding to treatment.

Baptista, a Venezuelan industrialist, said five groups from the United States, and one each from Venezuela, Japan and England have bid to buy Canonero II.

"We are listening to the various offers both as to money and conditions," said Baptista. "I hope to retain shares in the colt whom I believe has great potential at stud."

Even if the colt is not sold in his country, Baptista said, he will be available to the best mares in Venezuela, adding that he felt Canonero II would have the best opportunity as a stallion in the United States because of the mares that would be available.

Kings Could Fight For Crown

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — There is talk about a final between Lanny Wadkins of the United States and defending champion Michael Bonallack of England in the British amateur golf championship which will be decided over 36 holes Saturday.

Wadkins, U.S. amateur king from Richmond, Va., won 6-5 over another American Tuesday even though he had a bad cold.

Bonallack, 36, winner of this title five times, coasted into the third round with two rather mediocre performances. He survived a 19th hole playoff and then scored a 2 and 1 victory in his second round.

"I am just getting my game back," said Bonallack, captain of the British Walker Cup team that won over the U.S. at St. Andrews last week.

Herb Fritz of Vancouver, the lone Canadian here, gained easy access to the second round over Carnoustie's 6,282-yard, par-72 layout when his scheduled first-round opponent, American Ernie Kerber, scratched from the tournament Tuesday.

Completion of the second round plus the third round today will reduce the field of 256 amateur golfers.

The original U.S. challenge of 65 men, including the 10 Walker Cup stars, has now been cut by two-thirds.

The U.S. attack was damaged by the defeats Tuesday of veterans Bill Hyndman of Philadelphia and Bill Campbell of Huntington, W.Va.

First Visit From Trevino

MONTREAL (CP) — Lee Trevino will make his first appearance in the Canadian Open when the annual golf championship is held at the Richelieu Valley Golf ad Country Club July 1-4.

The announcement was made Tuesday by the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

Leading money winner last year when he earned $157,037, Trevino, 31, has already won more than $200,000 this season.

He joins Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Doug Sanders, already signed for the $150,000 Canadian event. First prize is $30,000.

Right to Fire Drugged Worker Upheld

TORONTO (CP) — An arbitration board has upheld the dismissal of a woman convicted of reporting for work under the influence of the drug Methedrine, believed to be the first such case in Ontario.

A grievance was filed by Local 49 of the International Molders Union on behalf of a married woman employed by Webster Manufacturing Ltd. of London, Ont.

The woman, who worked as a buffing and sanding operator, was fired for being under the influence of unprescribed drugs and for medical unfitness.

The foreman of the plant told the arbitration board he saw the woman standing by a sanding lathe behaving as though "someone was sticking pins into her. She was twitching and jumping around, chewing something violently."

Final Arguments Come in Court Today In Chicken-and-egg Marketing War

OTTAWA (CP) — Final arguments on the chicken-and-egg war will be heard today in the Supreme Court of Canada.

The Manitoba Court of Appeal ruled that an egg-marketing board proposed by the province is unconstitutional. The provincial government is appealing the ruling to the high court.

But the real issue is seen to be a similar marketing board already established by Quebec to regulate the flow of imported eggs to benefit Quebec farmers.

Winnipeg lawyer Alan Scarth said Tuesday that such boards could eventually force producers out of some provincial markets altogether by setting quotas and fixing prices.

Canadian producers have a right to market their wares all across Canada, he said. Consumers also had the right to buy their produce regardless of where it was produced in Canada.

Tuesday was the turn of those attacking the proposed Manitoba plan to have their innings.

When the appeal opened Monday, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia presented arguments upholding the intent of the plan as within provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Scarth, appearing for the Manitoba Egg and Poultry Association and other producer agencies, said the Manitoba plan might be valid if its aim was to protect consumers.

But it was evident this was not so. The main idea was to help Manitoba farmers by shutting off the flow of eggs from outside the province.

Ronald Rolls argued for the Canadian Feed Manufacturers Association that the whole Canadian market was open to agricultural products.

Marketing boards such as proposed by Manitoba could break that market into 10 pieces.

C. R. O. Munro, assistant deputy attorney-general for Canada, said Manitoba's aim was to regulate interprovincial trade, an exclusively federal field.

McKeough Critical Of Local Leaders

NORTH BAY (CP) — Municipal leaders were criticized Tuesday by Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough for a lack of initiative in helping the province bring about municipal reform.

The leaders, attending the annual convention of the Association of Mayors and Reeves, earlier in the day voted to ask the federal government to ban the importation of firecrackers and to continue the present penalties for use and possession of marijuana.

Today they will vote on a proposal that welfare recipients earn a maintenance income by working and being paid union rates.

Mr. McKeough told the politicians that municipalities face the prospect of provincial control over their budgets unless they demonstrate support and understanding of the province's unconditional grant system designed to help them overcome their financial problems.

He said partnership is a two-way street but "sometimes the prospects for local leadership do not seem bright."

Memberships Not Ended

WATERLOO (CP) — The Canadian Press erroneously reported Monday night that the Royal Canadian Legion in Ontario decided at its biennial convention here to cancel more than 2,000 honorary memberships issued in the province.

Legion delegates voted on a resolution Monday night that would have nullified honorary memberships effective Dec. 31, but they accepted a motion of non-concurrence by means of a verbal vote that meant rejection of the earlier resolution.

MP Says He Can't Afford to Forego Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — One of the first MPs to take the pledge of abstention from proposed parliamentary pay boosts went off the wagon Tuesday, saying he can't afford the gesture.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) reversed his tracks as the Commons took another step towards increasing members' salaries to $18,000 from $12,000 and non-accountable expense accounts to $8,000 from $6,000.

The bill, which would give Senators equivalent pay increases and raise their expense allowances to $4,000 from $3,000, was passed at report stage in preparation for debate scheduled for today on third and final reading.

Members from all parties later criticized the quality of postal service being offered in relation to a proposed price increase on stamps for first-class mail, but government members promised passage of an amendment that would have killed the bill containing the increases.

Mr. Nowlan said he repented having said he would give up the salary increase.

"I went too far, and I admit it."

He had always been in favor of parliamentary pay increases, he said, so the fact that it appeared he was now doing a flip-flop on his previous stand against the timing and the method of the bill was in reality no different from his earlier flip-flop.

In leaving the clan of a dozen MPs who said they would not take benefit from the bill during this session of Parliament, Mr. Nowlan made it clear he now considers them in error.

"Some members say they will be Pied Pipers in their ridings, dispensing dollars for charitable projects.

"Let them go to it. I cannot and will not be a part of such hypocrisy."

There are monetary difficulties in being a Santa Claus to so many deserving Canadians."

An amendment proposed by Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) that would have prevented the pay increases from going into effect until the next election was defeated 153 to 22.

The increases would be retroactive until last Oct. 8 under the bill.

Voting for the amendment were 19 New Democrats, two Conservatives and 16 Social Crediters. Opposed were four NDP, one Conservatives and all Liberals present.

In debate on a bill that would increase the cost of a stamp now selling for six cents to seven cents July 4 and eight cents on Jan. 1, members used a series of anecdotes to make the point that current service doesn't justify the increase.

Robert Kaplan (L—Don Valley) said the community of Thorncliffe Park in his Toronto-area riding was served until last year by a postal substation that was too small.

So the station, which had served 12,000 people, was taken out of service and eventually relocated with two stamp machines.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said a post office inspector had been sent around to the post office in New Liskeard, a town in his riding.

In this post office there was a hole in the floor, into which a woman had recently fallen.

The inspector hadn't done anything about the hole. But he said a bilingual sign had to be erected over the door to show where the postmaster could be found.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) and Gerard Laprise (Social Credit-Abitibi) also condemned the level of service.

Mr. Lambert said many post offices personnel appeared to think that the public was there for their own gratification, and that inflexible post office regulations should serve the staff rather than the people.

Montreal Postal Strike Now Possible

CALGARY (CP) — Whether Montreal postal workers would call a strike today remained uncertain following a series of discussions at the Canadian Union of Postal Workers convention Tuesday.

The national convention approved a resolution giving inside postal workers the right to refuse to handle "any mail emanating from behind picket lines." Montreal delegates, including local president Marcel Perrault and vice-president Jean Claude Parrot, immediately isolated Montreal workers could strike today.

They said if employees of G. LaPalme Inc., laid off in February after the company lost a federal mail-delivery contract, picketed the Montreal post offices, the strike could go on.

Interpretation of the policy resolution varied widely. Andre Marceau, president of the Quebec City local, warned delegates that "you have voted us on national strike action tomorrow morning."

Union President William Houle refused to be pinned down when questioned on the resolution's effects.

In an interview later, Mr. Houle played down the possibility of a nation-wide postal strike but left room for the Montreal union to walk out. He said it is not unusual for an individual local to act alone in such a situation.

The Montreal local held a private meeting after the session adjourned and its representatives would not give more detail on the possibility of strike action.

After the private meeting, Mr. Perrault said the "interpretation of the resolution is the responsibility of the national president."

However, another Montreal delegate invited the LaPalme drivers to set up picket lines around the Montreal post office to precipitate a sympathy walkout.

Opinions of some of the 500 delegates attending the convention favored the principle behind the resolution, but felt it would be misused if the Montreal workers refused to handle mail today.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are going to be in Edmonton for a while this summer and thought that, while there, we might take a run up to Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories. Can you tell us how far this is and supply any information on the Territories?

ANSWER: Your "run" is going to cover 1,000 miles each way, via the MacKenzie Highway.

Thought by many to be a land of perpetual ice and snow the Northwest Territories actually comprises an area of infinite variety. The Territories occupy all of Canada north of the Provinces, except the Yukon, and numerous Islands of the Arctic Zone: flat, forested valleys to never - melting iced peaks; blossom - packed meadows to bleak, steep cliffs; warm sandy shores to frigid glacial banks, these constitute the diversity of the vast area of the Northwest Territories.

Explorers seeking a water route to the Orient came early to the Northwest Territories. Sir Martin Frobisher first sailed here in 1576. Thinking that gold ore was found in the new land, commercial interest rose, and in 1778 Prebisher attempted to found a settlement on Frobisher Bay. Henry Hudson discovered and sailed the Hudson Bay in 1610. Later the Hudson's Bay Company sent trader explorers to these great northern lands. Alexander MacKenzie navigated the Great Slave Lake and sailed to the mouth of the MacKenzie River. Finally in 1845, a Northwest Passage was discovered by Sir John Franklin.

Life in some areas has changed little in the last 100 years. But in other sections, development of oil and gas fields, iron deposits and lead-zinc concentrates has brought "normal" life to the natives. Fur-trapping, especially muskrat, beaver, mink and lynx, continues the main occupation of the Indians, while many Eskimos rely on white fox and seal. Whitefish and trout are commercially caught, frozen and trucked south, over the MacKenzie Highway. Specialty foods — pickled muktuk, muktuk sausage and seal meatballs — are also frozen and canned.

Agricultural experiments have been performed since 1947 at Fort Simpson. Although the growing season is short, growth is fast and uninterrupted during the nightless, summer days. Wheat, coarse grains, tomatoes, vegetables and fruits have been harvested. Soon, hopefully, the million acres of arable lands will be plotted and developed.

The recent enactment of the Non-Resident Big Game Licence has opened to the hunters the MacKenzie Mountains, habitat of moose, black and grizzly bear, caribou and Dall sheep.

FORBIDDEN VOICES REFLECTIONS OF A MOHAWK INDIAN — by Alma Greene.

The author of this book is descended from a long line of Mohawk Chieftains and is herself a Clan Mother. She tells of the Red Man's world as she was growing up and of his past. She explains the importance of the medicine man, the beliefs and myths of her people, also their view of the white man and their disillusionment with Christianity. A unique view of another culture.

WIZARD OF THE UPPER AMAZON by Manuel Cordova-Rios. Captive by Amahuaca Indians and carried off to their remote jungle village. At first Manuel was terrified of the savage Huni Kui, but gradually learned that he was being groomed to replace their aging chief. During his seven years with the tribe, he became an expert in the curative properties of local plants and upon his return to civilization, gained fame as a healer. Another part of his training was the drinking of the hallucinatory "Ushon vine" on a carefully restricted basis and its effect on his power as a leader. This is an unusual and well-told story.

ZANEK! A CHRONICLE OF THE ISRAELI AIR FORCE — "Zanek" is the Hebrew command to fighter pilots to "take off." Interwoven throughout this chronicle, which traces the full development of the Israeli Air Force since 1948, is the story of a young pilot shot down over Syria and rescued fourteen hours later. The author is well equipped to tell the saga of what he calls the first guerrillia air force in history. He is a former RAF pilot and as a journalist has covered every major conflict. He was given freedom of access to the facilities of the Israeli Air Force and gathered his information in the cockpits, training schools and homes of the air crews.

THE PAST IS MYSELF BY Christabel Bielenberg.

This is a personal story about life in Nazi Germany told by an Englishwoman. Christabel Burton married a German lawyer, Peter Bielenberg, in 1934, and until 1945 lived in Germany. She and her husband were associated with the resistance and after the failure of the attempt on Hitler's life were arrested by the Gestapo. This is not however the main emphasis of the book. It is her descriptions of day-to-day life, some tragic, some amusing, which give a fascinating view of the war through the other end of the telescope.

ANNAPURNA SOUTH FACE BY Chris Bonington.

In 1970 a French expedition made the first conquest of a 26,000 foot Himalayan peak, Annapurna. Yet the real challenge remained - the South Face, over 10,000 feet of rock and ice and one of the most formidable mountain walls in the world. This was finally conquered in 1970 by an expedition under Chris Bonington. It was a triumph of planning, teamwork and new techniques.

Airport Firefighters Return to Their Jobs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Firefighters at international airports across the country returned to work Tuesday night after the transport department agreed to postpone introduction of an experimental shift system at Edmonton.

The men had booked off sick earlier Tuesday in sympathy with the Edmonton firefighters opposing introduction of new shifts.

However, following an all-day meeting at Ottawa between government and officials of the Union of Canada Transport Employees, the interim agreement was announced.

Breast Cancer Boon to South African Woman

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Mrs. Helen Joseph is enjoying full-time human contact for the first time in nearly a decade—from a South African hospital bed.

But even there she is careful to receive only one visitor at a time to avoid contravening a restriction order that has dominated her life since Oct. 13, 1962.

On that day, Mrs. Joseph, a 66-year old British-born divorcee, was the first person in South Africa to be served with a five-year banning and house-arrest order.

Five years of loneliness and isolation later, the order was automatically renewed—condemning her to an existence so restricted that she must stay alone in her home at night and at weekends, must report daily to a police station and can only talk to other people one-at-a-time.

Recently the house arrest was temporarily set aside to allow Mrs. Joseph to go into a hospital, nearly a few days later she underwent major surgery for breast cancer.

Mrs. Joseph's banning order was imposed by John Vorster, then minister of justice and now prime minister, for allegedly furthering the aims of communism.

It was imposed without trial under South Africa's stringent Suppression of Communism Act, intended to defend the country from communism and sabotage. She has never been charged in a court of law.

Mrs. Joseph, a sociologist, is one of the few people in South Africa still subject to house-arrest order.

The restriction order also prevents anything she says or has written from being quoted in any publication sold in South Africa, and bars her from participating in the preparation of news material —stopping her from being interviewed even by the overseas press.

She cannot communicate with any other banned person and is barred from entering the premises of any newspaper, factory, educational institute or union offices.

This means she had to give up a job she held for 15 years as secretary to a medical aid society, because its offices were in the same building as a union, Mrs. Joseph now works for a bookshop.

She must also stay alone—apart from her pet dog and cat—in her tiny bungalow home in the modest northern Johannesburg suburb of Norwood between 6:30 p.m. and 6:30 a.m. on weekdays.

These hours are extended at weekends from 2:30 p.m. on Saturday to 6:30 a.m. on Monday, apart from a two-hour period on Sunday to attend church—a concession only granted after her sixth year of house arrest.

The weekend limits are extended on public holidays.

Friends say she lives in constant dread of breaking the stringent rules. For being late home in the evening she faces six months' imprisonment and was once jailed for four days for failing to make her daily report to the police.

She keeps a suitcase permanently packed in case she breaks her curfew and is taken to the cells.

Mrs. Joseph came to South Africa in 1930 and soon became known as an outspoken critic of the country's race laws.

She was a founder member of the now-outlawed South African Congress of Democrats and was among those accused and acquitted in a marathon 4½-year treason trial which began in the late 1950s.

Her face now is lined with age and worry. Friends say that recently the strain of her illness and nearly nine years of house arrest have started to tell on her.

Now in a bed in a public ward in Johannesburg's General Hospital, she can talk to nurses, doctors and other patients. It is a savage irony that it took a severe illness for her to be able to enjoy the warmth of human companionship during evenings and weekends for the first time in nine years.

Cable TV Firms Edging Into Telephone Companies' Preserve

OTTAWA (CP) — Some cable television firms are edging on to ground that is largely the preserve of telephone companies.

It could lead to a collision over who should provide telephones, cable television, data communications and other services.

Communications experts agree that political decisions soon will have to be made to clarify the confusion now surrounding the issue because of recent technical developments.

Cable systems in Vancouver and the Ontario centres of Guelph and North Bay now can provide limited two - way transmission.

Garth Pitner of Vancouver, president of Fred Welsh Antenna Systems, says this two - way system could be developed to handle telephone calls

Telephone companies say the cable television industry does not have the financial or research capacity to establish competitive telephone systems.

Pepin Offers Solution To Census Complaints

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians dissatisfied with the person assigned to pick up their completed 1971 census form have two other options, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the Commons Tuesday.

They can ask that their form be collected by either the census commissioner for their area or by the regional officer of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Mr. Pepin said that some persons might feel uncomfortable if a neighbor or someone they considered too "friendly" picked up their form.

Softball Pays Self-helper

John Jiangoudos enlisted a self - help program Tuesday night as Richard Ellis Printing edged ANAF Vets 9-8 in a Belleville Minor Softball peewee bout.

Jiangoudos pitched the win for Richard Ellis, striking out 15 batters and also contributed three singles to the hitting attack. John Ferri added two singles and a triple for Richard Ellis while Shane Buck and Peter Pavelski homered for the Vets.

OASA squirts showed that they could carry their weight in the peewee division by taking a 4-3 verdict from Conley's Grocery.

Danny Vance and Tim Soule combined for a five-hitter for the OASA relay striking out a total of 18 batters.

David McBride gave up only seven hits in a losing performance, striking out nine batters. Gerry Ford cracked two doubles for Conleys.

In a third peewee contest, Western Tire nipped Midas Muffler 27-8.

Dwight Begley collected a double and two singles for Midas, while teammate John Heijstra was good for a boner, double and single.

Age No Handicap

TORONTO (CP) — Charlie Youngman, 93, sank a hole-in-one on the par-3, 130-yard second hole at Tam O'Shanter Golf Club Tuesday.

He did the same thing on the same hole 13 years ago.

And in 1958, he had the same partner, Bert Parry, a First World War veteran who recently returned from an air force reunion in England.

"Charlie felt so good that he went out and tried to do it again," said the club's assistant pro Doug Day.

But on the second try, he only made par.

"Yes I save on quite a few things by coming to Loblaws", says Mrs. Ray who shops for two, "the orange juice for instance—I really save on that compared to other stores. I've looked and I can't get it for as good a price anywhere else. And I save on tissues and canned goods as well. I used to come to Loblaws but I found it rather expensive but now that they've got their MAXI DISCOUNT prices in I find things are cheaper. I like the meat I buy here—and the service is good. If I wasn't satisfied with what I buy at Loblaws I just wouldn't come here at all".

Raging Forest Fire Threatens Moosonee

Women, Young Flee by Canoe

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — "It looked real bad around noon when we took the kids out of school and started loading the canoes."

Dick Knowles, secretary-treasurer of the Moosonee Development Area Board, said he smelled the smoke and saw the fire down the road.

"I saw the flames jumping from tree to tree and I gotta tell you, I was scared. A couple of cabins burned up."

The 230-acre forest fire which started Tuesday was pushed to within one mile of the city limits Wednesday when winds gusted to 30 miles an hour.

Mr. Knowles paused with a sigh.

"But it looks better now," he said last night. "The wind has died down.

He said 260 women and children were loaded by about 20 18-foot freighter canoes—used by Indian guides for fishing and hunting parties—and transported two miles across the Moose River to Moose Factory.

"Most of them are staying in the Indian residence. There are no problems. Everything went so smooth it was a little hard to believe."

Mr. Knowles said the fire was concentrated in an area of muskeg, poplar, birch and spruce.

"It's flat ground around here. In fact, there isn't a hill within 50 miles."

At the height of the fire, the temperature was in the mid 70s, unusually high for this time of the year. Ice in the river moved out about two weeks ago and Mr. Knowles said some was still visible out in James Bay.

"The Queen get her ruise yet?"

Flames Halted On Town's Edge

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — Water-bombing aircraft took to the air at dawn today and sweat-streaked men returned to a bulldozed fire line to continue their fight to hold back a 250-acre forest fire which threatens to sweep into this tiny James Bay community.

More than 100 men, faces black from a day and night of fighting to contain the blaze within a mile and a half of Moosonee, worked with two-way radios and construction equipment to fortify the fire break and direct the three bombers which circled the rectangular blaze, dropping thousands of gallons of water on areas threatening to flare.

Rangers from the department of lands and forests said the fire was contained this morning, but key to control was the wind. It was blowing from the south into Moosonee at about 15 miles an hour, but rangers said it was forecast to shift and blow from the west later today.

"We're all right as long as it shifts," said chief ranger Albert Hutchinson, 40. "If it stays this way and freshens, however, it could cut up on us." A western shift would turn the leading edge of the blaze into the Moose River.

He called for more fire fighters from nearby Moose Factory, on an island in the Moose River, and planned to fight the fire on two fronts—the northern edge near this community of 1,000 and on the west where the fire line was less than a quarter mile from the Ontario Northland Railway line.

Three bulldozers worked on the fire line this morning, cutting a trough in the earth to hold back the flames. Smoke was lighter today and there were brief flares in spots.

The fire was burning in muskeg country, damaging stands of black spruce, poplar and birch. Cause of the blaze or estimate of damage were not known.

In Moosonee itself—where 270 women, children and elderly persons were evacuated Wednesday—things appeared normal this morning.

Stores were open, both hotels were packed with tourist fishermen and people moved normally in streets clogged a day earlier with heavy smoke as winds rose to 45 miles an hour.

Of the 270 evacuated, nearly 200 were back today in Moosonee—a predominantly Cree Indian settlement about 285 miles north of Timmins—after spending most of the night in Moose Factory.

Thatcher Wants Parley Delayed

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher sent a telegram Wednesday to Prime Minister Trudeau asking that the constitutional conference scheduled to start June 14 in Victoria be postponed until after the June 23 Saskatchewan general election.

He told the prime minister that with the province in the midst of an election campaign, "I find it difficult to attend the conference.

Today's Chuckle

An optimist is wrong as often as a pessimist, but he has a lot more fun.

Scott Advocates Vote On Regional Government

NORTH BAY (CP) — Ontario's municipal leaders called Wednesday for further study of regional governments and came out for a harder line on welfare payments.

The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves voted to ask the provincial government to halt further implementation of regional government until a thorough study is made of restructured areas.

Mayor J. R. Scott of Belleville told the meeting that no regional government should be introduced without a vote by area citizens.

A report approved by convention delegates said that able-bodied persons should be put to work on municipal projects rather than receiving welfare payments for doing nothing.

"No one has a natural right to be maintained by others," said the report prepared by an association committee.

Federal and provincial governments will be asked to give power to the municipalities to deny payments to welfare recipients who refuse to work without valid reason.

Fire Burns Near Town In Quebec

CHIBOUGAMAU, Que. (CP) — A fire trench was being dug around this northern Quebec community Wednesday night after a stubborn blaze in nearby, woodland found new life after being considered under control.

The forest fire, which has destroyed more than 10,000 acres of timber in a 30-square-mile area in this region 250 miles north of Montreal, was believed under control earlier Wednesday after burning since Saturday.

But a fierce 35-mile-an-hour wind whipped the flames to life later and the blaze began a westerly move bypassing a natural fire break formed by a chain of lakes.

Bourassa Silent On Stand

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Wednesday night it would be premature to make public Quebec's stand on the most important matters to be discussed at the constitutional conference in Victoria June 14-16.

Mr. Bourassa was speaking to reporters about the results of two meetings of his cabinet following a two-day federal-provincial preliminary conference in Ottawa and his private meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau Monday night.

When he emerged from Wednesday night's 3½-hour meeting, he did not disclose any new developments in the constitutional talks.

The Liberal cabinet met Tuesday night immediately after Mr. Bourassa returned from Ottawa to begin working out the details of Quebec's position at the conference.

Mr. Bourassa said the cabinet will meet again before the conference to continue discussions on Quebec's constitutional position and that the matter will also be brought before the Liberal caucus.

The decision to lay the government's constitutional position before the 72-member caucus was seen as a move to get an expression of substantial support for Mr. Bourassa's actions at Victoria.

Mr. Bourassa said it would be premature to disclose Quebec's position on social policy and minority language rights the most important subjects to be discussed at the conference.

He added, however, that he is "maintaining Quebec's reservations for the time being" on a federal government proposal to entrench guarantees of minority language rights in the constitution.

Pupils Present Operetta

Year-end plays and performances are a feature of schools this month as the academic term draws to a close. Last night was Prince Charles School's turn, when pupils entertained parents and friends at a production of the Pied Piper of Hamelin. Playing an agent was Frank Davidson in a plumed hat, with the piper, Tina Skelly, (at right), engaged in an argument with the mayor, Lorie Hale, complete with chain of office and flanked by two counsellors.

NATO Leaders Study Soviet Parley Plea

LISBON (CP) — Foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization met today in Lisbon's Ajuda palace with the Soviet offer to negotiate troop reductions in Europe at the head of their agenda.

Portuguese Premier Marcello Caetano opened the ministers' semi-annual meeting, being held in Portugal for the first time. Less than seven hours before the two-day meeting began, an explosion tore a big hole in front of the central post office several miles from the palace. The bomb blast knocked out telegraph and telephone communication between Portugal and the outside world for more than five hours.

The explosion was believed to be the work of an urban guerrilla organization opposed to the war against insurgents in Portugal's African colonies.

With demands growing in the United States for withdrawal of American troops from Europe, U.S. State Secretary William Rogers was reported planning to press the allies to agree on early negotiations with the Russians in search of a program of balanced troop reductions by the NATO and Warsaw pact forces.

As a first step, the Nixon administration was reported proposing that NATO hold a special conference to work out proposals to present to the Russians, who last month urged talks to reduce military forces in Europe.

Public opinion in most West European countries is strongly in favor of such negotiations with the Russians. But the West Germans are opposed to any such an agreement with the Russians unless it is made contingent on new arrangements easing Communist pressure on West Berlin and access to that Communist-surrounded city.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada said on the eve of the talks that he will urge NATO to take the Soviet proposal seriously and find a way of probing further Russian intentions on the troop cuts.

Sharp said he will recommend that appointment of an envoy to Eastern Europe to ascertain more precisely the Soviet views.

Hoffa Intends To End Reign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters President James R. Hoffa has sent word from the prison cell that he will finally relinquish his 14-year reign over the giant labor union, informed sources said today.

The 58-year-old Hoffa, whose stormy career as chief of the two-million-member union ended in prison four years ago, is reported to have endorsed the union's general vice-president, Frank E. Fitzsimmons, to succeed him.

Hoffa, serving 13 years for jury tampering and mail fraud in the Lewisburg, Pa., federal penitentiary, had exhausted innumerable legal avenues in a fruitless effort to win his freedom in time to run for re-election next month before finally giving in and agreeing to step aside.

Funeral Home Sales Said Not A Dollar Drain

The sale last year of the John R. Bush Funeral Home to a large American firm of funeral directors has made no difference in the operation of the local undertaking business.

This was stated today by John Bush, the former owner of the long - established Belleville firm who remained on as director of the firm following its sale in March 1970 to International Funeral Services Inc. with headquarters in Des Moines, Iowa.

Mr. Bush said the prices of funerals had remained the same and that the business was very much independently operated.

"They come here occasionally to look things over and make suggestions. But it's up to me whether or not I carry them out," he said.

The American "takeover" of Canadian funeral businesses has received national prominence recently as result of statements by several persons.

Mrs. A. J. Elder, executive secretary of the Memorial Association of Canada said that under U.S. direction, funeral prices in Canada would go up and former owners, who usually are retained by the companies to manage their establishments, would be ordered to run the businesses by company methods.

Last October, Edward Good, Liberal MPP for Waterloo North, warned in a speech to the convention of the Ontario Funeral Service Association that unless the federal government took action "more and more funeral home operators will be selling their businesses to foreign ownership."

And Stanley Knowles, NDP member from Winnipeg North Centre, charged in the House of Commons in February that the sale of Canadian funeral businesses would deprive Canadians of the right to be "buried in Canadian soil."

Mr. Bush said he sold his undertaking business to get out from under a heavy work load, to be relieved of financial responsibility.

The 58-year-old funeral director said he had been in the business since he was 17 and sold out to "get the burden off my shoulders."

"Before I sold I was working about 70 hrs. a week and now I put in about 30 hrs. I agreed with the company that I would stay on to manage the home for five years."

He said the price range of funerals ranging up from $200 had not changed as result of the takeover.

But Mr. Bush said the costs of operating a funeral business have increased along with those in other businesses.

"The cost of wages and equipment has gone up," he said. Staff members now work 40 hours instead of the former 48 hours a week.

The average costs of a funeral across Canada were $448 in 1964; $544 in 1968 and $594 last year.

But in Ontario the average cost of a funeral rose to $779 last year from $702 in 1968 and $490 in 1964.

Mr. Bush said one big factor in the cost of funerals was the demand for service by the general public.

A byline story carried in today's Globe and Mail quoted Walter Weir, former premier of Manitoba and president of the Canadian subsidiary of a Houston - based company that has taken over 16 funeral businesses and three cemeteries in Canada as saying he plans to bring the company under Canadian ownership.

In this, Mr. Weir said, he had the full approval of Service Corporation International of Houston, the parent company of the Canadian subsidiary of which he is president.

His company is one of two U.S. corporations that are buying Canadian funeral businesses.

The other is International Funeral Services Inc. which bought the John R. Bush Funeral Home.

Besides the Belleville operation, the Iowa - based firm owns three undertaking firms in Hamilton, three in Calgary, two in Montreal and one each in Burlington, Ancaster and the Alberta centres of Banff, Gleichen and Didsbury.

J. D. Dwyer, treasurer of International Funeral Services Inc. said his company re-invests all its Canadian profits in Canada "and we haven't taken out a dime since we started up there."

County Jail Equipment To Go Under Hammer

Anybody in the market for body belt restrainers, leg irons or possibly a few pairs of handcuffs?

If so they will have the opportunity next week when Hastings county will offer at auction the "chattels" of the old county jail.

The 130 - year - old Hastings county jail is scheduled to become vacant on June 8 when the last of the prisoners are moved to the new regional detention centre at Napanee.

Three days later — on June 11 — the auction of jail chattels will be held, when items consisting mainly of office furniture beds and other equipment will be knocked down to the highest bidder.

Much of the jail equipment such as the "belly belt restrainers" are articles which haven't been used for years.

But the old county jail and the remains of the 1835 courthouse are scheduled to soon disappear as prominent east end landmark.

County Clerk - Administrator Carl Bateman said today that a contract has been let to raze the old structure.

Harold Leavett of Bloomfield has been given the job of tearing down the old courthouse structure now hidden behind the new county administration building, together with the old jail and jailhouse walls.

Mr. Leavitt's tender for the demolition — the lowest of three received by the county — was for $11,850.

The construction cost of the old buildings back in 1839 was 10,000 English pounds — the official money in use at the time.

Mr. Bateman said the two-storey stone house, over the years used as the jail governor's residence, will remain standing.

But the old jail governor's residence is not being saved from the wrecker's hammer because of sentiment, or as a reminder of the early days of Hastings county.

Rather, the handsome old stone residence will be renovated and put to use as office accommodation for some county department.

County Crops Look Good

PICTON (Staff) — "June is busting out all over" in Prince Edward County where most farmers are now completing crop seeding. Larry Matheson, Ontario department of agriculture representative for the county, said yesterday 80 to 85 per cent of all spring grains have been sown and are now up. Grain corn planting is reported "coming along very well" with some acreage still to be planted. Processing crops are still being planted and transplanting of tomatoes for fall processing is in progress. Mr. Matheson observed early planted processing peas have made good growth and remarked this crop looks promising.

The agriculture representative said cool spring temperatures this year have slowed crop growth but noted pasture is good and most farmers have turned out their cattle, taking their work load. He described the weather since late May as "very good" and suggested periodic rainfalls will be a beneficial factor in the 1971 crop harvest.

Woman Killed In Accident

Campbellford OPP Constable Ernie Freitag investigated. The village of Hastings is approximately 55 miles northwest of Belleville.

Snidely Whiplash Revisited

The Pinnacle Playhouse, housing the Drunkard, is reliving the era of Little Nell and the gang with its presentation of W. H. Smith's The Drunkard. Principal lead, lawyer Cribbs (background, played by Lee Jourard), entices Edward Middleton (foreground, played by Stewart Arnold) to leave his wife (kneeling, played by Linda Archer) and his good friend William Dowton played by Milton McCrystal. Later in the play the lawyer is shown in his true colors and, of course, the happy ending results.

Drunkard Broad Comedy

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The era of Snidely Whiplash and Little Nell are reborn as the cast of the Drunkard performs in the Pinnacle Playhouse.

With the opening night finished, the audience has seen that there are no pretenses with the actors.

Each player has his own distinct part to play and does it with broad exaggeration throughout the evening. These are players playing a play and not people trying to recreate once living characters while in view of an audience.

Directed by Lawrence Eswabe, the play is designed to give no insights into anything except humor.

Complete with revolving stage, (which seems to revolve every ten minutes or so throughout the three-hour play) the play never lets the audience see much reality even though the plot comes extremely close to home.

The early lawyer hates the young man's father who, in turn gave all his wealth to his son. The dirty lawyer plots to ruin the son, molest the son's wife and run away with the family money.

Where the content of the play was lacking, the acting ability of the lead roles saved the performance.

Lee Jourard, playing the dirty lawyer, Cribbs, gave a tremendous performance, keeping the audience in tune with the play throughout the evening. Always in character, Mr. Jourard well deserved the hisses and boohs of disapproval from the back stage crew and the involved audience.

Peter Kitcher, past lead in the Lion In Winter, did an outstanding job with his part and once again showed his versatility as an actor. Playing the bartender - landlord, Mr. Kitcher gave a very funny performance in his opening scene where the young boy was tempted by lawyer Cribbs to indulge in the demon rum.

Other great performances were offered by Linda Archer, as the wife who, in the same role, captured the spirit of Little Nell and remained loyal to her husband until the end.

Mrs. Rene Robertson, who played the wife's mother in a bit part, came across to the audience in the greatest of the production that there are no small parts but only small actors. With each appearance the audience was much realize even though the plot comes extremely close to home.

West Hill Ratepayers Object to Apartments

Belleville city council will receive still another petition Monday urging rescinding of an additional West Hill area to block the construction of further apartment buildings.

The petition this time will be from a group of residents living north of Bridge Street in the area between Ontario and Sinclair Streets.

The latest petition was endorsed at last night's meeting of the West Hill Ratepayers' Association which also voted to forward a "save the park" letter to city council.

The association letter to council will urge retaining of the Wellington Crescent playground now owned by Albert College but being offered for sale as a possible apartment site.

Earlier, ratepayers in the West Hill area served by the Wellington Crea. playground raised a petition asking the city to save the park and to rezone the area to block apartment construction.

And at the last council meeting there was a petition from ratepayers in the Bridge Street - Bleecker Ave. district asking that their area be rezoned to block apartment house construction.

Last night's meeting of the West Hill ratepayers was attended by city aldermen Mrs. Robin Jeffrey and Mrs. Jean Smith, both of whom outlined the problem faced by council in rezoning requests.

Mrs. Jeffrey also talked on city parks in general, while Mrs. Smith commended the ratepayers on their aims, stating that ratepayers' associations provided a valuable service to their communities.

The meeting saw the formation of three new committees — constitution, membership and ways and means.

Association president Ted Fletcher told the 45 ratepayers present that the aim of his body was to serve the entire West Hill community, rather than being a pressure group for specific problems.

ROBERT WILLIAM BEECHER, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Beecher of 8 Plaza Square, Belleville received a bachelor of arts degree (biology and mathematics) at convocation exercises held May 29 at Queen's University, Kingston. Mr. Beecher is a graduate of Moira Secondary School, Belleville and will attend McArthur College of Education in September.

All proceeds from this evening of country-western musical entertainment will be donated to the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

The County Whirlers. Prince Edward's colorful square dance club will provide an added attraction for this program of country music.

Drug Survey Project OK'd

George Wilson, engineer for the CNR recently submitted a project to the Opportunities For Youth program under the "no surprise," said Mr. Wilson, "the project was accepted."

The project calling for $4,000 will involve conducting a survey of Belleville youth to make an in-depth analysis of the drug situation.

"We plan to find out everything we can on the usage of drugs within the city," said Mr. Wilson. "Where do the kids start using drugs, do they start with drugs or booze, and where do they increase their intake of drugs, and where in age do they decline and eventually stop?"

The survey will be conducted by perhaps a dozen people and hopefully office space will be available somewhere in the downtown district.

"One of my greatest concerns," said Mr. Wilson, "is getting jobs for youth. That's what the program is about."

The Special Services Branch of the Department of Health told me that this project would be worthwhile to them and at the same time would have to be conducted by youths.

The project will run for about five weeks during the summer.

Objector To Plan Now Happy

TRENTON (Staff) — One man, dissatisfied with a land use designation imposed on his land by the new official plan Tuesday came to think it a good idea.

William Paulsette, accompanied by solicitor William Ward, appeared before the regular meeting of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board to protest a ruling he thought would make much of his property a wildlife preserve.

Speaking for his client, Mr. Ward told the board the Paulsette holding off North Front Street above Nicholas Street had previously been commercial and his own visit to the site revealed very little wildlife.

He expressed the "suspicion the land may be designated open space because authorities see it as a convenient route for moving services through to new subdivisions planned for the area.

Planning board chairman, Dr. Robert Patrick, informed him the plan would not specify that the entire Paulsette property be used for open space but only a swath 100 feet wide each side of a creek that threads through the site.

Mr. Paulsette said this was a good idea and expressed satisfaction with news that he would be able to use this water course to meet requirements for parkland allotment when the land is developed.

A report indicating future staff needs and procedures required to develop an official plan for the Quinte Area Planning Board will be tabled by the consultant firm of Philips Planning and Engineering, Ltd. of Burlington at the third meeting of the new board tonight.

These recommendations are part of the increasing steps toward a completely organized board and offices.

The Burlington firm plan is expected to cost the planning board an estimated $1,250.

In keeping with a resolution passed at last month's meeting, the 23 - member board will receive $15 per meeting plus 10 cents per mile for the total trip. Board chairman Jack Bush will receive $18 per meeting plus mileage. The board resolved these rates would be retroactive to all meetings held.

Malls Popular

Ottawa, long since has been in the mall game with its Sparks Street effort. Now Toronto is experimenting on a week-long basis in Yonge Street. A Jamaican resident who confessed to disliking Toronto — it was too big and impersonal — observed "this is what a city should look like."

Certainly we can envisage quite a happy scene in Yonge street this week. The thoroughfare is uninspiring enough at the best of times, but this should make a big difference.

So we note that Kingston is aiming for a downtown shopping mall in 1973, with a one-day experimental offering sometime this summer.

Trenton is not being left behind either, with the possibility of a mall being established on a section of the main street in the days ahead.

That leaves us with our own community, but is there any sight, sound or possibility of a mall on Front Street? If there is we have not heard of it. Traffic flow of course must be considered, as well as the needs of shoppers. There can be no mall if traffic cannot be successfully re-routed.

War Hero Dead

War hero and actor Audie Murphy is dead, killed in an air crash in Virginia. We knew as much or as little as the next man about Murphy, but his comments on the Calley trial and verdict gave some insight into his character. If his exploits in the last war made him somehow larger than life, a kind of superman, his words more recently showed him also as a thoughtful, compassionate human being.

The Washington Post spoke of him thus, in connection with the Calley trial: "Perhaps of all the people who voiced an opinion, no one expressed the essential dilemmas and concerns more than Audie Murphy. By the definition of pre-Vietnam days (he received the medal of honor for killing 240 Germans and stopping a Nazi advance in France), Murphy was a hero, saluted, praised, honored for valor in uniform. He was America's most-decorated soldier in the Second World War."

"Although saying he was 'distressed and shocked' by the (Calley) verdict, Murphy added some soul-searching of his own. 'I'm not so sure that in those days of having been indoctrinated to fever pitch I might have committed the same error — and I prefer to call it error — that Lieut. Calley did.'

"But, like others he could not reach a final conclusion of innocence or guilt.

"'I am not a judge,' " he said. "Then, as an afterthought about the war in Vietnam: " 'It is a type of war I am unfamiliar with and which violates all traditions of the country.' "

Color Pleases

Comedienne Carol Burnett once revealed on her television show that, her nickname at school was "hot lips." It is probably a common enough appellation among the teenage set.

But if hot pants are the fashion rage there is little concentrate interest in lip makeup. Either it is the pale pale look or no coloring at all, no artificial coloring that is. Yet in a world that can be drab enough a little more boldness to this area, color that is a happy medium, even among the teenagers who seem on the timid side in this regard, would contribute to the imagery of our day to day scene.

What with all the new glosses on the market, in addition to the more traditional lip cosmetics, one would think such an image might already be apparent. Like the attractive young woman illustrating a vacation theme on the cover of the Canadian Magazine recently.

Or is it that the young people prefer eye shadow and the mysterious look?

Highway Deaths

Need we worry about population explosion when traffic deaths continue to escalate? Last week it was announced that since January 1 at least 1,083 persons have died in automobile accidents in Canada. Another 53 died last weekend. In the United States, meanwhile, no fewer than 631 persons died in traffic accidents during the three-day Memorial Day weekend. The figure was about average for a U.S. holiday weekend. No matter what steps are taken to try and curb such tragedies it seems a certain number will always die on the highways, and especially at weekends.

Stanfield Image Still Under Fire

P.C.s Seek Candidates For Next Election

By GREG CONNOLLEY
OTTAWA — The federal Conservative party has started a drive to secure outstanding candidates for the general election which most political pundits believe will come in 1972.

Tory leader Robert Stanfield says the success of his party in the election will depend in large measure on the quality of the men it can attract.

Observers would agree with Mr. Stanfield that the Conservatives need a great infusion of new faces, talent, brains, personality and drive. Too many of the Tory MPs in the Commons have lost their initiative and are just sitting around comfortably, enjoying a pleasant life.

The Conservative front bench array in the Commons is not calculated to strike fear into the hearts of the Trudeau cabinet. There are some good and capable men but unhappily the overall impression given by these parliamentary leaders of the Tory party is one of complacency.

What seems to be lacking is the killer instinct that a successful Commons opposition must have. The Conservatives must be tough, ruthless and determined to bring down the government.

To find dissatisfaction with the top Tories in the House, one has to go no farther than party backbenchers who describe their betters as a cosy Commons literary and debating society.

Not to say that the middle and back benches of the party are bursting with the best of MPs. But there is more burning desire among these lesser lumberjacks to put the boots to Trudeau and company.

A good example of how performance in the Commons can be improved is the tough, effective presence of the Tory members from Newfoundland.

If Mr. Stanfield is lucky there will be a number of retirements of Conservative older statesmen from the Commons. And some party officials say he will be blessed if among that number is former prime minister John Diefenbaker whose shadow looms large and not always helpfully over the Tory leader.

Of course Mr. Stanfield's speeches and questions in the Commons are not always scintillating. His supporters groan silently on many days in the House when he is producing a long-winded tortuous observation where a rapid, devastating interjection is required.

The feeling is that Mr. Stanfield will have to improve, not only in the Commons but on the hustings if the party is to gain marked success in the next election. But many believe he is getting better at communicating, even though improvement is far from spectacular.

The Tory leader, in talking about the quest for good candidates, speaks of men and women who will be "as loose to the Conservative Party and an attractive alternative to Canadians voting in the next federal election."

Fair enough but the Conservative party needs outstanding candidates, not just good ones. And it needs people who are hungry for a Tory victory.

Mr. Stanfield has a rather gaunt and hungry look himself and perhaps that ought to be symbolic of the Conservative attitude toward the next election.

Focus on the Medical Profession

Hamilton Spectator

The facts revealed by Health Minister Bert Lawrence before a legislature committee studying his departmental estimates suggest that a greedy minority of physicians consider OHSIP a milch cow. Ontario can be grateful for the majority of doctors who observe not only the written, but also the unwritten, code of their profession and are dedicated to them.

Mr. Lawrence said that more than half the children in Ontario have their tonsils removed, whereas in the opinion of experts the operation is necessary in only about three per cent of cases. He also referred to financial figures, apparently the result of computer analysis. The average income per patient to the general practitioner over a three-month period was $18.67; a few GPs earned very large incomes by seeing each patient more than the average number of times. Doctor-owned or operated laboratories charged fees double those of independent laboratories and almost, three times those of hospital out-patient laboratories.

Perhaps something like this had to be, given the nature of OHSIP and the temperament and aims of a small number of doctors. Perhaps Mr. Lawrence's questions will not surprise many members of the public. Wherever one goes these days one hears the remark: "Doctors are earning a lot of money". The same is said, too, about dentists. It is a generalization and therefore unjust. Many people say such things until the moment they desperately need medical attention, and then they change their tune.

The old family doctor has almost passed into history. But that does not mean the dedicated medical man is no longer in existence. He must certainly is, but the social scene is different. In a world of high rise apartment blocks and constantly shifting populations, much of the old intimacy is not possible; what was once a familiar personal relationship is now apt to be a written record on a medical card. Although more impartial, the majority of doctors still give their patients the same devoted attention the old-time family physician is reputed to have given.

But what of the small minority whose income is the same for exercis, proportionately, their number? Undoubtedly they have no dedication; their patients are customers; they are apparently driven by a peas-ant-like hunger to make money, to present a prosperous image that provokes envy and — as in their scale of values — produces superiority and status.

To say that these men should have been "businessmen" is to end aims of a small number of doctors. Perhaps Mr. Lawrence's questions will not surprise many members of the public. Wherever one goes these days one hears the remark: "Doctors are earning a lot of money". The same is said, too, about dentists. It is a generalization and therefore unjust. Many people say such things until the moment they desperately need medical attention, and then they change their tune.

To say that these men should have been "businessmen" is to end aims of a small number of doctors. There are ethics in business, just as there are in the professions; it is merely a difference of kind. The old thing is that these "healers of humanity" should not be in the profession at all. They lack entirely any sense of the traditional ethics that are an integral part of the medical profession and they do much damage to what is otherwise a noble calling.

Every profession has its "black sheep". The medical and dental professions deal with human suffering and pain; with the exception of ministers of religion, there is no other profession in which ostentatious money-making is to be so much deprecated. That is not to say that a doctor is not to receive rewards commensurate with his services to society, but if it is exclusively money he is after, then he is in the wrong vocation.

While the tiny minority of professional money machines in medicine (and dentistry, too, for that matter) must be deplored, most people will set against them the majority of hard-working and devoted practitioners who more than redeem the lot, who are literally human cash registers. Mr. Lawrence would do well if he gave at least as much publicity to the vast majority of dedicated doctors as he is giving these black sheep. It is fine to criticize, but to be respected, the critic must have a rigid set of values and a sense of proportion.

Rumors of A Fall Election

Montreal Gazette

A general election next fall? The odds in favor of it are shortening. Consider the latest word on the budget. According to Otawa insiders, Finance Minister Benson will bring it down on June 18. That in itself is not particularly meaningful apart from following so closely on the constitutional conference which will be held earlier the same week. There won't be much time for Mr. Benson to change it in response to criticism of his policies by the provincial premiers at Victoria.

No, the budget's election significance is to be found in the timing accompanying it

Montreal Postal Strike Headed Off

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers cooled off a situation Wednesday which many members thought would precipitate a walkout by inside postal workers in Montreal.

It all started at the Tuesday session of the union's annual meeting when a resolution barring handling of mail "emanating from behind picket lines," was approved. Montreal delegates said the resolution would give authority for a strike if employees of G. LaPalme, Inc., who were put out of work when the mail delivery company lost a federal contract earlier this year, picketed Montreal post offices.

Wednesday, a clarifying resolution saying that inside postal workers "will not be required to handle mail originating from a strike-bound plant or business firm," was put to the membership. It was tabled indefinitely after more than one hour of debate, but at the end of the day, strike talk for Montreal had disappeared.

A member of the union executive said following the session that unless a delegate specifically raises the question before Friday, when the week-long convention ends, an attempt to set policy on the handling of hot mail will have been thwarted.

Union President William Houle of Ottawa said the original motion or the amended version may not appear on the floor again.

Most Montreal and Quebec City delegates were not against the first motion, proposed by 20 western locals of the 18,000-member organization, but sought clarification.

When it passed, Andre Marcy, local, said the convention had voted national strike action. He said if the 450 PaPalme workers pickreted Montreal post offices, union members would strike in compliance with the resolution.

Mr. Houle said the LaPalme drivers were not on strike and not affiliated with the postal union, meaning Montreal workers had no reason to stage a wildcat strike.

A Quebec City motion which asked that the union affiliate with the Canadian Union of Public Employees was defeated.

Showers May Come to Aid of Firefighters at Moosonee

Skies were cloudy with temperatures in the low 50s. There was a chance of showers later today if the wind shifted.

Police said about 30 elderly persons were put up in the Moose Factory hospital overnight with another 40 staying in a public school. There were no injuries Wednesday as fleets of canoes carried the women and children downriver to the island.

The Department of Lands and forests reinforced itself for today's fight by ordering extra bulldozers, to be picked by two CF30 Hercules aircraft from the armed forces base at Petawawa, Ont.

Firefighters travelled to the fire down an access road, but reporters were barred from the fire front.

It was one of four which burned out of control in the province Wednesday. The others were located 80 miles north of Thunder Bay, near Kirkland Lake and near Dryden.

The fire hazard was high to extreme throughout the northern part of the province and low in the south.

Lands and forests officials said the extreme hazard has been created by a lack of rain and the fact that leaves and plants are just beginning to grow.

The absence of moisture has left ground cover tinder dry.

The Moosonee fire started Tuesday about eight miles south of the community. It moved three miles closer to the town that day.

Early Wednesday, the wind came up strong and drove the fire to within a mile of the town limits.

Whipped by the winds, it jumped a creek and a road which firefighters thought would act as firebreaks.

"It looked real bad around noon when we took the kids out of school and started loading the canoes," said Dick Knowles, secretary-treasurer of the Moosonee Development Area board.

"I saw the flames jumping from tree to tree and I gotta tell you, I was scared."

About 4 p.m., the winds died down and the waterbombers — one Canso and three Otters — started becoming more effective. In addition, men were able to get closer on the ground.

Flights continued until the sun went down at 9:30 p.m. when the fire line was pushed back to about three miles from the town.

In the dark it was an eery sight—the burned area glowing with embers, little specks of fire here and there but no massive flames.

The land is flat for miles around.

Moose Factory, in the middle of the river, is an historic site in that it was a jump-off point for early fur traders. Moosonee was established primarily in 1932 when the Ontario Northland Railway established its northern terminus there.

The two settlements have become noted as a jumping-off point for goose hunters who hunt the James Bay flat lands.

The fishing season has just begun and many tourists were in Moosonee when the fire broke out.

Opposition Boycott Continues as Newfoundland Sitting Ends

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Newfoundland legislature adjourned Wednesday until Oct. 20 after a tumultuous session that included a physical attack on a member and a series of suspensions.

The session which opened March 31 was marked throughout by heavy opposition attacks on government spending.

Also under attack Wednesday was Majoba's NDP government, which was accused of assisting in the takeover of a local bus manufacturing firm by a U.S. businessman.

In the Quebec legislature, a cabinet minister denied there has been an exodus of doctors from the province.

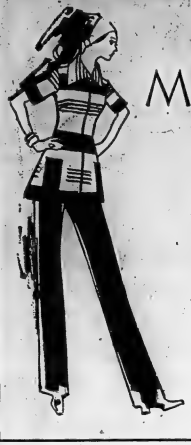
In St. John's Nfld., Lt.-Gov. E. John A. Harnum gave royal assent to 94 bills—including one to grant collective bargaining rights to fishermen—shortly after adjournment was moved. The fishermen's legislation, to come into force on proclamation, technically is applied to federal anti-combines statutes. But Premier Joseph Smallwood will seek an exception if Ottawa challenges it.

The house is expected to be dissolved and an election held before Oct. 30. The Liberal government's five-year term expires at the end of this year.

Opposition members again stayed away from the house Wednesday as they have done since three of them were expelled Monday for three days after accusing Speaker George Clarke of favoring the government.

The three expulsions followed an attack on one of the three by William Smallwood, son of the premier. The younger Smallwood was expelled for the week.

In Winnipeg, Liberal House Leader Gordon Johnston presented a motion to adjour the legislature for an emergency debate on financial dealings between Western Flyer Coach Industries Ltd. and the Manitoba Development Corp., the province's industrial loan agency.



He said the corporation made a loan of $5 million to Western Flyer in early 1970 after it had invited Thomas J. Ault of Bermuda to take 75-per-cent control of the locally-owned firm for cash investment of $12.

He said after taking over the company, Mr. Ault began "a systematic program of extracting for his personal use, funds from Western Flyer Coach, which funds were provided by the MDC loan.

Speaker Peter Fox ruled the motion for an emergency debate out of order and said the subject dealt with did not directly involve the government, but one of its Crown corporations. Mr. Johnston challenged the ruling but it was upheld by a vote of 26 to 20.

In Quebec City, Claude Castonguay, Quebec minister of social affairs, denied a report published in the Ontario Medical Review that 63 medical specialists had left the province because of bureaucracy in the operation of the Quebec medical care program, which went into effect Nov. 1.

Since the program went into effect, Mr. Castonguay said, Quebec lost 87 doctors because of death, retirement or the abandonment of their practices but during the same period 111 doctors from outside Quebec gained the right to practise in the province.

THE HASTINGS COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION

AUDITOR'S REPORT

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF
THE HASTINGS COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION

We have examined the Revenue Fund and Capital Fund Balance Sheets of The Hastings County Board of Education as at December 31, 1970 and the Revenue Fund Statement of Revenue and Expenditure and Statement of Source and Application of Capital Funds for the year then ended. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Board as at December 31, 1970 and the results of its operations and the source and application of its Capital funds for the year then ended, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted for Ontario School Boards applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Detailed Craftmanship Highlights Israeli Fashions

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

Highly imaginative designing, intricate craftsmanship and an obvious striving for perfection in the most minute detail characterized the Israeli fashions displayed on Wednesday at the Sons of Jacob Synagogue by the Belleville chapter of Hadassah. Modelled with seemingly effortless grace by Mrs. Norma Fainbloom, Mrs. Joan Horne, Mrs. Marilyn Vigodda, Mrs. Jo Gist, Mrs. Vera Morphy, Mrs. Vivian White and Mrs. Joy Wonnacott, the outfits ranged from the briefest bikinis to demure floor-length caftans. The fabrics, ranged from the sheerest chiffons and silks to sturdy leathers and suedes.

Almost every outfit was an artistic triumph, and the accent was on elegance and sophistication rather than on the groovy and the way out. A billowing, free-flowing caftan modelled by Jo Gist caught the eye with its soft sensuous pure silk texture and its mult-color print on a turquoise background. Seductively split in front it gave the impression of being as cool as a mountain breeze.

Marilyn Vigoda's chocolate brown leather midi sports coat weighed mere ounces according to the commentator Mrs. Flo Yanover and sported patch pockets and a walking kick pleat.

Another novel ensemble modelled by Jo Gist was a deep burgundy maxi dress with a Victorian influence in surrah silk with a matching jacket. Elaborate eyelet embroidery enhanced the skirt and jacket. Joan Horne displayed a hand printed gown in shades of dappled sunlight made of the sheerest silk organza set off to perfection by the orange silk slip underneath.

The costume look which is the current rage was shown by Norma Fainbloom whose fiery red bishop sleeved bodice of chiffon topped a full, ankle length multi - colored gypsy skirt.

Joy Wonnacott's sophisticated jet black pantsuit in pure beading on the tunic. Vera Morphy's three piece pantsuit of brocade with a shoe - stringed longuette vest and hip hugger pants was set off by a sexy see - through blouse of champagne colored chiffon.

Vivian White appeared at one point in an accordion pleated aquamarine gown with a trimming of rhinestones glinting at the collar and cuffs. Another eye catching floor - length gown modelled by Marilyn Vigoda was an A - line hooded creation in cloud-light organza sprayed in shades of muted greens and blues. Joy Wonnacott's deep pile acrilan wrap with a mauve beaion lining whipped off to reveal a matching mauve beaion maxi dress with Grecian lines. A shower of hand - rolled fringes cascaded down from the neckline to the hem.

In the beachwear section, Vivian White wore a hand - woven poncho - style cover - up with diagonal stripes and a triangular hem that gave symmetry to the diamond neckline, with a barely-there bikini by Rikma.

Marilyn Vigoda showed off a rainbow striped caftan decorated with beadwork done by Arabic women of the Gaza Strip. It was complemented by a matching shawl headpiece, giving it a distinctly Middle Eastern air. A coat of many colors covered Joy Wonnacott's rich purple bikini that flirted a fringe at the top. Equally seductive was Norma Fainbloom's one piece bathing suit in brilliant cobalt blue dacron.

Coats included a coachman style, one with a matching fedora in sky blue suede topped by a capelet and a bright red one with battle jacket styling and epaulettes inspired by General Moshe Dayan. A double breasted white cotton brocade midi coat with a military "on the tunic. Vera Morphy's three piece pantsuit of brocade with a shoe - stringed longuette vest and hip hugger pants was set off by a sexy see - through blouse of champagne colored chiffon.

A number of pantasuits, knicker suits, daytime dresses and suits were also shown besides a few hot pant outfits. An eyecatching knickee suit was of multicolored suede with green and orange predominating. Some of the designers featured were Rikma, Derbytnit and Yadoli.

The conveners of the show were Mrs. Sydney Rose and Mrs. Robert Zalcowitz. The commentator was Mrs. Flo Yanover and the show was introduced by Mrs. I. Shulman. Organ music was provided by Bill Mann and Chuck Tillbrook. During the intermission Miss Sheila Jourard entertained the gathering with a selection of folk songs and an Israeli song.

The show will be repeated tonight at 8.15 p.m.

Pills for Obesity Nearly Cost Her Life

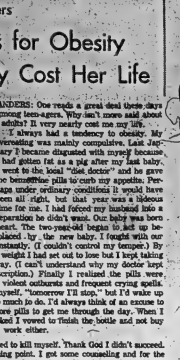
DEAR ANN LANDERS: One reads a great deal these days about drug abuse among teen-agers. Why don't more said about drug abuse among adults? It very nearly cost me my life.

I always had a tendency to obesity. My overeating was mainly compulsive. Last January I became disgusted with myself because I had gotten fat as a pig after my last baby. I went to the local "diet doctor" and he gave me benzedrine pills to curb my appetite. Perhaps under ordinary conditions it would have been all right, but that year was a hideous time for me. I had forced my husband into a separation he didn't want. Our baby was born with a defective heart. The two-year-old began to act up because she felt displaced by the new baby. I fought with our oldest daughter constantly. (I couldn't control my temper.) By May I had lost the weight I had set out to lose but I kept taking the diet pills anyway. (I can't understand why my doctor kept renewing the prescription.) Finally I realized the pills were responsible for the wicked outbursts and frequent crying spells. I kept promising myself, "tomorrow I'll stop," but I'd wake up exhausted with too much to do. I'd always think of an excuse to take just a few more pills to get me through the day. When I realized I was hooked I vowed to finish the bottle and not buy more. That didn't work either.

One night I tried to kill myself. Thank God I didn't succeed. That was the turning point. I got some counseling and for the first time I began to understand myself and my relationship to others. To make a long story short, my husband and I are back together. I'm happier now than I have been at any time in the last 20 years. In evaluating my troubles and how they began, I realize the blame is more mine than the doctor's. But I still think something should be done about physicians like that. Maybe amphetamines wouldn't have wrecked most people, but for me they were disaster.

Housewives should be told that when they want to lose weight, pep pills and diet are not the answer. The pills are not sure to come back after you quit the dope. I am not proud of myself for getting into that syndrome, but I am proud of myself for getting out of it. I am also thankful that I have no pills on my side. I came within inches of being dead. If you use this letter, sign it me — BINGHAMPTON LESSON.

DEAR LESSON: Here it is. And now a word to everyone who is taking amphetamines, for any reason. Please tear out this column and paste it in your medicine cabinet — as a reminder.



* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A recent writer who signed himself "Oklahoma" stated that gasoline, paint thinner and acetone should never be used indoors. He advised the use of kerosene or diesel fuel instead because they are better grease solvents and are non-explosive .This is wrong. Both are explosive.

While kerosene and diesel fuel are safe to use because of their higher flash points, both will burn and explode under the right conditions. If kerosene is applied to a hot engine (shade-tree mechanics often do this) it will give off inflammable vapors which can be ignited at a lower temperature than gasoline vapors.

I just wanted to correct a misleading statement. — FIRE CHIEF IN HOUSTON.

DEAR CHIEF: I am always happy to correct a misleading statement — especially if the statement could lead to an H-alarm fire. (In Texas it could be H — everything is bigger down there!) Thank you for writing.

Successful Living

Blinded Worker Learned Computer Skills

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Some people face a serious handicap with great courage. Phil Thompson was an electrical engineer in his mid 40's when glaucoma made him one of 27,000 Canadians who are blind. He approached the CNIB for a rehabilitation program.

He took a three - month course where he learned the philosophy of blindness and the skills of daily living (use of the white cane, Braille, handling the telephone without seeing the dial and many other touch-type skills).

He learned about the computer training CNIB has arranged with the University of Manitoba and signed up. He learned the five computer languages, the punch card system and the special technique required to program the Model 20 computer.

Now, back on the job, Phil can readily come up with the required solution to most problems, and is very useful in the training of new programmers.

Phil moves freely throughout his department. Has a great patience and does not panic when the going gets tough. — Director of Public Relations, Canadian National Institute for the Blind

Dear Director: Phil proves what we have said before — that there is an answer for every handicap that has the spirit to try. The CNIB makes such things possible for those Canadians who are "seeing-handicapped.

Phil's story is an inspiration and we are glad to have it.

* * *

Dear Doris: Thanks to you for sharing all the knowledge and wisdom your keen mind gathers.

Will you please send further information on the International People's College in Denmark? I retired from a service profession this year and wondered if my mind would stretch enough, there is certainly lots of room and need of knowledge. I would love to broaden my horizons at the same time. — In Anticipation.

Dear Anticipation: There's not a doubt in the world but that your mind would stretch enough. The only thing limiting us is our own interest, or lack of it, in things new and different and exciting.

If I had the time, as you will have, I can't think of anything that would be more delightful than to spend three months at Elsinore, Denmark, relating with other-aged students from various countries and learning something about them, their ideas and their life-styles. (I'm sending you details for follow-up).

Dear Doris: I agree with "Adopted Parents" on abortion. We wanted a large family, so we have acquired children both by birth and adoption. It is our small way of helping fight over-population.

Watching the adopted ones grow, we know they are worth our moments of sacrifice when we could have had a natural child instead. Self-control appraises the humans from the animals.

An easy out is not an easy "in" to heaven. — Just Parents.

Dear Just Parents: You're so right! We could do with more like you.

There are Canadian resources to help solve your problem. Write to Doris for direction, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Variation of Sugar Cookies for 84

— By MARY MOORE

As you know my mind is on the hostesses who are planning showers and receptions for June brides.

As a convenience I have made an 84-cookie batch of varied sugar cookies: plain with sugar sprinkles; pale green with non pareils; pink with walnut or cherry decoration. All very pretty. But the real beauty of them is their buttery, tender mixture. Your proficiency as a cookie maker will be abundantly clear though when you see the results. The chilled dough is rolled between your buttered palms into little ¾" balls. Doing that 84 times takes patience. Furthermore they take only 6-7 min. to bake so you have to keep your eye on the oven all of the time.

SUGAR COOKIES WITH VARIATIONS (84 or more)

½ cup butter
½ cup shortening
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup light brown sugar
1 large egg
2 cups sifted but not sifted cake and pastry flour
1 tsp. baking soda
2 tsps. cream of tartar
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla

Into beater bowl measure butter, shortening and sugars and beat until creamy and light. Beat in egg. Add remaining ingredients and beat until blended. If desired divide dough into three bowls. To one add 5 drops red food coloring. To another add 5 drops green food coloring. Leave third bowl plain (or leave all dough plain). Chill dough until hard.

Remove the bowl of plain dough from refrigerator and spoon out small amount onto your buttered palm and shape into ball. Place on unbuttered non-stick cookie sheet at least 3" apart. Decorate top with red sugar sprinkles and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about six or seven minutes or until you can lift them from pan. Do not brown cookies.

Repeat with remaining bowls of colored dough but put walnut or cherry quarter at center of pink ones and delicate ("Trim-size") at centre of green ones. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 6-7 min. These colored ones must not be browned at all or their delicate shading is marky.

Cool on cake racks and store in cookie tins with sheet of wax paper between each layer.

Slides of James Bay Mission Shown

MARMORA — Rt. Rev. Neville Clarke, Bishop of James Bay and his wife paid a visit to Marmora recently and showed colored slides of their work to a gathering at St. Mark's Church, Boulter. They have just completed two weeks in the Diocese of Ontario at the request of Bishop J. Creegan on behalf of the Anglican World Mission Fund to tell people what work is being done with the money in the Diocese of Moosonee among the Indian people.

Bishop Clarke has spent his entire ministry with Indian people. Both he and his wife speak the Ojibway and Cree languages. They now live in Noranda, Que. and he is responsible for a large territory which covers parts of Quebec and Ontario.

He jokingly told that when he first started as a priest in the mission field he received $45.00 a month and when he asked for and received permission to marry, his salary was raised to $50.00.

His love for the Indian people showed through as he related some of his experiences. Bishop Clarke feels that, because the white man has been responsible for destroying the Indian way of life, it is our Christian duty to help them find their way into our society with a minimum of difficulty.

Bishop Clarke's son, John, is now an ordained minister working at Moosonee. He has helped some of the Indian men form a construction company so that they will become self - supporting and hopes to establish a sawmill in the area. The government has helped by building a large school at Moosonee to teach the men how to build houses and the women how to care for them.

Bishop and Mrs. Clark were happy to see Mr. Sid Cheesman of Marmora whom they had known some years ago in Moosonee. Some of the slides Bishop Clarke showed were of that area so that Mr. Cheesman could see the changes that had taken place there.

Cup Ruled Out-

TORONTO (CP) — Operators of clubs in the Ontario Hockey Association Jr. A series decided at a meeting Tuesday that no plans will be made to include play for the Memorial Cup in next season's schedule.

Last season the OHA and the Quebec Junior Hockey League made a verbal agreement not to play a representative of the Western Canada Hockey League for the Memorial Cup because the WCHL, in a special agreement with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the National Hockey League, were allowed to use four over-age players.

The OHA's Montreal Canadiens were the 1969-71 winners of the Memorial Cup, emblematic of junior hockey supremacy in Canada.

However, midway in the Eastern final series between Quebec Remparts of the QJHL and St. Catharines of the OHA, QJHL president Bob Lebel said that if Quebec won, they would play the WCHL champion Edmonton Oil Kings for the Memorial Cup.

Quebec was later awarded the Eastern title while leading St. Catharines 4-3 in the best-of-seven series when the Black Hawks refused to return to Quebec for a sixth game because they feared violence from Rempart fans.

Quebec went on to beat Edmonton in two straight games for the Memorial Cup and subsequently Fred Mueller, St. Catharines' general manager, was suspended indefinitely by the CAHA.

Schmalz said that the OHA had decided to do nothing about Mueller's suspension until Mueller had appealed the decision.

Running Horse Into Ground?

Trainer-driver Robert Taylor had just finished warming up his trotter, Mateson, and was heading into a tunnel under the main track at the Lexington Trots, but it looked more like he was trying to run a good horse into the ground. Mateson finished third a few minutes later in the $700 event on the harness racing card. (AP Wirephoto)

Both Ali, Ellis Out to Get Joe

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'm out to get Joe!" Muhammad Ali ranted.

Jimmy Ellis is out to get Joe too—but first he wants to get rid of his image as an understudy.

Joe Frazier, heavyweight champion of the world, is the man they're after.

Ali and Ellis took a step on their comeback trails Wednesday, signing for a scheduled 15-round fight July 26 at the Houston Astrodome. The winner will be a likely candidate for another title shot at Frazier.

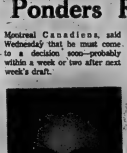
The careers of the two Louisville, Ky., fighters have paralleled each other since they fought, as amateurs, but Ellis spent most of the time in Ali's shadow.

He was the sparring partner when Ali took the championship from Sonny Liston in 1964 and remained in the background until Ali was stripped of the title in 1967 for refusing military induction.

Ellis then came into his own and, with Ali serving as an occasional sparring partner, won the World boxing Association crown.

MUHAMMAD ALI

But Frazier was recognized as the champion by New York and several other states. And on Feb. 16, 1970, Frazier got the rest of it with a fifth round knockout of Ellis in New York's Madison Square Garden.



Then it was Ali's turn, returning after a 3½-year absence and knockout victories over Jerry Quarry and Oscar Bonavena. But he failed against Frazier, losing in 15 rounds last March 8.

Since then Ellis, ranked No. 7, has won three in a row, beating Roberto Davila, Irish Tony Doyle and Canadian champion George Chuvalo of Toronto. He owns a 30-6 record. Ali, at 29 two years younger than Ellis, is 31-1 and ranked No. 1.

Habs Will Protect Beliveau While He Ponders Retirement

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Beliveau's extensive travelling since the Stanley Cup playoffs has not allowed him any time to decide whether to play next season or to retire from active National Hockey League competition.

Beliveau, team captain with Montreal Canadiens, said Wednesday that he must come to a decision soon—probably within a week or two after next week's draft.

JEAN BELIVEAU

"I spoke to Sam—Canadiens' general manager Sam Pollock Monday to confirm what he said about protecting me no matter what I decided," Beliveau said.

"So I appreciate that very much. If he's going to keep my name on the protected list anyway, it gives me a little more time to reach a decision."

Dutch Treat

LONDON (CP) — Ajax Amsterdam became the second Dutch club to win the European Cup in two years when it outclassed Greek side Panathinaikos in the soccer final at Wembley Stadium Wednesday night.

With a goal in each half, Ajax roared to a 2-0 victory to succeed Feyenoord of Rotterdam, last year's winners.

Argos Profit

TORONTO (CP) — Mel Profit, the Toronto Argonaut tight end who became a free agent midnight Monday when he inadvertently let the option clause in his contract run out, has signed for one year with the Eastern Football Conference club.

Derby Favorite Not Definite Entry

EPSOM, England (AP) — Mill Reef, fresh from victory in the classic Epsom Derby, is the favorite today to win the rich Irish Derby June 26.

But will he race?

Ian Balding, 32, who Wednesday became one of the youngest trainers ever to prepare a derby winner, says he's not sure.

"I will have to think about things for three or four days, before deciding what to do next," he told reporters.

Balding will also have to consult with Mill Reef's owner, Pittsburgh business executive Paul Mellon, who scooped the first prize of $147,900 from the four-year old's triumph.

But it is believed the trainer does not favor Mill Reef being subjected to a second classic in three weeks.

Despite the uncertainty, the bookies made Mill Reef odds-on favorite for the Irish race, which carried the hopes and cash of thousands of bettors the world over with tickets for the sweepstakes.

Ladbrokes, which lost $240,000 on Mill Reef's Epsom win, quoted the horse at 8 to 4 to win. Bills made it an even-money bet.

That put Mill Reef way ahead in the pre-race betting stakes. Linden Tree, who finished second Wednesday and third-place Irish Ball were at 10 to 1 for the Irish Derby.

Mill Reef confounded doubters with his clear win in the 193nd derby. Critics had doubted his stamina—but he outclassed and outpaced his 28 rivals.

The result—the third U.S. horse in four years to carry off Britain's biggest racing prize—was never in doubt even before Mill Reef overtook Linden Tree about 350 yards from the post in the 1½-mile event.

"It was the happiest moment in my life," said Mellon, who is no stranger to success with horses. He has had his colors on notable American champions like Arts and Letters, Quadrangel, Sword Dancer and Fort Marcy.

Mill Reef was timed at 2:37.14 and finished two lengths ahead of Linden Tree, who had set the pace for most of the race. Irish Ball was 2½ lengths behind Linden Tree.

Biggest disappointment of the race was second favorite The Parson, owned by Canadian millionaire W. Garfield Weston, Britain's food king.

Ridden by champion jockey Lester Piggott, The Parson never was among the leaders and finished a badly-beaten sixth, cheating Piggott out of what would have been a record-equalling sixth Derby win.

Trainer Noel Murless later said The Parson ran well, though lack of early speed put him out of the running.

Stadium A Must

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Football League has no firm policy on expansion, but commissioner Jake Gaudaur says he does want to see a stadium before the league hands out a 10th franchise.

"The CFL is interested in expansion . . . anywhere—Halifax, London, Quebec City," Gaudaur said. "But we would have to see a stadium first."

White Sox Wild Pitch Puts Orioles on Top

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore Orioles pecked their way to a 3-2 12-inning victory over Chicago White Sox Wednesday night and regained first place in the American League's East Division.

Paul Blair scored the winning run on a base-loaded wild pitch by Terry Forster in the 12th, after dodging a tag by third baseman Bill Melton to reach third on Dave Johnson's one-out grounder.

Brooks Robinson had tied the game with a two-run single in the ninth after Merv Rettenmund kept the rally going by beating out a slow roller to Melton.

The victory, coupled with Boston's 6-1 loss to New York Yankees, sent Baltimore into the division lead for the first time since April 29, with a margin of four percentage points over the skidding Red Sox.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit Tigers slipped Minnesota Twins 5-4; California Angels edged Washington Senators 2-1 in a rain-shortened game and Cleveland Indians topped Milwaukee Brewers 4-2. Kansas City and Oakland were not scheduled.

Tom Bradley, Chicago's young pitching star, stymied the Orioles on three hits until the ninth when Dave Johnson cracked a leadoff ringle. He took second on a balk; before

PAUL BLAIR

Bradley walked Frank Robinson and gave up Rettenmund's infield hit, filling the bases. Brooks Robinson then knotted it 2-2 with single to left.

In the 12th, Vicente Rosso walked Blair, Don Buford sacrificed and Johnson bounced to Melton, who went for the side-stepping Blair and missed the tag. Forster then came out of the White Sox bullpen, walked Boog Powell to fill the bases and tossed the tie-breaking wild pitch.

Bobby Murcer hit his ninth and 10th home runs of the season as the Yankees routed previously-unbeaten Sonny Siebert and handed the Red Sox fifth straight setback behind the six-hit pitching of Stan Bahnsen.

Siebert, who had won 11 in a row—including nine this season —left for a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning trailing 4-0.

The Tigers built a 5-1 lead and then withstood a three-run Minnesota rally in the eighth to climb within 2½ games of the East Division lead.

Clyde Wright checked Washington on four hits and drove in the deciding run with a second-inning single off Denny McLain as the Angels ended a four-game tailspin in a game halted by rain in the top of the eighth.

McLain, 4-9, has lost six of his last seven starts.

Cleveland's Sam McDowell won his fourth straight for a 5-5 mark, but needed ninth-inning relief help as Jim Lonborg beat Milwaukee with a flurry of three unearned runs in the third.

Purse Finder Wants Reward

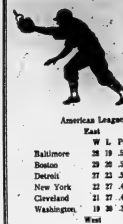
NEW YORK (AP) — Stagdoor Johnny won his first race in 1968 about a month before he won the Belmont Stakes.

Saturday, Purse Finder will try for a similar achievement at the expense of Canonero II, now shooting for thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

"He is getting better every day," trainer Jimmy Conway said Wednesday of Purse Finder, who won the first race of his eight-race career May 12, just three days before Canonero II added the Preakness victory to his win in the Kentucky Derby.



The race that shot Purse Finder, owned by Anthony Imbesi, into the Belmont was last Friday's Peter Pan Purse in which he came from off the pace to pass Mrs. Taylor Hardin's Solo Mio, another Belmont candidate, by nine lengths at the end of 1¼ mile.

Blinkers have helped turn the Maribeau colt into a winner, and although he might not have the racing experience of some of his Belmont rivals, Conway is optimistic about his chances in the $125,000-added 1½-mile classic.

Canonero II and probably eight other three-year-olds will be entered Friday for the Belmont.

Trainer Juan Arias and jockey Gustavo Avila both expressed satisfaction Wednesday after Canonero II worked five-eighths of a mile on the Belmont main track in 1:04. Although this is generally considered a slow move, it was faster than Canonero II's final workout at the same distance for the Derby and the Preakness.

Good Behaving, a triple stakes winner who missed the Derby and the Preakness, was supplemented for the Belmont Wednesday for $5,000. He will be the only supplemental nominee in the race.

Braves May Get Bat Bill

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don't be surprised if Atlanta Braves receive a bill in the mail from New York Mets one of these days for the use of one of their bats.

Hal King of the Braves, who has fallen in love with one of the bats of Dave Marshall of the Mets, used it Wednesday night to hit a two-run homer and give the Braves a 3-1 victory over Houston Astros.

King's homer with Marshall's bat broke a seventh-inning tie for the Braves and gave Phil Ca's losing streak at seven games.

King's romance with Marshall's bat began 10 days ago when the Braves were in New York.

"It was just laying there, so I picked it up and felt it," said King. "I liked it and since the Mets left it there on the rack, I took it."

The borowed bat made good contact for King twice. The first time Houston's Cesar Cedeno, who made three outstanding catches in the game, robbed him of a homer by leaning over the centre field fence to spear his drive. The second shot in the seventh produced one of the longest homers ever hit in Atlanta, a towering drive that hit the facade of the club level in right field.

The Mets could afford to be generous with their power bats. They got enough late hitting to overcome a 3-0 deficit and beat San Francisco and longtime nemesis Juan Marichal. It was only Marichal's fourth loss in 27 lifetime decisions against New York.

Wait 'til Flyers Meet Fred!

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If Philadelphia Flyers coach Vic Stasiuk was tough, wait until they meet new head coach Fred Shero.

A number of the Flyers' players complained so long and so loud about Stasiuk that the National Hockey League club fired the coach last week. Wednesday, Shero was signed to a three-year contract.

Who is Shero?

A 45-year-old native of Winnipeg, Shero has been a coach in hockey's minor leagues for the last 13 years in the New York Rangers' system.

Flyers' general manager Keith Allen noted the record Shero had compiled in the minors—five first place finishes and a number of playoff titles —and decided to hire him to succeed Stasiuk.

The first thing the quiet-spoken Shero said after signing his contract was that he runs a disciplined team and that includes so-called stars.

"I ran a very disciplined team, and in the course of the game we will play a very disciplined style of hockey," he told a news conference Wednesday.

"Other than that I'm no stricter than any other coach," he said. "The time for coming in the night before a game is 11 o'clock, and if we have a couple of days off they can stay out a bit longer. But when we go on the road I definitely want them to be in their own rooms at 11 o'clock at night. And there is no other way they should be out."

Shero said he has hardly ever fined a player because generally the player gets the money back.

"I think there are better ways to discipline a person," he declared. "The most embarrassing thing for an athlete is to sit on the bench or miss a few shifts. That hits the entire game for disciplinary reasons. It's a very, very hard thing for him to do. In fact he'd rather pay a $100 fine than miss a shift."

Shero, who played three years of defence for the Rangers before starting his coaching career in 1957-58, has had only one team lower than third. Only once in his coaching career has his team been under .500 in a season. His over-all mark is 490-321-185.

The Flyers finished their season third in the NHL's West Division, but were eliminated from the Stanley Cup Playoffs in four first-round games by Chicago Black Hawks.

Only 32 Survive

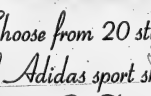
CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — Thirty-two survivors emerged today from an original field of 256 in the British Amateur golf championship and the most confident of the whole lot was a freckled-faced 21-year-old Texan.

"I really feel good here and I really like this course," said Tom Kite Jr. of McKinney, Tex.



Kite is one of six Americans still left out of 65 who first entered the match-play competition at Carnoustie's 6,828-yard par 72 seaside links.

Kite has waltzed through his three matches here without ever walking past the 13th green.

The fourth round of the championship pitted Kite against Walter Black of Scotland.

Tweed Trout Biting

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two Toronto fishermen landed four whitefish in Lake Nipissing Monday and they totalled 40½ pounds.

"I didn't know what I had," said Carl White, 39. "It took more than a half hour to get that fish in the boat."

The fish he was talking about weighed 18 pounds and was one of four that weighed more than 40 pounds in total.

He said the fish were caught on orditlity hooks with worms as bait.

"Mind you, there were two worms on the hook that caught the big one," he said.

Carl Monk, a department of lands and forests information officer, said the 16-pound white fish was the largest he had ever heard of caught on hook and line.

He said commercial fishermen had reported fish weighing 30 pounds.

However, although the department said fishing was improving throughout the province, most species are still down.

Reports the department's Tweed district:

Tweed—Bancroft division, lake trout good in Weslemakon Lake and speckled trout good in streams, especially Eagle, Craigmont and Papineau creeks. Bright fair in Pudash and Baptiste lakes with live bait. Panfish good in all waters. Deer: Grindle, fair to good in Clear and Burns lakes and pike and pickerel good in Centennial Lake. Smallmouth good in small streams. Tweed division, pike good in Stoco, Beaver, Mink, White and Big lakes. Pickerel good in Beaver, Moira, Long Bass and Cox lakes. Smallmouth fair to good in Little Round Lake. Napanee division, pike and pickerel fair in Consecon and West lakes.

One Night Would Do

The Belleville Minor Softball Association is looking for men in uniforms — umpires' uniforms that is.

The minor softball group, which is into the second week of its schedule still requires six volunteers to officiate the contests. Since umpires work only one night a week, it would place limited demands on their time.

The league currently faces the possibility of cancelling a number of scheduled games if umpires cannot be found.

Belleville minor baseball participants Greg Bradshaw, Jack Oole and Bill Whelan are backed up by Gerry Downs, sports chairman of the Canadian Legion Branch 99, which sponsors two house league and one representative minor baseball team. Sponsors provide approximately half of all the revenue received by minor sports in the city.

Sponsors Behind Scenes

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

A key figure in minor sports, and one who is often overlooked, is "the man behind the man behind the boy behind the bat", in other words the sponsors.

They are supplying money for the chance to put their name before the public, as well as assisting youngsters in their sporting endeavors contribute about half of the income received for minor sports in the city with the remainder being realized from United Services donations player fees, etc.

One of the more recent organizations to enter the sponsorship field is the Canadian Legion Branch 99. The Legion began sponsoring a minor baseball league team three years ago and has since undertaken the financing of two more teams.

What benefit does a group such as the Legion receive from sponsoring minor sports?

"It's good public relations for one thing," says sports chairman Gerry Downs. "A lot of people have the idea that we're just a bunch of old veterans who sit around and drink, and this is one of the ways that we can become involved in work for the community.

"Another thing," he adds, "is that it helps the boys themselves mature and develop sportsmanship. After all, what better place is there to learn sportsmanship than playing sports."

The Legion has a sports committee of six members working under Downs to coordinate their sports program, but are able to draw active support from a large number of their members.

Besides the actual sponsorship the club undertakes projects such as providing minor baseball with flags to help decorate the field for affairs such as tournaments.

Among the plans for future years are the sponsorship of a hockey team next winter and branching out into various other sports at a future date.

Undoubtedly the biggest single sponsor in minor sports is the Belleville Kinsmen Club which finances a junior baseball team, the Kinsmen track club and the bantam all-star hockey squad in addition to a number of house league clubs in the various sports.

Sponsorship really got under way about three years ago with the Kinsmen being the first group to investigate the possibilities fully.

From only four or five sponsors the previous year, they jumped to close to 40 in 1968 and added 20 more the following year. Since then all minor sports have greatly increased the number of sponsored teams within their ranks.

Minor hockey receives the largest total of sponsorship funds with an income of $2,500 for all-star teams and over $1,000 from the various house league supporters.

All-star team sponsorship carries the biggest price tag with the rate for a minor hockey all-star team being set at $500 per year. Sponsors for minor softball and baseball all star squads spend in the neighborhood of $200 per season.

Minor hockey sponsors are asked to contribute $125 the first season that they sponsor a team and $50 per year after that, while the remainder of the house league sponsorships run at approximately $50 for each team.

Beach Busy Since Leaving City

TORONTO (CP) — Pete Beach, who left a Belleville London, Ont., where he worked at the Y and attended the University of Western Ontario.

For six years he was chairman of physical education for the YMCA of Canada. From 1963 to 1967 he was national track and field chairman of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Pete plans to wind up his OFSSA duties at the end of June, but will stay on to help his successor, G. B. (Bev) Goulding, vice-principal at Peterborough Collegiate.

Pete was a housemaster at Albert College when he was offered the job of running the OFSSA and it took him a year to make up his mind.

"The work has reached the point where it's too much," he said. "If the OFSSA setup is going to remain as it is, the only thing we can do is decentralize."

One possibility he sees is dividing the province into four districts with top teams and athletes from each area qualifying for provincial finals.

The first OFSSA track meet Pete had anything to do with had 78 schools and 300 competitors," he says.

"This year, there will be 1,100 competitors from 300 schools."

When he took over, there were 220 schools in the association "and something like 200 kids."

"Now there are more than 800 schools and 500,000 kids."

The number of member associations has grown to 17 from 10 and the number of sports declaring provincial champions from two-basketball and track —to 14.

Pete joined Albert College in 1935 and, except for four years as director of YMCA activities for Canadian forces overseas, has said he never could be left for the OFSAA post.

He was born in Chelmsford, England, moving to Toronto with his parents at the age of nine.

He left school at 14 and worked for 10 years, then obtained a Bay of Quinte soccer match — up between the two Belleville rivals as the defending league champions split the United defence repeatedly to chalk up a 7-2 win.

Kevin Kirby counted early in the contest for Parsons cashing in a rebound from Tony Goncalves. Two minutes later they struck again with Charlie Nestorovski picking up the score.

A trio of quick goals finished the scoring in the first half with Parsons holding a 3-0 lead after goals by Goncalves, Peter Hillier and Peter Kontzoglis.

United came to life in the second half counting goals by Joe Romano and Dave Hadley, to close the gap, but a pair of goals by Graham Eggerton squashed any comeback hopes.

Eggerton, one of the standout performers for Parsons was playing his last game before moving out of the district. His place in the Parsons lineup will be taken by former United player Stuart Mitton.

A scheduaid game between Whitley Insurance and Quinte Transport had to be postponed until a later date because of wet grounds.

Bowling Lives !

Belleville bowlers have a chance to get on the grass this summer while still enjoying their favorite sport.

The Belleville lawn bowling club is holding an open house for prospective members from June 7-13 with instruction available for newcomers.

Instructional films will be shown Friday, June 4 beginning at 8:30 p.m. at the club located at 40 Bridge Street East.

Barbeau Gets Bargain

Wednesday was a bargain night at Towers Food City as far as Rick Barbeau was concerned, with the Queens Motel forward potting five goals to lead his team to a 6-2 Belleville Minor Lacrosse victory.

Sandy Waterson completed the scoring for the winning bantam squad, while Cal Hyderman and Gord Male replied for Towers.

Sleepers Sears' bantams weren't giving out any bargains as they shut out the 707 Jets 7-0. Scoring for the winners were Robert Bruce, Don Bruce, R. Chapman (3), Paul Roberts, Kent Manning and Pat Nuttall.

In the final bantam encounter of the evening Bud Gill Appliances squeaked out a 2-1 win over Hobs Sports. Ricky Cook and Rob Richardson looked after the Bud Gill scoring, while Gary Thompson tallied for the losers.

In an exhibition encounter Eric Watkins juveniles bested their Middleton Park counterparts 4-1 getting a pair of goals from Rick Watt and singles by Gerald Orser and Graham Wilkins. The only Middleton Park counter went to Darryl Donnelly.

Pay Raise Passed

Minority MPs Restate Views on Salary Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs overwhelmingly voted themselves a pay raise Wednesday after half a dozen last-minute reservations about the increase.

The vote was 149 to 30, with 106 Liberals, 41 Conservatives, one New Democrat and one Independent supporting the bill.

Sixteen New Democrats, 12 Social Crediters and two Conservatives opposed the bill and J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) abstained.

Standing in the 264-seat House: Liberal 151; Conservative 72, NDP 24, Social Credit 12, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, vacant 1.

The four members elected in Monday's byelections have not yet been seated.

The bill would increase salaries of MPs and senators 50 per cent—to $18,000 from $12,000.

The free allowances for MPs would go to $8,000 from $6,000 and those of senators to $4,000 from $3,000.

The increases—the first since 1963—take effect retroactively to last Oct. 8, the start of the current parliamentary session.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

The Commons later gave second reading to a government bill to increase first-class letter rates to seven cents July 1 and eight cents Jan. 1 from the present six cents.

That measure now goes to committee for detailed study.

Today's debate is devoted to a Conservative motion of concern about the government's "continuing repudiation of its duty to establish full-employment programs and policies."

With the summer recess looming at the end of the month, the Commons agreed Wednesday to meet early on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays in the next two weeks.

On those days the House will sit at 11 a.m. EDT instead of the usual 2 p.m.

Also Wednesday, Finance Minister Edgar Benson confirmed speculation that the budget will be read to the Commons Friday, June 18 at 3 p.m. after all Canadian stock exchanges are closed.

In the salary debate, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) repeated that the increase is badly timed, when the government is calling for restraint in the economy.

Mr. Knowles, who voted against the increase, said that while many MPs—including himself—faced a financial pinch, they represent Canadians who also find it hard to make ends meet.

The increase for MPs was an offensive example and many Canadians condemned the privileges of the tax-free allowances.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who voted against the bill with the other members of his party who were in the House, called it most inappropriate timing to vote the increase now.

He said secretarial help for MPs and the price of offices in their ridings would have been better.

Gilbert Rondeau (SC—Shefford) said the government always pleads budget limits when the opposition requests increases in old age pensions. Bill the government found the money for the bill.

Rene Matte (SC—Champlain), Andre Fortin (SC—Lotbiniere) and Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) echoed the criticisms of the increases in the old age pension.

An opponent of the bill, Mr. Harding compared the wage-increase target of the prices and incomes commission of 4½ per cent to the 50-per-cent pay increase and 33 1-3-per-cent allowance increase for MPs.

DOUGLAS MEAGHER, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Meagher, Bridge St. East, Belleville received his bachelor of applied science degree (mechanical engineering) from the University of Ottawa at convocation ceremonies held May 26, 1971. Mr. Meagher, who has accepted a position with Bell Canada in Cornwall, attended Nicholson Catholic College in Belleville.

Burlington Seeking More Zoning Power

TORONTO (CP) — The Town of Burlington asked the private bills committee of the Ontario legislature Wednesday for broader powers under the Planning Act in matters of land zoning.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales, whose department is responsible for the act, opposed the original wording of the bill, however, after several amendments, the bill was approved by the committee.

It now goes to the house for second reading.

Mr. Bales said the original wording would have given Burlington council some powers equal to those held only by his department and he feared the repercussions it could cause in other communities.

One of the amendments to the bill would increase salaries for planning board members, scheduled to be released this summer, will include general widening of land-zoning powers, Mr. Bales said.

The committee later approved a similar bill from the City of London, including the nullifying clause.

Both Burlington and London criticized the long delays in receiving zoning approval from the Ontario Municipal Board while developers and ratepayers are seeking urgent action.

Two bills — one from London and another from the City of Windsor—were referred to the procedural committee because their interpretation did not coincide with their original format when they had been presented to the house for first reading.

Stanbury's Office Staff 2nd Biggest to Trudeau

HARRY ERNEST HUFFMAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Apart from Prime Minister Trudeau, the man in charge of Information Canada has the biggest ministerial staff in Ottawa.

A Commons return for Robert Coates, Conservative MP for Cumberland-Colchester North, says that Robert Stanbury, minister without portfolio, has a personal staff of 14, an increase of 11 from a year ago.

Mr. Stanbury has an executive assistant, two special assistants, an administrative assistant, a research assistant, even secretaries and a confidential messenger. Even the executive assistant has a secretary.

By contrast, the two other ministers without portfolio have much smaller staffs.

Jean-Pierre Cote, minister in charge of the post office, has cut his ministerial staff to five from seven a year ago.

Robert Andras, minister in charge of housing, has a ministerial staff of seven, an increase of three in a year.

Mr. Trudeau's personal staff numbers 9, an increase of nine in the last year.

Most ministers have a staff of eight.

Some of the busiest ministers have the smallest staffs.

For instance, Finance Minister E. J. Benson and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp each has a personal staff of eight, the same number as a year ago.

Defence Minister Donald Macdonald's staff numbers six.

Officials said Mr. Stanbury's staff is the largest in parliamentary history apart from that of the prime minister.

His highest-paid staff member is Alan (Doc) Thomas, his executive assistant, who is paid $20,000 a year, more than many of Mr. Trudeau's aides.

Other ministers besides Mr. Cote have managed to reduce their personal staffs in the last year.

These include Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford, Energy Minister J. J. Greene, Privy Council President Alan MacEachen, Transport Minister Don Jamieson and Treasury Board President C. M. Drury.

Another Commons return for Stanley Schumacher, Conservative MP for Palliser, shows that the Arctic department has copied Information Canada's example of holding staff meetings outside Ottawa at public expense.

Information Canada has first held a meeting at plush Gray Rocks Inn in the Laurentians.

Senior officials of the works department met in April at the exclusive Seigniory Club at Montebello, Que., at a cost of $20,573.

Works Minister Arthur Laing told Mr. Schumacher the meeting was held in Montebello, 50 miles east of here, because "the Seigniory Club 'environment . . . would minimize the potential conflict between the normal operating responsibilities of the participants and the conference objectives."

Recess Expected June 30

DONALD WARD DESAULNIERS, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Desaulniers of Belleville received his bachelor of laws degree from the University of Western Ontario at convocation exercises held May 28. Mr. Desaulniers, who also holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Waterloo (1968), has accepted an articling position with a local law firm.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons will sit six extra hours in each of the next two weeks to clear away work before the summer adjournment, expected to begin Wednesday, June 30.

By all-party agreement in the Commons Wednesday, the House will meet at 11 a.m. rather than 2 p.m. EDT on the Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursday in the two weeks ending June 19, rising one hour for lunch on those days. The house sits from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays and from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Wednesdays.

The sitting of Friday, June 18, will be extended, however, Finance Minister Edgar Benson will bring down a budget at 8 p.m. EDT on that day as well as changes in the Income Tax Act.

Parliament's summer recess is expected to end Tuesday, Sept. 7, the day after Labor Day.

Firestone STORES

Why belts?

Why are more and more motorists paying the extra money for belted tires?
Because belted tires give longer mileage. There are two special belts designed to hold the tread firmly and prevent side-to-side "squirm". By preventing this scrubbing action, those belts prolong the life of the tread. And they also give you more protection from potholes and other road hazards.
Just one more thing about belted tires. It's the construction that makes the belted difference . . . not the cord material that goes into the belts.

Why Firestone?

Our belted tires have something special; Triple-Strength Construction. So we can give you a really exceptional GUARANTEE FOR THE LIFE OF THE TREAD. No gimmicks. No mileage limit. No time limit.
Allowances are based on the percentage of tread left on the tire. When the tread life occurs when the tread is worn down to the "wear bars". (The Federal Government says all tires must have wear bars to show when the tread is no longer safe.)
Your tire will be replaced FREE within the first 20% of tread life if a defect in workmanship or materials means that the tire must be taken off your car.
At 25% of wear, you pay one quarter of the replacement price. And so on.
And remember this. 60,000 Firestone Stores and Dealers all over North America stand behind your guarantee. No matter where you buy your Firestone tires.
This outstanding guarantee is a good reason to choose Firestone.
The fact that you'll probably never need it is an even better reason.

Why now?

Right now is the right time to replace those worn out tires.
Because right now you'll really start piling on the miles.
On hot highways. Busy highways. Deserted sideroads. If a tire fails it can be mighty inconvenient. Or you may not be that lucky. So bring your car in today to Firestone for a free tire safety inspection.
Here's another reason why right now is the right time to put your car on sale new tires. The deals are really SunSational at Firestone. Especially on our Double Belted Strato-Streak. But we've got all kinds of deals on all kinds of tires for all kinds of cars. Right now.

Agreement To Fight Pollution Is Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — The government expects to come to terms with the United States next week on a program to rescue the lower Great Lakes from death by pollution.

The program is one laboriously compiled by the International Joint Commission and would cost the U.S. an estimated $1.4 billion and Canada $211 million.

Among its aspects is the goal of eliminating phosphates from detergents discharged into the Great Lakes by the end of 1972.

Another is a proposal that the IJC be given the power to act as watch-dog and supervisor of the massive cleanup.

Optimism that the program will be accepted was contained in a statement released Wednesday by the fisheries department which outlined the agenda for a ministerial meeting in Washington June 10.

The statement adds that Canada will benefit from the program in enough gross proportion than the United States in that "by far the largest inputs of pollution (Roughly 10 times) are coming from the United States side."

Along with steps to eliminate phosphorous discharges, the commission made 21 other recommendations. Among them were proposals for:

—Adoption of clean water standards for Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the international section of the St. Lawrence River;

—Controls on the runoff of herbicides and pesticides;

—A program to establish, enlarge or improve, as a matter of urgency, facilities to treat municipal and industrial sewage;

—A review and improvement of laws controlling disposal of solid wastes in the lakes;

—Creation by Canada, and improvement by the U.S., of contingency plans to deal with oil spills;

—An initial temporary end to offshore oil and "wet gas" production and exploration in Lake Erie and Ontario;

—Steps to exclude from the lakes tankers that were "likely to present an unreasonable risk of pollution by oils, hazardous or radioactive materials."

DAVID HAROLD EMERSON, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Emerson, Trent Rd., Belleville, received a bachelor of arts degree (economics major) from the University of Waterloo at convocation held May 27, 1971. He is a graduate of Nicholson College.

Fischer Confident He's Best

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bobby Fischer, fresh from a one-sided victory here over Soviet grandmaster Mark Taimanov, said Wednesday he is confident he will go on to win the world chess title.

The Russian resigned Wednesday without further play in the adjourned sixth game of their quarter-final elimination match to seek a challenger for the world crown, giving Fischer a 6-0 sweep of the best-of-10-match.

"The Soviets have been putting up road blocks for me for years, but I know I'm the best," said the 28-year-old Fischer, a native of Brooklyn, NY. "I should have been world champion 10 years ago."

He said he stands to make "easily $100,000 a year as a professional" if he wins the world title, now held by Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union.

He received $1,250 in prize money for his win here while Taimanov got $750.

Fischer, a grandmaster since he was 15, next meets Bent Larsen of Denmark in a semi-final scheduled to start July 4 at a site yet to be determined. The Danish grandmaster defeated grandmaster Wolfgang Uhlmann of East Germany, 5½-3½.

The other semi-final starts July 4 in Moscow between Tigran Petrosian and Viktor Korchnoi, both of the U.S.S.R. Petrosian defeated Robert Hubner of West Germany 4-3 and Korchnoi beat fellow Russian Yefim Geller 5½-2½.

Cote Says Best Mail Service Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will have the fastest, most mechanized postal service in the world in a few years, Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible told the Commons Wednesday.

He described current changes in the post office organization and service, including a large construction program, a five-year mechanization program costing $80 million, and addition of cities hooked into the "assured delivery" system that guarantees next-day delivery.

The minister said a "super-fast" service is coming, offering next-day delivery but with later mailing deadlines and higher rates.

He was speaking in second reading debate on the government's bill to increase first-class letter rates to seven cents July 1 and eight cents next Jan. 1 from the present six cents.

The Commons voted second reading 89 to 64.

The measure would also increase the cost of third class mail. Rate for the first two ounces would rise to six cents from five. The three-cent rate for each additional two ounces would remain.

The government had given careful thought to turning the post office into a Crown corporation as recommended by a consultant in 1969, Mr. Cote said.

"The country will hear soon about that."

Service Planned

KINGSTON (CP) — A commemorative service will be held here Sunday to mark the 60th anniversary of the death of Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister.

Lt.-Col. Louis J. Flynn, president of the Kingston Historical Society, said Wednesday the service will be held at Sir John's grave.

He said dignitaries participating will include federal Finance Minister E. J. Benson, Kingston Mayor Valorie Swain and Syl Apps, Ontario minister of correctional services.

Sir John was Conservative prime minister from 1867 to 1873 and again from 1878 until his death in 1891.

Chartrand Acquitted

MONTREAL (CP) — A 12-man jury Wednesday acquitted labor leader Michel Chartrand of contempt of court charges stemming from remarks made at a news conference in 1969.

When the jury returned with its verdict after deliberating only an hour, Chartrand leaped from his seat and hurried to the back of the courtroom to shake hands with each juror.

He then gave an impromptu news conference in which he told reporters:

"The case shows that the people and I are always in complete agreement. Well, perhaps not always.

Ottawa Subsidy Train Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian National Railways has asked the Canadian transport commission for permission to end 15 uneconomic passenger-train services costing the company an estimated $4.1 million annually.

The largest losses—$2.2 million—involve operations between Ottawa and Toronto and Ottawa and Brockville. The estimates are company figures.

The other 13 services are in Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The application is a first step toward discontinuance of the services or a federal subsidy of 80 per cent of the losses on operations that are ordered maintained.

Ontario services included in the application: Ottawa-Brockville, Ottawa-Toronto, Hearst-Nakina, Hornepayne-Manitouwadge, Sioux Lookout-Thunder Bay.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For June 4

Your birthday today: Whatever you do now turns out different, often better than expected as you put more of yourself into your work and thinking. Much of what has to be done this year is in new directions, with unfamiliar tools and methods. Your income and spending both rise but you have more fun choosing how it goes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Step aside from personal disagreements and rivalry while you prepare for an exceptional weekend of special activities.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Social contacts include excitement, additional details on old stories and revelations of things you should have known but did not. Maintain practical management of personal affairs.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): This is an easier day in all important respects. There seems little definite proof of your current achievements, but actually none is needed at the moment.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): In your emotional surges you say more than you intend, or something you say can mean more to listeners than to you.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Have the grace to offer thanks where you have been helped. Tidy up the week's program quickly, even if some routines are skimped.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Housecleaning, literal and symbolic, is the action for the day. Bid goodbye to all that is finished and overdue for departure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Promises are easily made and difficult to keep; settle for the best of the moment instead of them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Economy of time and money is probably needed. Simplify plans, cut out side trips or extra projects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Much depends on how well you listen. Your informal manner puts people off their guard a little and interesting stories come out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Changes among associates and their connections are promised; some of them very good in that a new path opens for your development. Finish the work week neatly.

AAUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Personal concerns distract you from serious work. Take the time to listen to those around you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Squabbles escalate into quarrels if you let them. Money and material pleasures are the most likely causes for contention.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Hemorrhoids seem to be my weak spot. Otherwise I am completely healthy. I was operated on about a year ago, but they have already appeared again. Isn't there some other way except operation or injections that can take care of these bothersome things? — Mr. O.

COMMENT: Many say they are "cursed" by varicose veins of the legs which mar their beauty; others, by varicose veins of the rectum or anus (hemorrhoids) which cause discomfort and bleeding, the "curse." Some just seem to have weaker veins than others.

I think you will be interested, Mr. O., in a letter I received the other day from a specialists in rectal diseases. Although I am not familiar with the treatment suggested, perhaps you can ask your own doctor about it.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was most interested in your recent column in regard to treatment for piles. I am a specialist in colorectal surgery, and found that your column was most informative for consumption by the general public.

There's a treatment that we use called "Barron Ligature", in which the internal hemorrhoids are tied off by means of rubber bands. This is surgery in a limited sense, but is painless and can be performed in the office over a few visits.

Many patients who previously underwent a hemorrhoidectomy in the hospital, with the subsequent discomfort, have been treated by means of Barron Ligature technique with little or no discomfort and excellent results.

I think this treatment has a lot to offer, but is limited in respect to the severity of the hemorrhoids. I hope this information is helpful to you.—A., MD (Pennsylvania)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am anemic. We know the reason. My doctor says it's due to the bleeding caused by a fibroid I have in my uterus. He advises hysterectomy. Is this a reason enough to have my uterus removed. — Mrs. U.

COMMENT: I can't make specific recommendations in individual cases. But as a general rule severe anemia caused by bleeding fibroids is reason enough for operation.

I know one woman who has large fibroid, and is deteriorating healthwise, yet is stubbornly refusing to have an operation. Some women are so emotionally-and psychologically involved, that they won't part with a uterus that is manifestly diseased. (Some men feel the same way about having a prostate gland removed.)

I don't believe in the "whole-sale" hysterectomies we used to have years ago, whenever there was a small outgrowing, nonbleeding fibroid was discovered, many considered it reason enough for removal of the uterus then. We are more conservative now.

Unless a fibroid grows larger or causes other trouble, we usually leave it alone. Just keep track of it every few months to see whether it is behaving. But a fibroid that acts up is the proverbial horse of another color. It's better out than left in.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 57 years old. Lately I have been having trouble with my stomach and feet swelling. I have no pain. When I get up in the morning, the swelling goes down again. During the day my shoes feel tight and my girdle almost kills me. Shall I go see about it? — Mrs. Z.

COMMENT: The answer is yes. And I think you agree, Mrs. Z.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Sande Doubt Their Sanity

Thoughts at Large: Nelson Rockefeller, as defined by Adam Smith, nor communism, as defined by Karl Marx, exists anywhere in the world: and the ideological disputes between nations today are simply a pickeying for power and dominance masquerading as a high-minded principle.

• • •

Nobody is wholly sane who does not at times question his own sanity; only the incorrigible paranoid is permanently convinced that he is always rational.

• • •

Americans, in the main, have a defective sense of public sportsmanship: they fail to see that it consists of cheering the home team, but stops short at booing the opponents (especially at tense moments) when all spectators who truly love a sport should show a decent respect for the skill of the game by refraining from "riding" a player.)

• • •

Revelations of U.S. army spying on civilians confirms what E. B. White observed many years ago, that "An intelligence service is, in fact, a stupidity service."

• • •

Nature abhors a mental vacuum, too: when a mind is devoid of ideas, it fills it with prejudices that call themselves convictions.

• • •

Instead of those absurd books on "civics" most high school classes are assigned, civilized youths be given Walter Goodman's new book "A Percentage of the Take," as a realistic study in urban corruption and the dynamics of city government even in a "decent" administration like John Lindsay's.

• • •

What most middle-aged people resent about youth today is not that they repudiate our wisdom (which they have a right to do), but they injure our vanity by the arrogant assumption that nobody beyond the 20s is physically attractive or sexually to be taken seriously.

• • •

The circular nature of arguments was best explained by James Harvey Robinson, the historian, when he said: "Most of our so-called 'reasoning' consists in finding new arguments for going on believing as we already do."

• • •

A woman rarely finds shoes that fit both the occasion and her feet; and she invariably opts for the former and complains about the latter.

Tomorrow Could Be The Last Friday You Remember.

Another weekend awaits — only hours away. And while that's good to know, for some people, it's no good at all.

It's no good because some people only exist Monday through Thursday. And live for Friday and the weekend. Their work offers no creative challenge or opportunity to earn as much money as they want to earn.

If Friday Anxiety is starting to catch up with you, I'd like you to consider how you can catch up with yourself and your own ambitions through life insurance sales. I'm looking for one or two people who enjoy working with men and women. People who want to translate hard work into deep satisfaction and an exceptionally good income.

We're offering a darn good salary to begin with, and a professional opportunity with no limit.

If you're interested please phone me tomorrow Friday. It could be the last Friday you remember.

Trade War Could Worsen

OTTAWA (CP) — The trade war among the provinces could get worse, a Montreal lawyer told the Supreme Court of Canada Wednesday.

Richard Rémillard, representing the Quebec Food Council, gave his warning as the court ended three days of hearings on the validity of a Manitoba plan to control egg marketing within its borders.

"Today it is agricultural products," he said. "Tomorrow it could be manufactured goods."

While only the Manitoba proposal was argued, very much at issue is a similar plan already in operation in Quebec. It, in turn, inspired other provinces to bar the entry of chickens and eggs from outside.

The court, as is usual in important cases, reserved its decisions. But it is expected to render judgment before it takes its summer holidays June 28.

Manitoba led the fight to bring the question to the high court. To do so, it was forced to draft legislation similar to Quebec's, to which it strongly objected, and then refer it to its own high court for an opinion on its constitutionality.

When the Manitoba Court of Appeal rejected the plan as beyond provincial powers, the government of Premier Ed Schreyer appealed the decision to the Supreme Court.

It is Manitoba's hope that the nine justices will uphold the decision of the provincial court, thus striking down all of the trade barriers erected during the chicken and egg war.

Regulations for a producers board showed clearly that the idea was to protect domestic producers at the expense of out-of-province farmers.

Not a single egg could be sold in the province without the board's approval if the plan was to come into effect, said Mr. Rieudeau.

The board would be exclusive sales agent for all eggs; all eggs must be graded and packed at stations established by the board.

The board also had the power to fix minimum prices and to establish quotas.

John Morden of Toronto, appearing for the Meat Packers Council of Canada, said that just because all producers were treated alike under the plan didn't mean it was valid.

Russia Buys Wheat

'Golda on 1, Nixon on 2, Heath on 3, and an obscene on 4!'

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and Russia today signed a contract for a sale of 130 million bushels of Canadian wheat to the Soviet Union for $235 million.

Immigration Minister Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, announced the contract in the Commons soon after the signing.

Delivery of the wheat will begin this month and continue through 1972. The major portion will be shipped during the r- of this year and the early p: of next.

Mr. Lang and Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said in a joint statement that the sale involves two contracts.

The first is for 38,400,000 bushels to complete the outstanding purchase obligation under the 1966 Canada-Russia wheat agreement.

The second covers 81,500,000 bushels, an additional sale.

Of the total, 350,000 tons will be shipped in the form of flour..

U.S. Car-making Tools Will Be Sold to Russia

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has approved licences for export to the Soviet Union of $85 million worth of equipment for manufacturing autos and trucks, the Washington Post says.

The authorization amounts to more than two-thirds the dollar value of U.S. exports to the Soviet Union last year, the newspaper reports.

Some of the export licence applications were nearly two years old and had been held up because they were considered strategic in nature. The Post said. The defence department had argued the export of automotive machinery and machine tools would strengthen the Soviets' military capability.

The approval is seen as an attempt to open new U.S. trade opportunities and broaden political and diplomatic relations with the Russians, the Post says.

Toronto Promised Rapid-transit Aid

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has ruled that Toronto's controversial Spadina Expressway will never get to where it was going.

The major traffic artery was to have run from the 12-lane Macdonald-Cartier Freeway — also known as Highway 401 — in northwestern Metropolitan Toronto to downtown College Street.

Vocal citizens' groups for two years have expressed their opposition to the six-mile "river of concrete" which they said would help destroy Toronto as a place for people.

Metro politicians, especially those from the borough of North York which lies across the northern side of the metropolitan area, were equally vocal in their support of the $237,000,000 project.

The hassle was conducted in meetings and print, producing yards of editorials and letters to the editor.

Expressway opponents took the question to the Ontario Municipal Board, hiring leading lawyer J. J. Robinette to state their case.

Two members of the board approved the expressway, which was to include a rapid-transit line, but Chairman J. A. Kennedy ruled against its completion.

Then the question was passed to the provincial cabinet.

Premier William Davis announced Thursday that the expressway would be stopped, but he said the government will increase support for alternate transportation systems, including rapid-transit services.

In the wake of his announcement, the cabinet decision was called a beginning, an end, a symbol and a blunder.

The premier said the cabinet took note of rising public anxiety over pollution and environmental control.

Premier Davis and some opposition members and anti-Spadina citizens groups linked his statement to public pressure.

Some members of the legislature, several municipal authorities and others blasted the announcement as the work of political weaklings.

The premier replied these critics were not aware of changing public moods, especially among the young.

He said the cabinet took notice of rising public anxiety over pollution and environmental control.

Spadina opponents declared: the inner-city expressway concept is out of date; a way of life in what now is a quiet residential community would be swept away forever; air and noise pollution level would be intolerable, and the delicately balanced business structure off Toronto's rich garment district would be irreparably disrupted — all of this, they said, merely to save 7,000 rush - hour motorists 12 minutes a day.

"If we are building a transportation system to serve the people, the Spadina Expressway is a good place to stop."

Ontario NDP Leader Stephen Lewis called the Spadina decision "a symbolic issue" outside of Toronto, "where people regarded Spadina as an environ-

East Pakistan Refugees Flee Cholera Epidemic

CALCUTTA (AP) — East Pakistani refugees poured into Calcutta Thursday to escape a cholera epidemic that has already claimed hundreds of lives.

The epidemic first broke out last week in the many East Pakistani refugee camps along the Indian border and appeared to be worsening as a result of cholera vaccine shortages.

The deputy chief minister of West Bengal state, B. S. Nahar, said about 50,000 refugees had reached the outskirts of the city Thursday and many more were on their way.

State Health Minister Jainal Abeden said there now were 6,200 confirmed cases of cholera in the camps.

Three-stage Approach To Probe Russian Aims

LISBON (CP-Reuter) — NATO foreign ministers were expected to announce a three-stage approach for finding out Soviet intentions on mutual and balanced force reductions in Europe.

Informed sources said the approach would begin with an increase in diplomatic contacts to seek clarification of the stand of the Warsaw pact nations on reducing forces and weapons in central Europe.

This could be followed by a meeting of NATO deputy foreign ministers later this year, as suggested hursday by U.S. State Secretary William Rogers. That meeting could decide on principles and details for possible negotiations on military reductions.

The third stage of the approach could be a special envoy from the 15-nation NATO alliance being sent to Moscow and other Warsaw pact capitals to explore further the possibility of talks.

The proposal for appointment of a special envoy was made by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada.

Sharp told a news conference Thursday that he would be happy with the choice of NATO Secretary-General Manlio Brosio of Italy, who is retiring from the NATO post.

Sharp called for a three-phase approach to talks on troop reductions consisting of an exploratory visit to East Europe by a Western envoy, the establishment of a framework for talks and finally actual negotiations.

Canada will not oppose a special NATO meeting of deputy foreign ministers to discuss the troop reduction issue in greater detail.

Sharp said, however, that such a meeting might create the impression that NATO was uncertain how to proceed. This was not the case since the Western alliance had first proposed troop cuts in 1968.

Rogers told the two-day NATO ministerial council meeting, which ends today, that if NATO showed itself purposeful in seeking acceptable force reductions, the Nixon administration would be better able to resist pressure at home for unilateral troops cuts in Europe.

Parley To Be Held As Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has informed Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher that the federal-provincial constitutional conference will be held as scheduled in Victoria on June 14, 15 and 16.

Mr. Thatcher had asked that the conference be postponed in view of the Saskatchewan provincial election scheduled for June 23.

Replying by telegram Thursday to Mr. Thatcher's June 3 request, Mr. Trudeau said that Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia has informed him that a conference in his province could not be re-scheduled until November.

"In this circumstance, since I believe that premiers share my opinion that a long postponement of this important conference would be undesirable, I have concluded that we should go ahead with our plans to meet on the 14th, 15th and 16th of this month," the prime minister's telegram said.

Four Major Oil Firms Rebuked

OTTAWA (CP) — The prices and incomes commission has slapped the wrists of four major oil companies—Imperial, Shell, Texaco, and Sun Oil—for refusing to take "remedial action" after increasing their prices unduly last year.

The commission said in a report on the price behavior of the major oil refiners and distributors that, in part, their increased revenues resulted from the severity of last winter. Their sales of fuel oils ran ahead of what they had expected.

But the oil companies were judged on the basis of the criteria for price restraint adopted by a conference of businessmen here in February, 1970. The plan was to keep price increases during 1970 clearly below cost increases.

Four other oil companies—BP Canada (1969) Ltd., Canadian Fuel Marketers Ltd., Petrofina Canada Ltd., and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.—stayed within the price restraint criteria. Their costs in 1970 rose higher than their revenues.

The commission said it could draw no conclusion about Irving Oil Co. Ltd. because its financial data were not available when the commission m study.

Loyalist Graduation Tomorrow

The Hon. John White, Minister of University Affairs will be the guest speaker at the fourth annual convocation of Loyalist College.

The event will be held in Centennial Secondary School's auditorium tomorrow at 3 p.m.

His address at Loyalist's convocation will be Mr. White's first speech at a college of applied arts and technology since he was appointed minister of university affairs.

Diplomas will be presented to more than 600 graduating students in the arts and business, technology and retraining divisions.

Honorary diplomas will be presented to two distinguished men who have made a notable contribution to the college since its founding.

The Quinte Planning Board last night gave official authorization to temporary secretary - treasurer Arthur Jones to request cash advances from municipalities served.

The board, in adopting the 1971 budget of $140,460, recommended certain portions of the municipal levies be obtained for immediate operating expenses.

Each municipality will be notified of the budget adoption and will be asked to approve levies of 7-12 of this, totalling $61,986 to cover budget requirements for the remainder of 1971.

Mr. Jones will request an advance on the levies of one-seventh of the total contribution and similar regular amounts when the levy is adopted by each municipality.

The 13 month budget levies are as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| City of Belleville | $66,871 |
| Town of Trenton | $34,720 |
| Village of Brighton | $4,875 |
| Village of Frankford | $1,883 |
| Village of Stirling | $2,288 |
| Township of Brighton | $4,804 |
| Township of Murray | $9,847 |
| Township of Sidney | $13,367 |
| Township of Thurlow | $11,207 |

Although Trenton will pay its share, councillor George Greer registered his dissatisfaction with the ratio of costs for the board.

In a meeting with the press, following the meeting, Mr. Greer said, "we felt, from the standpoint of Trenton, with the budget deficit that we're going to be faced with this year, that this was a pretty stiff levy to be faced with our first year on this Quinte Planning Board.

"We can only object to this, but we know that we'll have to go along with it."

He said there would be "just an objection registered to the size of the levy and we realize that this is laid down by the government. We don't have any recourse. We are in this Quinte Planning Board, so we'll have to go along with it, but as a council faced with this, we don't know just how big a deficit Trenton council will be faced with.

"This really floored us — this extra."

The Trenton councillor told the press that $10,000 had been budgeted for the new board but when the figures officially arrived, the amount had jumped to $14,000 for the rest of 1971.

"We're having to pay more than we even expected," he stated.

"We thought the $10,000 would amply cover us for this year, but again we were wrong."

Retiring Teachers Honored

A total of 149 years of classroom service was represented last night in the record of five retiring teachers. They were honored by their fellow elementary school teachers from South Hastings at the annual retirement dinner at Club Canara. Closing their school doors behind them permanently at the end of June will be Bert Frink, Queen Elizabeth; Milton Blakely, Centenary; Mrs. Emma Empey, Centenary; Mrs. Olive Williams, Queen Victoria and Mrs. Eileen Darling, Sir John A. mental problem, like Quetico Park."

A number of conservation organizations influenced the Ontario government in its decision to ban logging in Quetico Park in its management plan, despite a vocal pro-logging lobby.

The stop-Spadina decision comes after a $60-million expenditure on part of it. This has been most for the pre-Spadina section.

"A bunch of gutless wonders have created a white elephant that will become the shortest expressway in the world, one that starts nowhere and goes nowhere," said North York Controller Irving Paisley, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto transportation committee.

The expressway, a $227-million proposal, was planned to extend six miles from the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway in north Toronto to College Street in the south, but only two miles were completed in 1966, 1 1-3 miles of right-of-way had been cleared and was awaiting pavement when work stopped in September, 1969.

Mr. Davis played up the "people" aspect in announcing the decision, based on a report written by a citizens' group made after the Ontario Municipal Board in February approved completion of the project.

He said the members opposing the expressway made up a substantial and significant minority, including many young people. "If the people of Toronto tomorrow were consulted, they would give overwhelming approval to the decision their government has taken today."

Ratepayers Offer To Help Buy Land

The West Hill Ratepayers' Association has offered to raise funds to help the city purchase property at the rear of Albert College Manor so that it may be retained as a city playground and park area.

The offer was made yesterday by the city parks board by the ratepayers' association president Ted Fletcher who said the membership of his organization had approved the idea at a meeting earlier this week.

The motion passed by the ratepayers authorized their president and executive to submit a brief to the parks board indicating that they wished the land behind Albert College Manor, presently used and maintained by the city as a park-playground, be reclaimed in its present form.

The motion indicated that the association was prepared to work as an association to raise funds to help in the purchase of the land.

At their meeting, parks board members twice discussed the Wellington Crescent playground situation and later voted to request appointment of a committee of city council and Parks Board to meet with Albert College officials regarding their plans for the manor property.

A month ago the college advertised the Wellington Crescent playground property for sale and the fears of area residents is that, it will be sold for apartment house development.

The parks board made no public comment on the offer of the West Hill Ratepayers to raise money to help purchase the Wellington Crescent playground property.

Post Office Makes Commemorative Issue

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Lauded as a major breakthrough for compiling information, the 1971 census marks the 100th anniversary of national census taking and the government hoped to get more people personally involved in completing the forms than ever before.

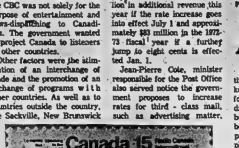
And by reports observed in the press, including those which make note of the $200 fine for noncompletion of the forms, Canadians are definitely more personally involved.

To mark the occasion of the 100th census, the Canada Post Office June 1 released 25 million six - cent commemorative stamps designed by Hans Kleefeld of Toronto.

Although cleverly designed around the theme of a modern computer, the stamp has emerged as rather stark and nothing startling or extraordinary.

The symbols of man on computer screen in red and blue with the punch-tape in black against a white background.

Census is conducted every 10 years by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, with 48,000 temporary employees required to complete the project. Cost of the program is estimated at close to $35 million . . . the largest peacetime operation of its kind in the country.



The taking of census dates back five to six thousand years ago, to the Babylonians in 3,800 BC with the modern form originated in 1665 by Jean Talon, Intendant of New France.

Methods vary. In some countries, citizens are reminded of their obligations on census day by the sounds of booming gongs or wailing sirens. In others, the law requires citizens of all ages to remain in their homes for a specific period to await the census taker.

Another government institution . . . the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, was honored June 1 by the release of a 15 - cent commemorative marking 25 years of short-wave broadcasting of Canada as programming abroad.

Inaugurated on Feb. 25, 1945, the network, known as nada International, began its transmission service to listeners in other countries. The establishment of this arm of the CBC was not solely for the purpose of entertainment and news-dispatching to Canadians. The government wanted to project Canada to listeners in other countries.

Other factors were the stimulation of an interchange of trade and the promotion of an exchange of programs with other countries. As well as to countries outside the country, the Sackville, New Brunswick transmitters beam into Canada's northernmost remote regions.

The 18 million stamps of this issue, Speaking to the World, designed by Burton Kramer of Toronto, bear maple leaves symbolizing what appears to be an out-thrust of Canada into the world.

Printed in yellow and orange, this clever design leaves much to be desired and while recognizable for its meaning, is also stark and somewhat lackluster.

Both stamps have been printed by the Canadian Bank Note Company, using the three-color lithography process and similiar stock is available from the Philatelic Service, Canada Post Office, Confederation Heights, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A, 0B5.

Since the fall of 1968, the government rate for first-class letters has been 4 1/2 cents. However, the government is attempting to trim an anticipated Post Office deficit of $113.6 million by raising rates one cent.

The proposed increase would provide an estimated $37 million in additional revenue this year if the rate increase goes into effect July 1 and approximately $83 million in the 1972-73 fiscal year if a further jump to eight cents is effected Jan. 1.

Jean-Pierre Coie, minister responsible for the Post Office also served notice the government proposes to increase rates for third - class mail, such as advertising matter, promotional material and householder-type mail on July 1. This would see charges for third-class mail rise from five cents to six cents for the first two ounces. Each additional two ounces would continue to cost three cents.

Even this would not altogether cut the deficit anticipated by the government, Mr. Coie told reporters.

* * *

And in the world of coins . . . David Shilling got tired of being referred to as Mr. Five Newpence when decimal currency was introduced to Britain in February, so he changed his name to the number 27-6.

Already using 27-6 this date of birth in 1969 to sign bank cheques, he also used this number to fill in his current British census form.

Trenton Projects Are on the Books

TRENTON (Staff) — Although councillors here have kept down spending allotments for various departments to reduce the burden of, the 1971 budget, there are still a number of major capital works projects scheduled for completion this year.

During budget meetings, council has directed much of its efforts to reduce public works spending, which Mayor Duncan McDonald has referred to as one of the few places to cut back substantially.

However, the mayor indicated today that provision will be made for at least two large construction projects this year. These will not measurably affect the 1971 budget because they will be financed by debentures.

Slated for this year will be the widening of Dundas St. East from Loblaws to the Dominion Store, a job that will result in the main eastern artery being four lanes through to the top of Gibbons Hill.

Still planned for 1971 is the total rebuilding of lower Dufferin Ave. and if Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation financing is available for the Front St. sewer construction, that may be done too.

The 1971 budget is now in its final stages of completion and it appears the town will require about $300,000 more to operate this year than last.

A three-man budget committee composed of the mayor, and councillors Ted Parker and George Brown will meet privately with the administrative board in the next few days to review a few important details before making final budget recommendations to council.

Special Service In White Chapel

PICTON (Staff) — The White Chapel, now marking its 162nd anniversary as a place of worship, will open its doors this Sunday at 3 p.m. for the annual service. This frame "church in the wilderness" two miles east of Picton was built in 1809 and has been preserved in its original state to the present day. Services this Sunday will be conducted by Rev. R. F. Sherwin, minister of Picton United Church, and guest speaker Rev. Frank A. Hobbs, L.Th., minister of Grace United Church, Trenton. Members of Picton United Church choir under the direction of organist A. A. Servis will provide music for the hour of worship.

The first Sunday of June has traditionally become the date for descendants of the White Chapel's original congregationalists and other worshippers to join for a special service. Many early members of the White Chapel's congregation are buried in the churchyard nearby.

Belleville Gets Parks Convention

The 1972 convention of the Ontario Parks Association will be held in the city of Belleville.

Parks board members were advised yesterday that the provincial association had decided on this city as the site for its next year's convention. The convention normally is attended by approximately 350 delegates from across the province.

Planning Decisions:

Public Involvement Urged by Consultant

Complete co-operation between the public and the newly-formed Quinte Area Planning Board was recommended last night by Fred H. Pirie of the Burlington consultant firm of Philips Planning and Engineering Ltd.

While tabling the company's 45 - page Specialist report on the requirements for the board's operation, and methods required to produce an official plan, Mr. Pirie told members a "closed-door" policy just, doesn't get off the shelf.

"You work with public groups and citizens at large on a participating basis," he said.

"You must continually seek advice and make sure the public is co-operating and understanding."

The company planning director said if full co-operation is not made available, the public will feel "imposed" upon and this is "not the way to do an official plan successfully."

By the next meeting of the board, scheduled for July 6, the personnel committee is expected to make recommendations for selection of a planning director and in conjunction with the committee, the new director would coordinate hiring of a planning staff, paying particular attention to present employees. However, the board has not indicated when a full complement can be expected.

The report, in recommending that a staff be chosen, stressed involvement of municipal staff, elected officials, subsidiary boards or planning committees during key phases of the program and informal public participation during the entire program through public information and discussion processes."

It was also suggested that formal public participation prior to the final plan and implementation be encouraged.

"It is hoped that a meaningful and close relationship between the general public, elected and appointed officials, leaders in business and industry, and the planning board and staff will be established which will assist in completing an acceptable official plan and establishing a foundation for proper understanding and appreciation of the importance of sound planning on a continued basis."

The report went on to stress that "many well - conceived programs have failed because of the failure to secure public understanding, participation and support."

Day Camp For Trenton Announced

TRENTON (Staff) — The Trenton Chamber of Commerce reports it has arranged to have a day camp operated this summer for the town's youngsters.

"It is the first day camp for this area and it will hire four counsellors from Trenton," says chamber manager Jack Wilson.

The program will operate for a ten-day trial period beginning July 5 in co-operation with Eager Beaver Camp, Marmora.

Young people participating in the day camp will leave Trenton by bus for the camp in the morning and return home in late afternoon. Cost for each day - camper will be $35 for the ten-day period.

Parents wishing to enrol their children in the program may do so by contacting the Chamber offices.

ELEANOR ANNE STAVELEY and ROSS FREDERICK BURNS, daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Staveley, RR 1, Belleville, both graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, last week. Miss Staveley received her bachelor of arts degree (history), while Mr. Burns received his bachelor of science degree (geology). Both are graduates of ICIVE. Mr. Burns is now employed with COMINCO Ltd. (Eastern Explorations), Toronto.

Song Nets $1,000 — So Far

Eric Baragar, a 20-year-old, first year York University student, wrote a song last summer that so far has brought him revenue of $1,000.

The lead guitarist for the Belleville rock band, The Sands of Time, explained "this fee is for rental of the song to radio stations and does not include royalties for performances by other performers, royalties from record sales, royalty for originally recording the song or payment for composing the piece."

Released by National General Records last summer, I've Got A Feeling reached the number one spot on both the Kingston and Belleville record charts and did well in the Atlantic provinces.

"Because of the complexities of the bookwork, (song belongs to American and Canadian companies) I am going to write a book on the frustrations of the recording business," said Mr. Baragar.

The group consists of four musicians "who will all receive revenue based on a percentage of records sold", mentioned Mr. Baragar.

Mr. Baragar signed with National General Records and this way our paperwork may become a little easier," complained Mr. Baragar as he described difficulties with some past business associates.

"We have just finished an album and we are waiting to see if National General will pick up the rights. Hopefully, if they don't we will approach Canadian companies such as Capitol or Columbia and go for a single firm offering a world - wide contract," said Mr. Baragar.

Later this month, the results will be available on the sales of the record and at that time "myself and the rest of the group, including David Conly, composer of the flip side of the single, will find out what our royalties will be for record sales," he said.

Horseman's Journey Cut Short by Kick

A young equestrian got on the wrong side of his horse yesterday, and ended up in Belleville General Hospital after being kicked by his mount.

Curt Closson, 18, of RR7, Belleville, was attempting to achieve his life's goal, travelling to the Quarter Horse parade in Calgary, Alberta. Riding all the way, he planned to camp out, eating his own food which he was carrying with him.

However, his two-month trip barely got off the ground, so to speak, when the accident occurred in Colborne.

The youth managed to ride to Cobourg, where he was treated and transferred to Belleville General Hospital suffering from undetermined abdominal pains.

Tests are being conducted and he expressed hope to continue with his trip.

Precious Time

So often in the case of accidents these days there are victims with head injuries. Invariably, if they occur in this area, it means transfer sooner or later to Kingston General Hospital. Since time is of the essence in treatment it is a pity that such treatment cannot be given locally.

The problem however is not confined to the Bellevilla area. The other day The Winnipeg Free Press ran a picture of a seven-year-old girl, Andrea Smith, being wheeled away from a Canadian Armed Forces aircraft which had made an unscheduled stop to bring her from Thunder Bay to Winnipeg. The aircraft, carrying Governor-General Michener and his wife was over northern Ontario when it responded to the call. The little girl, whose parents also accompanied her on the flight, was reported in fair condition in Winnipeg. She suffered head injuries when she was in collision with a school bus.

We are reminded of the way Bavarian authorities are meeting similar emergencies. Helicopters are used to pick up accident victims and ambulance personnel aboard render first-aid. Similarly, the hospital is advised by radio of the extent of the injuries.

It is a service which could prove invaluable in Canada, particularly on weekends when traffic is heavy and the risk of accidents greater.

Non-Political

Service club activities, happily, are virtually free from political taint and their beneficiaries may range from scholarships to young people for travel overseas to the $10,000 Kinsmen cheque which Pierre Elliott Trudeau, Liberal Ronald MacDonald will present to a leper colony in Zambia on behalf of District 6 Kinsmen who raised the money.

But Africa is nothing if not in a state of political fermentation and a report from the Tanzanian capital of Dar es Salaam is a case in point. Tanzania's government-owned newspaper The Standard has the gall to suggest that Canada should refuse passports to Canadians planning to settle in Rhodesia.

Aside from a country whose flirtations with the Communist world are well known, a country which as we recall, brought Canadians in to train its army, then decided it would prefer to have Chinese instructors, is hard to which thousands of Chinese are currently engaged in building a railroad.

The newspaper editorial followed advertisements placed by Rhodesia in newspapers here seeking Canadian immigrants. Considering the job situation in Canada anyone with just work here could do worse than consider going to Rhodesia. None of this should be of any concern to Tanzania.

The Picton Kinsmen visitor incidentally will be the guest during his trip of Round Table, composed of Central African service clubs, and will attend its annual meeting next month in Umtali, Rhodesia. Service clubs, as we have noted, are non-political.

UBC Incident

The world is full of nuts. Like the history graduate who kissed the feet of Allan McEvoin, Chancellor of the University of British Columbia, during the first day of convocation as a protest against unemployment. The protest was in a written statement the young man handed the chancellor at the same time.

Admittedly the youth has been unemployed since graduating last August, but instead of such rude exhibitionism he would have been better off picketing the B.C. legislature or the Manpower offices in Vancouver, or writing to the Prime Minister.

There had been a similar incident at graduation ceremonies at Simon Fraser University last year. We would like to think students are more mature today, and most of them are, married only by the antics of the few.

There was applause for two students in particular: Albert York and Carol Thiele, who are both blind, and received degrees in anthropology and library science respectively. Miss Thiele last year received her B.A. in English.

Of unusual interest too was the honorary doctor of literature conferred upon retired Professor F. G. Roberts. The 90-year-old professor joined UBC when it opened in 1915 and worked there until 1950.

Regulations Changed

Teenagers, Welfare, and Home Supervision

Peterborough Examiner

Social and Family Services Minister Thomas Wells finally made good his promise and did what should have been done long ago: changed the regulations under the General Welfare Assistance Act to give local welfare administrators enough power to decide whether welfare applicants under the age of 18 are qualified for assistance or not.

Up to now, any teen-ager between 16 and 18 could have left his home, set up housekeeping (alone or in common law marriage) and collect welfare payments as long as he or she was attending school.

Welfare payments to teenagers have been used in the past as political football and campaign promise by both government and opposition and various pressure or rights groups have jumped on the "let's save the teen-agers' rights" bandwagon and tried to distort the issue.

The main issue is neither legal nor political. The main issue is whether a 16 or 18-year-old child is mature enough to start life on his or her own.

During the past years, so-called experts and congregations have kept telling the parents what they should do — or, to be more exact, what they should not do — and created an atmosphere in which the significance of the home and the authority of the parent was reduced to a minimum.

The idea these circles spread was that father didn't know best and that the trouble with this world was that "the establishment," including parents, teachers and other "relics of bygone ages didn't understand" today's younger generations.

Children have been convinced that they know more than adults and that they should start life on their own at an age when many of them should still be taught how to wipe their noses.

On the other side, teachers, welfare authorities, social workers, parents and such have been fighting a losing battle to keep children in the family home, under parental supervision, so that they can grow up learning responsibilities and prepared for life.

The result of this permissive attitude is all around us.

Never in history have we had so many problems with children as we have today when they are supposed to be more mature and intelligent than ever before.

We have drug problems; we have venereal disease problems; we have sex problems; we have unwed mother problems; we have school dropout problems and who knows how many other problems?

On top of everything else, we we had this welfare regulation which not only encouraged teenagers to leave the family home but actually financed their adventures.

But the money we save is not the most important thing.

The most important thing is that children — aside from some extreme situations - must remain under parental supervision.

The atmosphere in which we encourage the breakup of families and when the child ends up on a mental, physical or economic skid row we blame everything on a "broken home" must cease.

A child is a child. A child needs learning, love and discipline, the kind that can only be acquired in the family home. It's time for someone to stand up and say "I told you so," and then start all over again.

Father still knows best.

Ottawa Journal

Ontario municipalities are paying out something in the order of $10 million a month in welfare cheques. The 1971 Ottawa-Carleton regional budget estimates that welfare in the region will cost $16 million this year, compared with $9 million in 1970. The region's welfare rolls contained 7,721 names in April of this year, a disturbing increase over the 4,404 who were getting aid in March of 1970.

These are vivid reminders of the harsh effects of Canada's current economic malaise from which even wealthy Ontario has not escaped. The dilemma facing the province and its municipalities is that the cause and cure for our financial ills — and these two must be kept from reducing welfare costs — lies in Ottawa, where there is little indication of better times in the near future.

For this reason, Ontario's attempt to cut down on misuse of the welfare system by teenagers will not bring drastic cuts in the total welfare outlay; there is no estimate of the number of 16 and 17 year-olds in welfare in Ottawa-Carleton, but it is probably not far from the four per cent on Toronto's rolls.

Still, the overdue changes made last week in the General Welfare Assistance Act are welcome. They will return to welfare officials the discretionary power to refuse money to teenagers who have a suitable home to which they can return. The old rule that forced officials to give welfare to anyone meeting basic qualifications contributed to the transient culture. Those young people who come from good homes will now have to become drifters at their own expense, not the taxpayer's.

"Gosh, a whole 10% increase in our unemployment benefits — I guess there's no neglect like benign neglect!"

P M's Television Mastery

TV Guide

Informed sources in Ottawa say those people who will tell you anything if you don't reveal their names, have been saying that Prime Minister Trudeau has decided to eschew the press and concentrate almost entirely on television interviews to get his message across to the people.

The May 16 edition of Weekend, an hour-long, unstructured session in which the P.M. deflected the shafts of such hardened media types as Vancouver's Jack Webster, again demonstrated the wisdom of this course.

For Mr. Trudeau is a television performer of subtle mastery. His most characteristic ploy is to respond to tatuous or carelessly contrived questions with every debating trick in his arsenal, from picking up the limitations of such would-be attackers as Weekend's dour Ray Sigurjonson. The converse of this tactic is reserved for anyone who, like Webster, comes on tough and effectively blunt. In responding with lightness, even levity, Mr. Trudeau manages to suggest that he's retaining his civility in a milieu of offensive fools.

Minis, Hot Pants, and Corncobs

Sarnia Observer

Styles and fashions tend to turn back on themselves in the course of time.

Grandmothers, who were slips of girls in the Twenties in their knee-high skirts to tempt the girls watchers, see their grandchildren today flaunting their physical attractions with daring mini-skirts and hot pants, which give all the exposure without compelling the wearers to be careful how they sit down and more careful when they stand.

Grandfathers, who smoked their cut plug in crude corncob pipes see their sophisticated and blase grandsons (and granddaughters) reverting to pipe part and smoking corncob pipes again.

Today's generation's knowledge of the corncob methods of enjoying tobacco is largely confined to Pop-eye and Mammy Yokum. To most of them they are simply parts of a comedy strip routine.

But that's not so. Today when some cigars look like cigarettes and other smokers are laced with pot corncob smokers are increasing across the world.

It takes three corncob pipe factories along the Missouri river near Washington Missouri, to turn out 50,000 of the primitive pipes a day.

To most of the old timers corncob pipes were as American as apple pie. On the contrary they were the brainchild of Henry Tibbe, a Dutch immigrant cabinet-maker of fashioned the first Missouri corncob pipe in 1869.

It reached its heyday in the early days of the century when money was scarce and our grandfathers made do with what they could get most of for the least. The boom began in 1964 when the U.S. surgeon general's report on the dangers of cigarette smoking was issued.

Today the ancient corncob, merely a chopped - off piece of hollow corncob with a primitive stem, has come from the backhouse to the parlor. Now corncobs have everything but mink overcoats.

One manufacturer says "We're turning out leather - covered cobs, cobs inside a metal bowl, colored cobs - but they all smoke the same. We'll not be full circle until smokers start using the old cut plug, something we believe too hardy for today's young.

The Lombardo Touch

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Page Dr. Lombardo. If the patient seems depressed and harassed, with nerves frayed by frenzied modern living, Dr. Lombardo may have the right treatment for him.

He won't use a stethoscope or a tourniquet. It's more likely to be a saxophone or a muted trumpet, but it might be good therapy for people who need to let down a little.

The news is that Guy Lombardo, leader of the Royal Canadians, last of the big-name bands of the 1920s, has been made an honorary doctor of music. The degree was conferred by the University of Western Ontario in his home town of London, Ont.

The honor has been thoroughly earned. It would be hard to think of anyone who has done more over the past half century to make the word "Canadian" well and favorably known beyond our boundaries.

Gretna Green Sees Fewer Runaway Lovers

BBC London Letter

Runaway lovers from all parts of Western Europe have traditionally fled to Gretna Green, just over the Scottish border with England, for by marriage. A couple could be married there simply by declaring their intention before witnesses, no conditions that one party at least had resided in Scotland for three weeks before the ceremony. But there are not what they used to be in Gretna.

In most recent years some 900 eloping couples arrived at the little building on the Green, now turned into a marriage registry, and were duly married. But last year the figure was down to 80, by far the lowest in the records; and it is unlikely to go up. The reason is that the marriage law in Scotland, south of the border, has been altered. Before, young lovers under the age of 21 could marry only without their parents' consent. Now the age limit has been dropped to 18.

The Gretna registrar told a BBC reporter that the only couples from England he married in 1970 were in the group between the age of 18, the minimum age of marriage, and 18. And they were far less numerous than the couples who made the journey to Gretna Green from France, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Scandinavia. So though Gretna Green may still continue, it will probably in future attract a some-what more restricted clientele.

Rugby Tame Today Compared with Past

BBC London Letter

Rugby union football is celebrating its centenary this year, so it is a suitable occasion for the BBC to research into the origins of a game now played in some 40 nations.

Different versions had been played for centuries before it was regularized in London in 1871. Early town football games often had violent consequences before they were eventually civilised by the Victorians. Witness the laconic report of a three-day match between Sheffield and Norton in 1793 — there were many slightly wounded, but none killed . . . . It probably all began as a sport invented by the Romans, who tried to boot stiff sandsandle a leather ball across a line.

The early Britons learned it from their Roman invaders and played the same sort of game in the streets of Chester and Derby. "They were, however, uncouth," remarks the BBC program "and on one occasion even used the chopped-off head of a Dane in place of a ball."

Ten Guards Plead Not Guilty of Assaulting 'Pen' Prisoners

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Ten of 11 Millhaven penitentiary guards appeared in provincial court Thursday to plead not guilty to 34 charges of assaulting prisoners.

The 11th man, Edgar Albert Sweet of Napanee, who faces a charge of common assault, was reported ill in hospital.

The men were remanded to July 19, which was fixed as the tentative trial date by Provincial Judge P. E. D. Baker of Kingston.

The guards were represented by counsel hired by the solicitor-general's department. Lawyer Stuart Willoughby of Kingston said he hoped the trials would proceed on the set date.

Charges were laid against the Millhaven guards after a provincial police investigation of complaints by prisoners.

The prisoners, transferred from Kingston penitentiary to Millhaven following the four-day uprising in April that left the Kingston prison a shambles and resulted in the death of two convicts, alleged they were beaten by guards.

The men who appeared in court today:

Gerard Gilgeler of Harrowsmith, Ont., who faces two counts of assault occasioning bodily harm involving prisoners William Knight and Norma McCaud, and two counts of common assault on Chico Santana and Allan McColl;

Bernard William Evans, Kingston, charged with assault occasioning bodily harm against McCaud and common assault of Santana and Knight.

Paul Joseph Cote of Kingston, charged with common assault on prisoner Robert Walkers;

Lester Lindsay of Odessa, Ont., charged with common assault on McCaud;

Robert Earl Goodwin of Cerbyrille, Ont., charged with common assault on prisoner William Crosby;

Guards George Huffman of Yarker, Ont., Peter Hinch of Napanee, George Perrault of Kingston, and Lindsay, Cote and Goodwin are jointly charged with common assault on prisoner Brian Beancage.

John charges of common assault were also laid against Snider, Goodwin, Sweet, Lindsay, Huffman, Hinch, Earl K. Northmore of Kingston and Daniel Cahill of Kingsto. They are charged with common assault on prisoner John Haunis.

In all, eight prisoners are alleged to have been beaten April 19-21.

Russia Unhappy Over Relations With Americans

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union is evidently far from happy about the present state of its relations with the United States, judging from recent public utterances both hinting additional talks and chiding the U.S. for an anti-Soviet campaign.

The world's two major powers are currently engaged in bilateral, and other high-level negotiations—on the Middle East, Berlin and the limitation of strategic nuclear arms.

Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party leader, in a speech in Tbilisi, Soviet Georgia, called on the West to begin talks on reducing forces and armaments in central Europe.

An optimistic note was struck in Washington when the White House the same day welcomed Brezhnev's offer. The Nixon administration used the Soviet offer to support its argument that this is not the time for a unilateral U.S. troops reduction in Europe as demanded by U.S. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield.

Both the Soviet Union and the U.S. have shown themselves to be serious in seeking solutions in the talks which they are at present conducting, but events are less than diplomatic level have exacerbated relations during the past few months.

Chief among them is the view taken by a sector of the U.S. Jewish community of how the Russians treat their own Jews. This has led to hostile actions by Jewish militants against Soviet diplomats in the U.S., causing a great deal of official unease here.

However, ideology apart, the Soviet Union has shown interest in lasting agreements with Washington—especially on limiting the arms race.

Brezhnev presented a series of peace proposals to the 24th party congress held here March 30 to April 19. They included one for a conference of the world's five nuclear powers and the dismantling of the Warsaw Pact and NATO —the rival Eastern and Western defence groupings.

None of these many ideas looked particularly original or indeed immediately practicable to many Western observers here, but one contained a more sober suggestion, providing a crucial insight into what is really going on in the minds of Soviet policy-makers.

"The Soviet Union is prepared to negotiate agreements on reducing military expenditure, above all by the major powers," Brezhnev declared.

The implications of this statement are that Russia, apparently having attained nuclear parity with the U.S., now is anxious to divert more of its resources away from arms expenditure and into consumer goods.

Speeches at the party congress reflected growing domestic demand for more and better consumer items.

To reorganize its industry so as to give a much greater priority to the production of consumer goods, the Soviet Union would want to make sure its potential adversaries also plan to curb military expenditure.

It is believed that the Kremlin sees the U.S. as being tired of war, having stretched its resources in the Indochina conflict. The fact that the dollar has recently come under severe pressure has also been noted here.

In his speech to the party congress, Brezhnev specifically mentioned that his country believes in improved relations with the U.S. Shortly afterwards, the head of the Moscow-based Institute of the U.S.A., Georgi Arbatov, published a thesis also justifying the need for better relations between the two countries.

Quebec Fires Halted

Golfers Saved From Flames

CHIBOUGAMAU, Que. (CP) — A welcome rain Thursday helped firefighters in their five-day battle against two fires burning in dense woodland near this northern Quebec town.

Volunteer firemen reported that one blaze being driven by strong winds toward this community, 150 miles north of Montreal, had been brought under control after a fire-break was cut around it with bulldozers.

Meanwhile, helicopters rescued six persons from a smoke-engulfed shelter on the Chibougamau golf course Thursday as flames neared the fairways.

However, the fires had already claimed the life of Marcellin Tremblay, 40, who was found earlier near the site of a burnt-out sawmill. Police said Mr. Tremblay had gone to watch the fire. He was the first known victim of the outbreak.

U. of T. Council Plans Made

TORONTO (CP) — A draft bill tabled in the Ontario legislature Thursday proposes a 40-member governing council for the University of Toronto made up of teachers, students, administrators, graduates and 14 appointees of the Ontario cabinet.

University Affairs Minister John White said the government seeks reaction and possible revision before it introduces a new University of Toronto Act.

The council would replace the board of governors and the senate and oversees financial and academic matters.

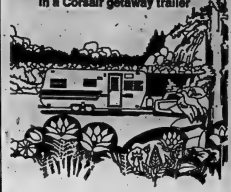
The bill also provides for the creation of a "university assembly" composed of all members of the university community.

Mr. White said the bill was drawn up after reports from the Commission on University Government at U. of T. and a university - wide committee.

The commission, which reported last year, suggested a 60-member council, of which 30 members would be chosen by students, 20 by faculty and administration, 10 to alumni and 10 by the Ontario cabinet.

Government policy is that half the council should be chosen from outside the university, including the 14 cabinet appointees and six elected by alumni.

In other business:



—Syl Apps, minister of correctional services, said during debate on his department's estimates probation officers in charge of juveniles may be transferred to his jurisdiction from the justice department.

—Charles McNaughton, minister of transportation and communications, said in reply to a question the Ontario government will intervene "very vigorously" in proposed cancellations of rail passenger services.

—Mines Minister Leo Bernier said 27 permits for quarrying operations on the Niagara Escarpment issued since last September were all renewals, not new permits.

Hoffa Picks Successor

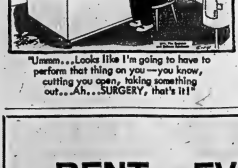
WASHINGTON (AP) — James R. Hoffa, who faces the possibility of several more years in prison, is retiring after 14 years as president of the Teamsters union, burying over leadership of the world's largest labor union to Frank E. Fitzsimmons.



"I will not be a candidate for office of general president because of my present legal difficulties," Hoffa announced Thursday from his prison cell in Lewisburg, Pa.

He endorsed Fitzsimmons, longtime friend and stand-in and Teamsters general vice-president, to succeed him as president of the two million-member union.

Fitzsimmons, who read to the Teamsters executive board Hoffa's message and endorsement, said he will enter the union's July 4 convention at Miami Beach with backing from all upper - echelon leaders.

"It has been a difficult decision for Jimmy," said Fitzsimmons, whose 30 - year association with Hoffa began in their early union organizing days in Detroit.

Dressed for the Occasion

A well deserved rest with a cup of tea and a pick up was in order for Eva Weese, Worthy Matron of Quinte Chapter 59 when the chapter hosted a successful afternoon tea and sale at Ameliasburg in Prince Edward County on Wednesday. The pouring detail here was looked after by Ruth Clark, the associate matron of the chapter. The matching set tea pot, cup and saucer are moss rose by Limoges from Rev. J. M. McLeod's collection.

Antiques Featured at OES Tea

AMELIASBURG — Outside the Masonic hall here, the rain poured down all afternoon, but inside the quaint building the atmosphere was different — just like it was supposed to be for the annual tea and sale sponsored by Quinte Chapter 59 of the Eastern Star.

The Chapter's outstanding social function of the season was attended by OES dignitaries from the Quinte centres of Belleville, Trenton, Picton and Wellington.

For the occasion the premises was decorated to remind those attending of the area's strong link with Canada's early settlers many of them United Empire Loyalists.

A variety of antiques accentuated the theme. Elmer Young drove his 1917 model T Ford roadster to the hall — a distance of four miles — and parked it on the lawn at the entrance as an aid for the advertising committee. It was effective but the value of its purpose was dampened somewhat by the downpour.

For the occasion members of the host chapter were dressed in costumes made popular as fashionable wear in the early days.

The tea convener was Eleanor Weese, Quinte Chapter. Pouring tea were Mary Bedford, DDGM, Trenton; Anna Post, WM, Trenton; Dorothy Jones, WM, Belleville; Marion Naylor, WM, Picton; Barbara Pettingill, WM, Wellington; Helen Cross, PDDGM, Quinte; Reta Henning, WM; Luela Brickman, PDDGM; Pauline Clare, WM, and Edna Dobbs, AGC, all of Belleville.

Serving in the tea room were Norma McLeod, Marion McFaul, PM, Isobelle Moreland, Donna Eager, Sandra Wood, Sharon Vanclief and Joan Roblin.

The teapots were replenished by Lillian Dempsey.

Food table conveners included: Belle Redner, Barbara Redner, Una Grimm, Jean Wood and Marjorie Adams.

The kitchen committee comprised Jean Vanclief, Marjorie Roblin, Mae Ferguson and Ida Wood.

Ticket sellers were Betty Palmer, Addie Phillips, Mabel Ratray and Phyllis McFaul.

The decorating committee was comprised of Eleanor Silver, PM, and Rev. J. M. D. McLeod.

MISS LORA J. MINAKER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant P. Minaker of Munson View received her bachelor of nursing science degree with an honors standing, at McMaster University, Hamilton, on May 28. Miss Minaker was an Ontario scholar on graduation from BCI and VS.

Never Locked Doors; Now Has Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I live in Los Angeles in a high-class apartment building with a well-guarded entrance and electronic devices to catch people who don't belong there.

I mention this so you will know why I do not feel it is necessary to lock and bolt the front door. You see, I was raised in Norfolk, Nebraska, and nobody ever locked doors in Norfolk. I married in 1938 and we lived for many years in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Nobody locked their doors there, either.

My problem is a woman in this building. She has a habit of coming into my apartment without knocking. Yesterday I stepped out of the bathtub and nearly bumped into her. She was standing in the doorway, "Oh," she said. "No wonder you couldn't hear me. The water was running." Two weeks ago I was taking a nap and when I woke up I found her in the kitchen. She had come to borrow a cup of sugar.

How can I break this woman of this rude habit? Please don't tell me to lock the door. I am too old to change my ways. Thank you. — L.A. LADY.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR L.A.: So you're too old to change your ways? Well, if you don't change your ways you might not get any older. Los Angeles isn't Norfolk, and it's not Grand Rapids either. Get with it, lady, before you meet somebody in your kitchen who did not come to borrow a cup of sugar.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Today is a sad one for me — maybe the saddest in my life. My son was placed under arrest for "contributing to the delinquency of a minor." The girl is pregnant, 14 years old, and lives in this building. She literally threw herself at my Albert.

Last summer the little tramp came over here wearing a half bra and shorts cut up to her neck. I never saw anything like it. The girl was as fully developed as any 20-year-old Swedish actress. Once when I saw her plant herself down on my son's lap I phoned her mother and told her to keep that little sex-pot at home.

Albert is nearly 21 and I suppose he should have known better, but after all, man is not made of wood. I say the girl and her mother are to blame. Please print my advice to other mothers with good looking sons: If you see something like this happening under your nose, get in there and break it up. — HEARTSICK IN WHITE PLAINS.

* * *

DEAR W.P.: There will always be sex-pots — and the age bracket is getting lower. My question is this: What's with a 35-year-old man that he would be fooling around with a 14-year-old girl? He has to be an idiot. Your Albert needs counseling and you could use some, too, Mom.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We live in a small community. My husband and I have some close friends who are as dear to us as if they were actually related. We see them often because they have not yet seen our new grandchild. The baby is four months old.

They say they are waiting for an invitation. We do not feel that an invitation need be extended. What is your opinion. — FOR PEACE.

* * *

DEAR PEACE: When a baby is born it is customary for friends to wait a few weeks. Does phone the new parents and say, "We'd like to come by and see the baby. Is tomorrow night convenient?" (It is also customary to bring a little gift.)

If this couple is as close as you say I can't understand why they haven't done so. Good manners is also common sense.

SIDNEY SOUTH WI

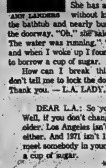
The May meeting of the Sidney South WI was held at the home of Mrs. A. W. Smith.

The newly elected president, Mrs. G. Wilmen presided over the meeting and conducted the business portion of the meeting.



It was decided to hold the dinner at Maple Ian, Bloomfield on June 30, with the August meeting in the form of a home bake sale at Skinkle's cottages, Trent River.

The cancer volunteers collected $191.55 in April.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. H. Windsor, convener of resolutions who based her program on pollution of air and water. She showed a check sheet which school children had filled in and reported that they are very concerned about all types of pollution.

She also read an article on pollution from the Chatelaine Magazine. She was thanked by the president for a very informative talk.

Mrs. F. C. Meers gave the consumer's report and it was announced that Mrs. Ted Atkins will take the office of 1st vice-president for the coming year. Mrs. G. Sills will then fill her office as branch director.

Topic on Abortions Controversial Subject

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have chosen for my biology project, the question about abortions and whether they are immoral wrong. Can you help me with this? — Student

Dear Student: I don't know a more controversial topic, right now. This question hinges around the whole idea that there is a certain point at which the fetus may be considered a living personality with a soul.

The Anglican Church has set up a committee to study the status of the fetus. The United Church has discussed the same topic in its periodicals.

The Roman Catholic Church has always considered life exists from the moment that the cells unite. Even the embryo from a very early miscarriage is baptised and treated with the respect due to a human life.

There's a new group now called Voice of the Unborn, sponsored by the Catholic Women's League. They could give you the argument against abortion; and for the opposite point of view, the source is the Abortion Information Centre. I'm sending addresses of headquarters of each of the churches and the other organizations referred to above.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am a recreation director. I met a grad student on a blind date and found out later that he was only 23.

Our dates are more intellectual than anything else and we have wonderful conversations. Now he has fallen in love with me, although I told him there was no future for us.

How can I break up without hurting him? I am 29 and I look my age, neither beautiful nor stylish, I mean. I love him and think he's the greatest, but I am so much older than he is.

I said, "We're just friends." He said, "You are more to me than that!" I said, "I'm almost 30." He said "Age is relative. I am older than you in many ways. Aren't you still a little girl when you are happy?" — Usually Sane

Dear Usually: I'd suggest you throw away your birth certificate and pay attention to your heart. If you do love him, that's what counts. Six years' difference, in your teens would be just too much; but not when you're mature. Maturity and you seem to be hitting it off, sharing interests and sentiments — and enthusiasms.

Better capitulate. You are far from an old lady yet.

* * *

Dear Doris: To the young girl who has acne:

1. Wash your hair every other day. 2 Wash face with special soap for acne. 3. Use a recommended medicated pack to wipe face. 4. Go easy on chocolate and fat foods.

It is wise to keep hands from touching your face, when not clean, and fresh towels are a must. Also, wash eyebrows well. I found this a wonderful help.

I also was left with scars and enlarged pores, and I know how it hurts. I am ever conscious of it. May I ask where you got help? I don't know of anything except what is called a "sanding job" by a specialist which I could never afford. — Mrs. J. R.

Dear Mrs. J.R.: I hope the above girl reads your message.

The "sanding job" is called dermabrasion. It does use an abrasive very delicately to remove the top layer of skin. This is the layer which has scars on it. When the new skin forms — in two or three weeks — it is practically clear of the blemishes.

No reason why you should not even now consider getting these scars removed and ridding yourself of this blight since it troubles you. Could you afford it now? Your family doctor would refer you to a skin specialist who does the operation.

* * *

We now have some understanding of why people ask us they do. Write to Doris about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Easy Method in Making Steamed Pudding

By MARY MOORE

ANSWER to husband (name unknown) who wanted steamed raspberry jam pudding "like his mother used to make".

I mentioned this request on April 20th here and it challenged one of our readers, E. Irene N. She hunted through her English cookbooks and sent me two steamed pudding recipes. I hope the husband who was yearning for it sees this for I made it last night and it was good and easy.

ALEXANDRA PUDDING (Steamed Jam Pudding — courtesy Irene)

½ cup (4 oz.) margarine
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
1¼ cups plus 1 tbsp. unsifted all-purpose flour (8 oz.)
2 tsps. baking powder
½ cup milk
½ cup jam — raspberry, strawberry or black currant
Butter a bowl generously. (It must be at least 4-cup capacity for this pudding, filled my 4-cup stainless steel bowl to the brim.)

Measure into buttered bowl the jam of your choice and with a spoon lift some of it to coat sides with jam a little bit. It will flow back down to bottom but a little clings to sides.

Into beater bowl measure margarine and sugar and beat until light. Beat in eggs. Best in flour and baking powder alternately with milk just until blended. Remove beaters. Spoon carefully into prepared pudding basin and cover with a bulging tent of foil, but do not tie on. The bulge is to allow pudding to rise. Lower into steamer, having placed a trivet or cake rack on bottom of steamer to keep pudding above water. You will have to replenish the water a couple of times during this period. To turn out loosen sides with knife, invert shallow serving dish over it and turn over and out. Serve with milk or cream as in English — custard sauce. Thank you, Irene.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

BY MARY BRYSON

Small children are still learning how to behave in acceptable ways. The child who gets out of line must be corrected, perhaps reprimanded even, but the discipline can be just as effective if it's done in a kind, but firm, manner. An angry vindictive-sounding scolding will diminish the child in his own eyes and make him feel that he, not the act, is bad.

Gurgling Radios Going

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The portable radio that gurgled and the binoculars that alcohol may become objects of yesteryear at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum where they're going to start selling beer.

When city council voted Thursday to end the sport stadium's lifelong drought, it also banned glass containers—like the dorms at UCLA and Southern California—while a source of booze could be smuggled from bars and liquor stores in the neighborhood of the giant arena.

The Coliseum, the only major sports stadium in the United States which didn't sell beer, long had been the target of the great smuggling rackets. On hot days, all sorts of gadgets would be brought into the place as ticket takers guards carefully watched to see that no one brought in booze.

The guards failed.

After all, how many "portable radios" can a guy check to see that they're not really hollow and filled with precious liquid? And how many "binoculars" can be looked through for a view ahead of a beer?

There were other ideas, besides the old hip flask and the wallet flask and the vest flask.

An old trick was revived by the college mob. Oranges were injected with vodka through a syringe. Another idea: a holowed-out book with a flask inside. An who'd deny a coed her right to carry in a stuffed animal, even if it did stink a bit?

William Nicholas, general manager of the Coliseum, said the sale of beer serves a number of purposes but first and foremost, he said, was the attempt to stop the smuggling.

"If we have beer, maybe we can stop the hard liquor from coming illegally," he said.

The Coliseum, home of Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League and the football teams of USC and UCLA, is right next door to the city-owned Sports Arena, which already serves beer.

Behind-the-scenes PUC Employees Guarantee Reliable Utility Service

Story and Photos
By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Two of today's most important and, in fact luxury commodities most often taken for granted until bills are due are water and electricity.

The simple act of switching on a light or turning on running water is a costly and time - consuming operation which keeps close to 80 Belleville Public Utilities Commission employees working around the clock to maintain power output from Ontario Hydro lines and water output from the pumping station.

In fact, PUC employees at the filtration plant south of Sidney Street have been working double time to complete approximately $200,000 in modifications to the facilities. Improvements to the 40-year-old plant took the place of a major building program called to a halt when the Ontario Water Resources Commission proposed drawing water supplies from the Great Lakes by 1975.

E. L. Burnham, manager of the PUC, announced this morning that microstrainers have been fixed, plus upgraded drives for the units, a new, low-lift pump has been installed and a complex series of 30-inch steel pipes for heavier flow are in operation. Filter controllers are working but a series of bugs have yet to be ironed out.

Not yet completed are the filter beds required for straining of the water brought from the bay.

Jim Scriven, purification superintendent, said during a recent tour of the filtration facilities, "the plant was designed for nine million gallons a day, but this increase will allow 12 million gallons to flow."

He explained that "while waiting for equipment, our men prepared mountings." In fact, Mr. Burnham commented that all labor has been done by PUC employees.

"We have an inspector coming in to look at the micro strainers, but, that's pretty well the only outside help."

Mr. Scriven explained that a total of eight hours would be required for the water cycle . . . from the intake pipes 1,400 feet into the bay, to the customer's tap.

The total cycle involves straining of foreign matter from the water, the addition of four, with a maximum of seven, parts per million of chlorine, one part per million of fluoride and approximately 30 parts per million of alum.

From the solid matter microstrainers, to the flocculation and sedimentation, process with alum, and the chlorine filtration process which disinfects, bleaches and oxidizes Belleville's drinking water, constant maintenance and observation must be maintained by PUC employees to guarantee the complete process.

During the tour, Mr. Scriven indicated a series of meters and registers situated near the chemical storage and output rooms. Levels are carefully controlled and periodic readings indicate the flows and color. Fluoride and algae counts are done regularly by lab technician Dave Middleton.

Tank trucks deliver liquid alum for storage in two, 5,000 gallon, rubber-lined tanks in the basement of the chemical building together with a 4,000 gallon tank for fluoride. One-ton cylinders of chlorine, which are purchased in lots of 14, are hoisted into position by means of an overhead trolley - pulley system, a major improvement over the old system which employed 150 - pound containers. Not only does this quantity purchase cut down on expense, but fewer steps are required to hook up the chemical.

During peak periods this summer, residents are expected to consume a maximum of 8½ million gallons of bacteria-free, anti - tooth decaying water, an increase of approximately 3½ million gallons over the winter period.

The proposed pipeline from Lake Ontario would cross Prince Edward County to a future reservoir near Roblin Lake and from this point would branch off into Quinte area municipalities.

Final plans have not been tabled and the future of the Belleville filtration plant is not settled, but the utilities expect the facility to become part of the over-all system.

North of the PUC reservoir, bordering Sidney Street at College, sits the pride and joy of the Utilities Commission . . . a complete storage facility and repair shop for meters, cables, nuts, bolts, washers, and light bulbs larger than most commercially sold.

Electric system superintendent Thornton Parr said a full supply of emergency tools must be on hand at all times to act in an emergency. For this purpose, emergency storerooms equipped with essential equipment are maintained.

"Not all equipment is in here, just what's needed without getting the stores man," he said, pointing to metal detectors, cutting tools, warning lights, cables, firehose, safety ladders, night tools and pipe couplings.

"We move with the times here," he chuckled, indicating supplies of special wrap-around repair sleeves.

"The older method took four hours to repair . . . we can do the job in about a half hour."

Throughout the entire plant, this upgrading practice is evident. Constant attention is paid to the best methods of maintaining equipment and replacement of outmoded units.

A testing lab for water and light meters enables employees such as Jack Diamond and Bob Hayward to completely test meters which record service quantities used by customers.

"Our aim is to keep constant service with the least inconvenience," commented E. C. "Skip" Roberts, service and meter superintendent, as he conducted a tour through rows and rows of meters stacked on trolleys.

"The government has to seal domestic and commercial meters which are replaced and tested for reverification.

Mr. Hayward, working on what appears to be a giant lathe, operates valves and gears designed to measure flow through water meters. In the adjacent electricity room, similar tests for electrical output readings were underway.

At present, the PUC operates seven substations and 11 customer substations throughout the city, connected to the 44,000 - volt lines at the Ontario Hydro station on Centre Street.

A maze of overhead wiring which would measure approximately 107 miles in length connects these services by way of overhead poles. As well, there are five miles of underground wiring.

The utilities commission employees have, for some time, been installing cleaner types of city street wiring and new systems are an improvement over the older, cluttered lines.

The flotilla of overhead maintenance vehicles is kept on the road maintaining and checking lines, transformers and light systems throughout the city.

With power failures, transfers to other systems are possible and the PUC keeps a constant check of power loads at various times of the day in order to maintain a balanced output.

Mr. Fort further commented that more substations were in the offing.

To take an over-all picture of the operations behind turning on the light switch or the tap, these commonplace tasks virtually impossible without this staff of maintainers and servicemen.

In emergencies, regardless of weather conditions, squads of men have hunted for broken water mains, dead electricity circuits and the sources of blackouts across the city. Occasionally they come to the rescue of people whose stoves or furnaces have malfunctioned due to an electrical failure and in one case last summer, went to the rescue of a northern municipality.

At the village of Madoc, a heavy water leak threatened to curtail water service to that municipality, but with the aid from the Belleville Public Utilities Emergency team, this weekend problem was corrected when the lead was located and repaired.

Canonero Rehearsing Winner's Routine

NEW YORK (AP) — Canonero II knows where the Belmont winner's circle is. Now all he has to do is get there Saturday and racing will have its ninth Triple Crown champion.

Trainer Juan Arias schooled Canonero II in the paddock Thursday and then led him to the winner's circle in front of the stands before the fifth race. He followed the same procedure before the colt won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

To win the Belmont Stakes and become the first to win the Derby, Preakness and Belmont since Citation in 1948, Canonero II will have to beat at least 10 other three-year-olds. The most any of the eight Triple Crown champions faced in winning the Belmont was seven, by Citation.

Among those expected to oppose Canonero II, owned by Venezuelan Pedro Baptista, were four colts he already has beaten—Fraud, a Caldwell's Jim French second in the Derby and third in the Preakness; William duPont Jr.'s Bold Reason, third in the Derby and fifth in the Preakness; Pastoral Stable's Twist The Ace, 10th in the Derby, and J. M. Davis' Royal JD, seventh in the Preakness.

Other probables were Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Epic Journey, Tartan Stable's Highbinder, Anthony Imbesi's Purse Finder, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lunger's Salem, Walt Hellman's Good Behaving and Peter Kissel's Pass Catcher.

Royal JD was entered Thursday. The others were expected to be entered today.

Good Behaving, the triple stakes winner who missed the Derby and Preakness, and Jim French will run as a John Campo-trained entry. Good Behaving was a supplemental nominee for $5,000.

Eleven starters would give the 103rd running of the 1¼-mile Belmont a gross purse of $180,350, with $98,310 to the winner.

Post time for the race is about 5:35 p.m. EDT. Television coverage will be from 5-6 p.m. and radio coverage from 5:25-5:45 p.m., both by CBS. CBC will carry full television coverage in Canada.

Arias was in high spirits after Canonero II galloped 1½ miles on Thursday morning under 126-pound exercise boy Earl Whye, who had all he could do to keep the Kentucky-bred colt in check.

Arias said Canonero II is coming up to the race in good shape.

"There is no question about the fact that he is in fine health," Arias said.

Canonero II has been bothered by a skin rash and an infection of the right hind foot which would be similar to athlete's foot in a human. But veterinarians have said the rash is almost gone and the infection has been responding to treatment.

Superstar Meets Fan

CFL Decides Grey Cup Worth More

MONTREAL (CP) — This year's Grey Cup winners will get $2,000 a man for action in the Canadian Football League's championship game—$500 more than Montreal Alouettes' players received for the 1970 win. the CFL ruled at its semi-annual meeting Thursday.

The meeting continued today.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur said the league has raised total Grey Cup awards to $112,000 from $80,000, thus giving each player on the winning team $2,000 and each member on the losing squad $1,500. The previous rates were $1,500 and $1,000 respectively.

The raise fell short of a request by the CFL Player's Association which asked for $3,000 and $2,000.

The league also adopted a universal draft for Canadian football players attending univerities in the U.S. and Canada.

Gaudaur said the new college draft will become effective after the 1972 season but no player in either country will be eligible until his class graduates.

Under the present setup each of the nine CFL clubs holds territorial rights and players invited to attend school in the U.S. have their playing rights automatically returned to the club controlling their territory when they finish school.

Under the new plan, each club would be put into effect to overcome "an economic disparity" felt by several league members who do not have large population centres within their territorial limits and therefore fewer great football players than other teams.

More high school graduates leave for U.S. college training from larger centres like Montreal and Toronto, thus benefiting these clubs more than clubs like Saskatchewan and Edmonton.

Gaudaur also announced during the course of the first day of meetings the league is interested in receiving applications from cities wishing play host to the 1973 Grey Cup spectacle.

He said he had already received a bid from Ottawa but any other interested cities would have until this year's Grey Cup game to forward applications.

The meeting also ratified the 1972 schedule but a proposal suggesting that full East-West interlocking schedule be played in 1973 was referred for further study.

While Gaudaur said the 1972 schedule may be subject to minor changes, he promised that television viewers will have a Saturday or Sunday game from Labor Day until the end of the season.

The schedule eliminates mid-week games in the Western Conference after Thanksgiving Day, the commissioner said.

Then There Were 8

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (CP-AP) — Four Britons and four United States golfers teed off this morning in the 18-hole quarter-final for the British amateur golf championship without Englishman Mike Bonallack.

The five-time winner of this tournament, including the last two played, was upset 4 and 3 in Thursday morning's round by South African Mike Schwitz.

Bonallack lost in the afternoon 4 and 2 to Hugh Stuart, one of two Scots who advanced to the quarter-final. Countryman Hugh Campbell was among today's survivors along with Englishman Peter Moody, Irishman Roddy Carr and Americans Dr. Edgar Updegraff, Tom Kite Jr., Jim Simons and Steve Melnyk.

The 18-hole semi-final was played in the afternoon with the 36-hole final set for Saturday.

The weather has held fair during the tournament, a far cry from the cold gusty winds that are prone to-sweeping the course during this time of year.

Carnoustie has been relatively kind so far to this field, which originally numbered 256.

Melnyk, Simons and Kite all said, though, that they are fearful of what could happen, especially rain and the famous "haar"—a fog off the North Sea —which comes in without notice.

Updegraf, a splinter of a tall man pushing 50 years of age, just grinned about all that and said, "Let it blow."

He had nothing to lose and was unquesetably the most satisfied man in the tournament at this stage after scoring a 4 and-3 decision over Irish internationalist Joe Carr, two-time winner of this tournament and father of 30-year-old Roddy.

Fergy Enters Second Retirement

MONTREAL (CP) — John Ferguson, Montreal Canadiens' rugged left winger, retired Thursday for the second time in a year from the National Hockey League.

But this time the 32-year-old says it will be permanent and he told a news conference he has signed his voluntary retirement papers.

A player who signs such papers cannot return to the NHL for one year without the consent of all 14 clubs.

Ferguson cited business interests when he announced his retirement last fall. He came back later to join Canadiens in the drive to their exciting Stanley Cup championship.

"I started thinking of retirement two weeks after coming back," he told Thursday's news conference.

Ferguson told reporters at the Montreal Forum that his clothing business demanded too much of his time and he was giving up an estimated $55,000 hockey contract for the 1972-73 season.

The pressure of business affairs showed on Ferguson who became moody and introspective. He said publicly that Canadiens' coach Al MacNeil was not using him properly. In a losing playoff game against Minnesota North Stars. Fergie showed his anger at being benched by MacNeil by leaving the bench with 26 seconds to go in the game and breaking his stick on the way to the dressing room.

In his eight years with Canadiens, Ferguson was a member of five Stanley Cup championship teams. He scored 145 regular season goals and had 158 assists. He added 20 goals and 18 assists in playoff action.

MacNeil Case Still Pending

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Al MacNeil's future with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League will be resolved within the next 12 days, Canadiens' general - manager Sam Pollock said Thursday.

"We'll hold sother m a jor press conference shortly," the club's president David Molson said.

MacNeil, rookie coach of the Stanley Cup winners, was the target of criticism in the press and from some of his players during the post-season playoffs.

Sports on All Fronts

LEEDS, England (CP) — Leeds United of England tied Juventus of Turin 1-1 with Juventus of Turin Thursday night and won the European Fairs Cup soccer trophy on goals aggregate.

The teams had tied 2-2 in the first leg in Turin last week. That gave Leeds the edge, since away goals count double when the aggregate scores are level.

* * *

SUDBURY (CP) — Sudbury Wolves were officially notified Wednesday that they would not be welcome back in the southern division of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series for the 1971-72 season.

Wolves had sought a franchise in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series for the coming season but were turned down because that league is not expanding. However, Hap Emms, owner of the Niagara Falls Flyers franchise in the OHA, had indicated he might be willing to move his club to the Sudbury area. Negotiations are still going on but it was doubtful the transfer would be made in time for the 1971-72 season.

* * *

TORONTO (CP) — The coffers of the Charlie Conacher Research Fund were increased by about $27,000 Thursday night when a record 1,081 turned up at the Charlie Conacher awards dinner.

The research fund to study throat cancer was established after the former National Hockey League star died of throat cancer Dec. 20, 1967.

NEW YORK (AP) — The challenge of the Royal Thames Yacht Club of England for the America's Cup in 1974 was accepted Thursday by the New York Yacht Club.

Other challenges received by the NYYC are from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, the Royal Perth Yacht Club of Western Australia, the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron, the Societe Nautique de Marseille, the Yacht Club d'Hyeres, and the Cercle de la Voile de Paris.

OTTAWA (CP) — Board of control agreed Thursday to a plan whereby artificial turf will be installed at Lansdowne Park, home of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference. The turf is to be in place in time for the 1972 season.

Commercial League Has Swinging Time

Point Anne and Howard and Robert Printing staged a swinging 12 - inning Commercial Softball League contest last night as no less than 43 batters failed to connect on the deliveries of. Don Holoway and Bob Ethier.

Holoway and his Point Anne teammates finally emerged with a win in the 2-1 pitching duel, as a passed ball cost Ethier the game.

Eric Maher singled in the twelfth for his third hit of the contest and moved to third on a stolen base and an error before scoring when Ethier's delivery eluded catcher Larry Potter.

The Howard and Robert southpaw recorded 24 strikeouts in taking the loss, while Holoway whiffed 21 batters on the winners' slab. Both hurlers's double was the only extra base hit for the winners with the other safeties going to Jim Horwood, Rick Rosebush, and Vern Whalen.

Zakos and Pug Kellar each singled twice for Howard and Robert, while Potter, Don Gardiner and Neil Campbell each had one hit.

Quinte Hotel gained their first win of the season by taking an abbreviated 4-0 win over the Ellis Juniors in the second contest, which was halted after five innings because of a 10:30 curfew.

Bob Swan picked up the victory, allowing four hits and striking out eight batters in the five innings that he worked. He didn't walk a man.

The Quinte hurler also supplied much of his team's offensive spark with a key single in the second frame which drove in two runs. He later scored himself on a base hit by Rick Denard.

Buying Race Horse Sure Beats Binoculars!

What does a harness racing fan need besides binoculars, a form sheet and plenty of cash to back his favorites?

Well, if he's Jack Kemp or Gary McMillan he needs, and gets, a race horse. Jack has been a track buff for a number of years, following the fortunes of brother Bruce, one of the top Belleville drivers, while Gary has followed racing closely for the past two years.

The men pooled their resources last fall to purchase a 12 - year - old gelding, Dayton Express and suddenly their trips to the track have taken on added interest.

Both owners feel that the purchase will increase greatly their enjoyment of the Saturday night racing cards, and neither minds the four or five hours a day that go into training and caring for Dayton Express.

They purchased the bay gelding from Cam Wannamaker's Consecon stable and have spent the winter preparing him for the racing season. Their work paid off last week when the big bay gelding finished third on a muddy Kingston track.

Dayton Express will be making his first start on the Belleville track this Saturday in one of the ten races to be held opening night at the newly - organized Quinte Exhibition Raceway.

A number of changes have been made to the Quinte exhibition grounds for the 1971 racing season including widening the track, installation of lounge facilities and closed circuit television outlets at both the lounge and paramutuel windows.

The horses will be paraded to the post by Art Corfield before each of the ten heats which get under way at 7:45 p.m.

Holtzman's No-hitter Worth $1,500

CINCINNATI (AP) — "A little shocked and awfully tired," Ken Holtzman, who had pitched his second major league no-hitter for Chicago Cubs, said as he picked up the telephone in manager Leo Durocher's office.

"It was John Holland (vice-president of the Cubs). "He told me he was tearing up my contract and giving me a $1,500 raise," Holtzman told reporters.

Holtzman, in the 1-0 decision over Cincinnati Reds, had pitched the first no hitter of the year in baseball and became the first Cub to pitch two.

He got his first one Aug. 19, 1969, against Atlanta Braves in Chicago, 3-0.

"I feel about the same as after the last one," said Holtzman, a six-year veteran. "A little in shock and awfully tired."

The Cub statistics showed he threw 108 pitches in the game, 64 fast balls, 43 curves and one changeup.

"The last five innings I went mainly with my fast ball. I had trouble with my curve, . . . It was curving so much I had trouble controlling it."

Holtzman scored the only run of the ball game and it was unearned.

He made first base on a throwing error by Tony Perez, advanced to second on Don Kessenger's infield out and scored on Glenn Beckert's single.

KEN HOLTZMAN

Red pitcher Gary Nolan, who gave up only six hits and now has an identical 3-6 record with Holtzman, was satisfied with his own performance.

"Some guys say they'd rather lose 10-9, but I'd rather lose one like this. At least I kept them in the game and one hit could have made the difference for us."

Holtzman, who pitched his way out of a jam in the third inning after giving up a walk and a wild pitch, complained of the humid 80-degree heat.

"I seemed to get my second wind in the sixth inning though and just went with my fast ball after that.

"I let it all out in the last inning."

He got Hal McRae to fly out to Johnny Callison and Tommy Helms and Lee May went down swinging.

Said Durocher: "It was some kind of a game. Holtzman was not only terrific but he was outstanding in the eighth and ninth innings.

"The tip-off was the way he handled the right hand hitters —Bench, Perez, May and Hal McRae. They were hitting late to centre and right field. They were completely fooled."

"I'm not saying I had a premonition," said Holtzman, "but I told Ernie Banks Tuesday that from now on I'm thinking no hit."

Bench Even Tried Bunt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ken Holtzman's strong left arm and some co-operative Cincinnati Astroturf have combined to produce the 1971 baseball season's first no-hitter.

Holtzman, the lanky Chicago Cub left-hander, spun a 1-0 classic at the Reds to highlight the abbreviated Thursday night baseball action.

In the only other games played, St. Louis Cardinals trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 7-1 and Atlanta Braves downed Houston Astros 5-2 in the other National League action and Boston Red Sox edged New York Yankees 3-2 in the only American League encounter.

But the night belonged to Holtzman, who pitched the second no-hitter of his career, overcoming some early wildness and reliving the last 14 Reds in order. He struck out six, including Tommy Helms and Lee May for the final two outs in the ninth inning. The only Cincinnati runners came on four walks.

The Reds tried everything to get a hit off Holtzman and even went to the extreme of having slugger Johnny Bench lay down a headoff bunt in the seventh inning. It was accordingly to Holtzman, his closest call.

"At first, I thought Bench had a hit," the 25 - year - old pitcher said. "There was no way I could have thrown Bench out if the ball remained fair."

Holtzman rushed off the mound, across the Astroturf-covered infield and towards the ball.

"When I got over there, I saw the ball was spinning and I knew it would roll foul," the pitcher said. The ball spun off the artificial turf into foul territory and then Bench flied out.

That was the Reds' best chance for a hit.

Holtzman, with control problems in the early innings, got into his toughest jam in the third when Buddy Bradford walked and moved up on a wild pitch. He advanced to third on an infield out and then was stranded as Gary Nolan tapped in front of the plate and Hal McRae flied out.

In the top of the third, Holtzman scored the game's only run. He reached first on Tony Peres' throwing error, moved up on an infield out and scored on Glenn Beckert's single.

Golf Therapy for Boyer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Out-of-work third baseman Clete Boyer flexed his muscles and slammed a three-wood down the lush fairway.

"I'm pretending the ball is Paul Richards," said Boyer. "I've been in the water three times . . . everytime I see water, I want to dunk him."

Boyer became a free agent Thursday when no National League baseball club took him on waivers from Atlanta Braves.

Boyer was released by the Braves after he engaged in a public verbal exchange with Richards, Braves vice-president.

Boyer started it by telling a writer for the New York Post that there would be no place in baseball for a man like Richards, and sharply criticized the management of the club.

Richards responded by calling Boyer "a lousy player" who is scared every time he goes to the plate.

"I'm beginning to shop around," said Clete, "making some calls to other big league clubs."

Hees Says Deficit of Billion Should Be Run by Government

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was urged in the Commons Thursday to fight unemployment with heavy deficit financing, but Manpower Minister Otto Lang was not receptive.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said the government should be willing to run a deficit of up to $1 billion this year and Ed Broadbent (NDP —Oshawa-Whitby) said it should get into serious deficit financing by spending billions on housing in the 1970s.

But the furthest Mr. Lang would go was to say that the government must engage in a responsible policy of deficit financing—which he said it already has undertaken.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson's budget statement is scheduled for Friday, June 18.

His last budget, in December, predicted a $329 million deficit for the 1970-71 fiscal year just completed, and he since has said he believes his fiscal policy has proved to be about right.

The House was debating a motion introduced by Lorna Comeau (P C—South Western Nova) saying the government has failed to live up to its duty to create full employment programs.

Under House rules the motion did not come to a vote.

The Commons was scheduled to turn today to second-reading debate on a bill to create a Canadian Development Corporation, financed at first by government money but which later would be turned into a private corporation with limited government involvement.

Mr. Hees didn't get any more receptive a response when he pushed for a tougher government threat of wage and price controls.

He said labor and government leaders have told him they abhor the thought of such mandatory controls.

To keep inflation to an acceptable level of 3½ per cent the government should get tough with wage and price guides, he said, making it clear they would be turned into mandatory control if they were not followed.

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), parliamentary secretary to Mr. Benson, said there was a massive national consensus when such controls were in force during the Second World War, which he said he doubts exists now in Canada.

If there had been, voluntary guides laid down by the prices and incomes commission would have been more successful.

Most people would not want to return to a controlled Canada he said.

He criticised the opposition for "preaching exaggerated views of the state of the Canadian economy" which made people think exaggerated remedies are desirable and even essential.

But he admitted that the government has not rejected the possibility of specific controls or intervention when collective bargaining breaks down in particular situations and intervention became unavoidable.

Mr. Broadbent said that if the government were really concerned about unemployment it would provide adequate housing for all Canadians by the end of the decade.

Housing investment was the best way to expand the economy, he said, and access to adequate housing should be as much a right as access to secondary school education.

He also said that if the unemployment level is not reduced to three per cent very soon "we could experience one of the greatest social crises in the history of our country."

For the first time average people—not just businessmen and professionals—were resenting the burden of education and welfare costs.

Mr. Lang said the government must continue to expand and improve access to information on job opportunities, labor needs and technological forecasts to allow individuals to choose their own careers better.

This seemed more feasible than and over-all plan leading to particular kinds of training to prepare young people for specific job opportunities.

Canada's labor force has expanded more than that of any other developed country over the last 13 years, he said—by 40 per cent compared to 25 per cent in the United States and five per cent in Britain.

Mr. Hees made some predictions on the coming budget.

It would be an election budget, he said, designed to put the government in a good light for a fall election.

There would be lower taxes for persons earning up to $8,000 a year, no mention of a new increase in the middle-income brackets, no mention of increased tax for corporations on their first $25,000 earnings, and no tax against unrealised capital gains.

But a capital gains tax for realised gains would be announced.

Then, if the government won the election, it would bring in the less popular proposals in the white paper on taxation.

Norman Cafik (L—Ontario) called for the government to make meaningful tax cuts in the new budget, and to relieve the uncertainty he said the white paper is causing businessmen.

Trudeau Will Meet Canadian Ukrainians

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will meet a group of Canadian Ukrainians Monday, he informed the Commons Thursday.

Steve Paprouki PC — Edmonton Centre said the group seeks freedom for two Ukrainian nationalists held by the Soviet government.

Mr. Trudeau said he will repeat to the group what he said in Russia and later in the Commons on the matter.

He told the Commons Monday the government will not support "the independence of any part of any country" which is recognised under international law any more than we would want any other country to support the independence of any part of Canada."

Mr. Trudeau denied opposition assertions that he had compared Ukrainian nationals with the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Fatigue Is Most Common Ailment

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

If I were asked to choose the one most common complaint that I hear from patients, it would be "I'm tired." People suffer from pain, cough, nervousness, headaches, and innumerable other disagreeable sensations — but fatigue leads the list.

It is found in the healthy as well as in the sick. Nevertheless, if you are inordinately "tired all the time" I think you should have your doctor find the real cause (mental or physical) for your discomfort.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am only 25, have no reason to feel tired, yet I am continually exhausted. Even on days when I don't have to clean the house, market, or socialize too much.

This has been going on for over a year. As I feel healthy otherwise, I haven't seen our doctor about it. I've been taking vitamins, iron and eating resting in bed two hours in the afternoon hasn't helped.

Sometimes I'm so tired it's an effort to eat. I really have a hard time swallowing my food. Recently my husband called my attention to the fact that my lids are drooping. I have looked in the mirror and noticed it, too.

To put it mildly, I'm tired all over. I know it's about time I went to my doctor. I'll make an appointment. Meanwhile, does this history give you any hints about what might be wrong? — Mrs. C.

COMMENT; As I said, fatigue is one of the most common complaints. It can be found in perfectly healthy individuals whose life scheme is off the beam: due to emotional problems or to overwork, long, overexertioning. These reasons may apply to you.

However, with your suspicious history, I'm sure your doctor will want to make sure that you are not suffering from a myasthenia gravis".

This is a disorder (cause unknown) in which there's some defect in nerve impulse transmission. Muscles become abnormally weak. Even breathing, swallowing, and keeping the eyes open become a taxing effort.

There are special tests to diagnose the disease. In treatment, certain "anti-cholinergic" drugs are often effective. In some cases, removing the thymus gland has been helpful.

Patients who have complained of being dead-tired are often amazed at the surge of energy which follows either medical or surgical treatment. Sometimes improvement is only temporary.

But proper diagnosis and treatment have undoubtedly helped thousands of people who suffered from the unexplained tiredness." Myasthenia gravis is often overlooked — but doctors are becoming more alert in discovering and managing this illness.

For Miss K.: Don't let your friends talk you out of wearing dark glasses. Many people like yourself are especially sensitive to strong sunlight. It's true that many wear such glasses as an affectation. But I think, in most cases, people who wear dark glasses are not aping Hollywood stars. They just want to be comfortable.

For Mr. C.: Yes, it's true that one may have blood in the stools, too. We have symptomatic tests which indicate presence or absence of abnormal bleeding. It's for these reasons that doctors may find trouble where it is not suspected by the patient.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Bible's Perfect Means Whole

The enormous response I have received to my recent column about the "meekness" that is blessed in the Bible — in which I pointed out that the modern meaning of "meek" is far from what Jesus had in mind — prompts me to offer another clarification of the ways we misinterpret Biblical injunctions.

The thou, therefore, perfect," Jesus instructed the disciple; and the word "perfect" is a stumbling - block for most people. We know we cannot be perfect; nobody human can. We look upon it as a distant goal we should struggle toward, and we do not take this impossible instruction too seriously.

But, as Rudolph Bultman, the finest Biblical exegete of our century, has disclosed, the Greek word for "perfect," and its Hebrew antecedent, had more the meaning of "whole, unflawed, uncracked," as a "perfect cup" is one that does not topple or spill its contents and fulfills its function "perfectly".

Jesus knew that nobody could be "perfect", He Himself rebuked one of His followers by saying, "Why do you call me good? There is nobody good except our Father in Heaven." As a man, Jesus was all too aware of human frailty.

Most of us are filled with many disparate and contradictory tendencies; we are cured and cracked, inconsistent and pulled in opposite directions by our sense of values and our selfish needs. We will behave kindly toward someone we know, and badly towards someone we don't know, ignoring the fact that both are equally our neighbors".

We are enjoined to become a "whole" cup that is stable and steady and seamless, that offers the same ease of drinking to anyone who takes it. A "perfect cup" is not a one Platonic Ideal, but a real cup designed by an honest craftsman who knows that form follows function. And a "perfect person" is not a saint, but one who puts himself together for the function of acting like a human being at all times.

This is hard, but it is not impossible. It is a psychological task as much as a moral one. And it is "practical" rather than Utopian, for the cracked cup is no good to itself or to anyone else. To become who you are — all the way through — is the only path to life worth pursuing. Jesus' injunction is really what modern psychiatry is all about.

Montreal's Postmen Quit Union Meeting

CALGARY (CP) — Montreal delegates to the Canadian Union of Postal Workers' convention, unhappy with methods of dealing with a revised constitution, stormed out of the meeting again Thursday.

It was the second time this week that 71 Montreal members left the convention. Monday they walked out over a dispute on a resolution barring handling of mail emanating from behind picket lines. They returned the next day.

The constitution is being revised for the first time since the union was formed five years ago. When it was first presented Thursday morning, heated words flowed from the floor over many of its points.

The Montreal delegation gave no reason for leaving the meeting, but as they went to a private discussion one member said the union executive had handled procedure for dealing with the new constitution incompetently. Unlike Monday, the Montreal postmen were not joined by delegates from Quebec City.

Throughout the day Montreal members had argued, without success, that the constitution deserved clause-by-clause consideration.

The breaking point came when a Vancouver delegate said: "It's become obvious that certain segments of this convention have nothing on their minds but to prevent passage of the constitution . . . boy, I'm fed up. I can't even talk any more."

The remaining 400 delegates jeered the Montreal delegation as it left. he room and applauded the Vancouver delegate's speech.

There was no indication when the Montreal group would return.

Union President William Houle has said the aim of the constitution is to "transform our union into a real militant industry union, not a civil service-type association." To do this, he said, the union needs more flexibility and more involvement from its 18,000 members.

The walkout Monday resulted when a resolution on handling "hot mail" was approved.

Montreal and Quebec delegates said the motion gave inside postal workers in Montreal the right to strike if employees of G. LaPalme Inc., put out of work earlier this year when the company lost a federal mail-delivery contract, picketed Montreal post offices.

Mr. Houle said the LaPalme employees were not on strike and not affiliated with the postal union, so there was no reason for a walkout.

Later at the convention an amended resolution was tabled indefinitely and the strike talk died down.

Former Welfare Officer Convicted

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — The first round of court action involving welfare fraud in this town of 10,000 ended Thursday with the conviction of J. Gordon Rogers, former welfare officer, on a charge of defrauding the federal and provincial governments.

It took the jury only 64 minutes to find Rogers, a town councillor here, guilty of defrauding the governments during the first 10 months of 1970 while he controlled town welfare.

He was remanded until next Tuesday for sentence. The maximum possible is 10 years.

As jury foreman Donald Lord read the verdict, his mother and two sisters began to sob.

Moments later his mother, Mrs. Llewellyn Rogers, slipped crying from her chair and was carried from the room by police, spectators and one of her daughters.

Six other men have been charged in the case which unfolded last October during a lengthy RCMP investigation into welfare operations.

Cases against the other men were adjourned until later this month pending the outcome of the Rogers' trial at which five of them testified under protection of the Canada Evidence Act. They said they had forged endorsements on welfare cheques at Rogers' request.

William Richard Veale of Port Hill, P.E.I., one of the men charged, said Rogers had told him several times: "Ten more months of this and I'll be on easy street."

Testimony during the 11-day trial showed that Rogers had been provided with blank cheques, some of which were then filled out to persons no longer living in the province.

Others were made out to welfare recipients who were among the 145 witnesses called by the Crown. Some of them said they had not received all the welfare money listed for them in department records, and that in some cases, the names endorsed on the backs were not in their handwriting.

Many recipients identified their handwriting on cheques but said they did not get the full amount shown on the front. They told the court the cheques were signed while blank and that Rogers gave them money or vouchers for food and clothing in return.

Rogers said he was administering the accounts of these people because he did not think they could handle their money.

Athol MacDonald, manager of the local Bank of Montreal branch, testified that several loans of $500 to $800 were made to welfare recipients on the security of post-dated welfare cheques. He said the money was deposited to Rogers' account.

Mrs. Eleanor McGuirk of Toronto and formerly of Summerside, to whom one loan had been made, said she never received the money and although she identified her handwriting on the bank documents, she did not recall signing them.

In his testimony, Rogers said all money went to welfare recipients but he did not keep accounts and therefore could not say how much went to each one. He said the money from the forged cheques went to people who needed help but, who did not qualify for more welfare aid than they were receiving.

Rogers told the court it was true an $1,800 oil bill for apartments owned by him had been paid with welfare cheques. However, he said, he sometimes spent personal funds on welfare cases.

Crown Prosecutor Joseph Ghiz said in his summation Thursday morning that Rogers made an admission of guilt when he burned cancelled welfare cheques dating back to 1967 after the police investigation opened.

Defence counsel Bruce MacDonald said in his summation that Rogers was overworked handling 250 welfare cases a month, which was 190 more than the national average for a welfare worker.

Rampaging Disease Crushes Aid Effort

Too Late for Medical Aid

Little Hope For 1,000s

NEW DELHI (Reuter)—Thousands of disease-wracked men, women and children are threatened by a cholera epidemic raging along the eastern border states of India and Pakistan which already has cau.ed an estimated 3,000 deaths.

Health Minister Uma Shanka Dikshit told Parliament Friday that "at the rate they are coming in, nothing, let alone medicines, can be supplied to them."

Thousands can only stagger across the border, famished and diseased—to fall down on foreign soil.

India is bitter at what she regards as a lack of world care for the suffering and the dying.

The death toll in the Nadia district of India's West Bengal state alone has reached 2,350, official sources said. But newspapers report the figure at nearer 3,000 and there seems to be no way of stopping the disease rampaging through the undernourished refugees from East Bengal.

A top Indian health official said: "We just cannot measure the extent of the problem, and how it will escalate is anybody's guess."

The cholera has been indentified as the virulent and deadly Asiatic variety and many thousands will succumb as the southwest monsoon approaches from across the Bay of Bengal.

Headsets are used to aid in instructions given by the teacher.

Canada Ranks 47th

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — If Canada were one of the United States, it would rank 47th among the states in income per capita, vice-chairman Robert W. Bonner of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. said Friday.

Addressing a business conference at the University of Western Ontario, Mr. Bonner said only Ontario and British Columbia, with per capita incomes of about $3,300 and $3,121, achieve any notable rank among American states, ranking 33rd and 42nd.

Canadian average per capita income in 1969 was a little more than $2,700 in U.S. funds, putting Canada ahead of only West Virginia, Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Mr. Bonner said few Canadians seem to have grasped the seriousness of the unemployment facing the country, caused not only by recent monetary and fiscal restraint, but by the addition to the labor force of those born in the post-war years.

Union To Pay Hoffas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post says James R. Hoffa was guaranteed substantial income for life and other benefits for his family before agreeing to relinquish the Teamsters union presidency.

Union sources say Hoffa will receive a lifetime pension estimated at $75,000 a year. The Post says. Earlier it had quoted sources as saying Hoffa would draw a $100,000 annual salary as the union's president emeritus.

The Post says Hoffa also was assured, if the union's convention in July approves it, continuation of the $40,000-a-year salary to his ill wife Josephine as director of the Teamsters' women's? political arm for as long as she wants and appointment of his son, James P., as the union's general counsel, paying $30,000 to $50,000 a year. The young Hoffa now is a Teamsters lawyer for Local 299 and Joint Council 43 in Detroit.

Hoffa, serving a 13-year prison term at Lewisburg, Pa., for jury tampering and pension fund fraud.

Won't Apologize

Borowski Facing Jail

WINNIPEG (CP) — Highways Minister Joe Borowski vowed Friday he'd rather go to jail than apologize for remarks about a Dauphin magistrate which led to his conviction five weeks ago for contempt of court.

In a letter to the judge who found him in contempt, he said:

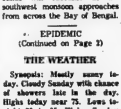
"I will go to jail not just for one year, but indefinitely, rather than apologize to the real culprit, or to publicly accept the proposition that magistrates and judges are immune to public criticism as you imply in your judgment."

Mr. Justice Israel Nitikman of Court of Queen's Bench, in convicting Mr. Borowski April 23, gave him a one-year suspended sentence, on condition he make a full apology within 60 days to Magistrate F. M. Mauwaring.

The contempt of court charge against Mr. Borowski arose from comments he made in a radio interview in March about the Dauphin magistrate, who was hearing a case brought against the minister under the provincial Vacations with Pay Act.

The magistrate allowed the case to proceed, over the objections of Mr. Borowski's counsel that it was "frivolous and vexatious." The case was transferred later to Chief Magistrate Harold Guy in Winnipeg who acquitted Mr. Borowski earlier this week and seemed the matter a "regrettable incident."

The letter, written on the letterhead of the minister of the department of public works and highways, said the charge under the Vacations with Pay Act had been serious enough to warrant proceedings under the Criminal Code.



"But even more serious to me personally was the fact that as a dedicated trade unionist, I was accused of the ultimate crime in the labor movement (beating a working man out of his just earnings)".

Teeth Smashed: Inmate

Shackled Prisoners Clank Into Court to Face Murder Charge

KINGSTON (CP) — Leg-irons clanked as 18 handcuffed prisoners trooped into court with a small army of police and prison guards Friday to be remanded to Tuesday, June 8, on charges of non-capital murder and kidnapping.

Twelve were charged with two counts of non-capital murder, five with kidnapping and one faced two murder and one kidnapping charge resulting from the 27-hour, mid-April riot at Kingston penitentiary that left two prisoners dead and the main cellblock of the 137-year-old prison a shambles.

Allan La Frenière, 25, of Toronto, charged with kidnapping in the holding of six prison guards as hostages, asked Provincial Judge P. E. D. Baker whether it was necessary "that we have to come in with leg-irons on."

The judge said he was not aware the prisoners were in leg-irons, but promised he would "look into it."

Earlier, the 18 had been transported by bus from various institutions where they have been held since the riot.

They walked single file, heads bowed, through a narrow laneway and up a set of stairs to a courtroom in the Frontenac County municipal building. Most were unsmiling and appeared pale as police and prison guards swarmed around the building.

Brian William Dodge, 27, of Petrolia, Ont., charged with murder and kidnapping, was told by Crown Attorney John E. Sampson to speak up when he began addressing the court.

Dodge said-he couldn't speak too loud because "they smashed my teeth and I haven't eaten in seven days."

He said he wants to be transferred from Kingston penitentiary where he has been held since the riot because "they're just aggravating me there, I've got three charges against me already."

Judge Baker said his remarks now are on record and an investigation of his complaints will probably be made.

Earlier, Glen A. Morris, 24, of Townsriver, N.J., charged with murder, also made a statement.

"I would like to ask the court to investigate the conditions under which we have been living at KP since the trouble," Morris told the judge.

"I don't mean an investigation by some government agency. Send the health department.

"We are sleeping on concrete beds and stuff. We haven't been convicted yet. Do we have any rights?"

Judge Baker said his remarks

Sampson to "have a look, this man has made a statement for the record."

The charges, believed unprecedented in Canadian prison history, were laid after Detective Inspector Wilfrid Kealey of Kingston, aided by provincial police teams, interviewed the 500 prisoners who held the main cellblock April 14-18.

Six prison guards, later released unharmed, were kidnapped and about $300,000 damage caused when the prisoners went on a rampage that also left two fellow prisoners, Brian Enzor, 26 and Bertrand H. Robert, 34, dead.

Enzor's body was found stuffed into a heating duct after the riot ended, and Robert died in hospital a few days later. Both suffered massive head wounds.

Judge Baker read the murder charges in about nine minutes, followed by a 20-minute recess before the kidnapping charges were read. He accepted no pleas.

A defence lawyer asked Mr. Sampson when a date for a preliminary hearing would be set.

"As far as we are concerned, the sooner the better," Mr. Sampson replied. However, he could give no definite date, saying there are "many factors to be considered."

Others charged with murder are: Wayne Herbert McGurk, 27, Edward Maxwell Fowler, 18, Robert Francis Robidoux, 18, all of Toronto; William David Shepley, 24, Windsor, Ont.; Harold Kenneth St. Amour, 29, Pembroke, Ont.; Ernest James Bugler, St. Thomas, Ont.; Brian Lester Beaucage, 23, James Robert Gag, 24, and Donald Gag, 20, all of London; Ont.; David Sylvester Birt, 24, Charlottetown; and Edward Fulton Johnston, 22, Clarkson, Ont.

Others charged with kidnapping are: Leon Joseph Paul Barriault, 34, McAdam, N.B.; Charles Wayne Saunders, 22, Wallaceburg, Ont.; James Robert Adams, 31, Mount Clemmons, Mich.; and William Jas Knight, 27, Dresden, Ont.

New Long Distance Fees Go Into Effect Sunday

New long distance telephone rates, based on direct dialing costs to the company, go into effect at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

Until September, when direct long distance dialing will be available in Belleville and all Hastings and Prince Edward county exchanges, callers here will have the advantage of both the lower direct dialing rates and the services of an operator.

After direct dialing comes to local exchanges, the low rates will be available only to dial-it-yourself callers. The old rates continue to apply for operator-handled calls. Operator-handled calls, based on a three-minute period, will be used by the handicapped and by those unable to reach their party through direct dialing and who therefore need operator assistance.

The new service charges apply to the area served by Bell Canada in Ontario, Quebec and parts of Labrador and the Northwest Territories.

In communities where direct distance dialing service is not available, including Hastings and Prince Edward counties, station-to-station calls that would be dialed direct if the exchange were equipped for it will be charged as if they were dialed.

Instead of paying $1 for a three-minute station-to-station call from Belleville to Scarborough, the cost will now be 37 cents.

The new rates are based on a one-minute period. The cost of a station-to-station call from here to Scarborough, for instance, is 25 cents for the first minute and 27 cents for each additional minute.

Discounts on the one-minute based direct dialing calls are one-third off between 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. and one-half off from 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. and all day Sundays.

The new schedule, say Bell Canada spokesmen, continues to pass on the economies of direct distance dialing to long distance users, while reflecting the higher cost of providing operator service. Based on present calling patterns, most calls will cost customers less under the new rate schedule.

Park Concerts Start Sunday

From the Music Performance Trust Funds collected from the recording industry, $5,804 will be made available to the Belleville Federation of Musicians to provide free, musical entertainment for the city of Belleville.

Through this money and co-sponsorship of The Intelligencer, the federation will commence its summer program of Sunday afternoon concerts at Zwick's Island this Sunday, at 2 p.m.

The concerts will run throughout the summer and will be bringing such bands as the Friendly City Stage Band (appearing tomorrow), and the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra, appearing on June 27.

Doug Anselone, president of the local federation of musicians said, "the meaning of this money is to bring back interest in the live entertainment field. There will be no charge whatsoever for the performance and we will be trying to give as much variety as possible in our music agenda."

In each afternoon performance there will be, it is hoped two sets of performers in different fields so that a variety of audiences can be satisfied.

"On several occasions," said Mr. Anselone ,"we will have rock bands performing with concert orchestras."

"In the case of the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra," he added, "there will only be one band for the afternoon. We feel that the entire afternoon should be given to a band of this calibre and fame."

"The performances will run each Sunday afternoon at the same time from now until the end of September. The program will involve as many as 30 bands and orchestras," said Mr. Anselone.

Half-mile Chase Ends in Capture

A half-mile foot chase in the city's east end was climaxed early this morning by the arrest of a Deseronto youth who is charged with being in possession of a stolen truck.

City police spotted the stolen vehicle at the corner of Victoria and Farley and when stopped, the driver took off afoot with police in hot pursuit.

Douglas Thomas Solmes, 19, was arrested on Station street and lodged in police cells.

The truck, owned by Metcalfe Foods Ltd. of Deseronto was reported stolen at 4 a.m. and was stopped in Belleville half an hour later.

No Races This Year

TRENTON (Staff) — There will definitely be no hydroplane races on the Trent River this summer, but plans are being made now to hold them next year.

The chamber of commerce had been working with the Oakville Hydroplane Club to organize races this July. However, the boat club's debt the Chamber to meet and mands because too steep for plans broke down.

The Oakville club had asked the Trenton chamber to supply $2,000 in prize money as an incentive to participation for the days a freeway.

The Chamber balked at this and, on hearing the news, Oakville hydroplaners have substantially reduced their demands.

Now they are asking for $300 in trophies and the chamber is more receptive — receptive enough to ask the club to open negotiations for holding races next year.

Loyalist Board Sets Tendering Procedure

The matter of what tender will be accepted and what companies can submit a tender was discussed and resolved at the monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of Loyalist College.

Two problems emerging from this discussion were the sharing of power (what committees should be responsible for the actual awarding of contracts) and prequalification of sub trades.

Alderman Donald Soutter, member of the board, contended that "from five to 50 per cent of the total building fund ($4.5 million) could be contracted without the advice of the board."

Three committees forming the administration of the project are the Board of Governors, highest on the list, the building committee and the planning committee.

At this time the planning committee can award contracts up to $100,000. If the appraisal is greater than the architect's estimate by 10 percent, then the decision for the contract must be passed to the building committee for further guidelines on alternatives of tender or material. An assessment of this nature was proposed by Judge J. C. Anderson and carried.

Prequalification, meaning that a preliminary screening of contractors would be made to ensure that the contractor can live up to his tender, was debated on the grounds that if not made public, some possibly qualified firm might be eliminated by the prequalification.

Judge Anderson said, "if guidelines are advertised through the trade papers and the media, explaining the qualifications required, then this will make it a public tender. Similar prescission was carried out for the management fee contract and, "for a project of this size, said one board member, "preselection is good."

The management fee contract involves the commissioning of a contractor who can erect the building on time. The sole purpose of the contractor is to bring together and co-ordinate the sub trades.

Out of the 16 candidates, six were given the right to place a bid or tender for the contract. Through consultation with the architect, the board and the building committee, the commission was given to Dalton Engineering.

The same can be done fairly with the sub trades." said one board member.

Prequalification of tender, and distribution of power all touched on the subject of what tender would be the best.

"The problem here," said Judge Anderson, "is when do we know the lowest tender is the best one?"

At the conclusion of the debate it was suggested by Frank Rabel, chairman of the board, "when a decision of worth of the tender is needed, then counselling should be obtained from John Dalton of Dalton Engineering or some one who has more experience in the subject of value of tender.

Epidemic

It is forecast that the air mass will unleash a violent epidemic over Bengal within the next week.

The monsoon will flood many of the refugee camps on low lying ground and without international aid on a massive scale it is difficult to see how diseases borne by contaminated water—cholera, gastro-enteritis and dysentery—will be contained.

The refugees in the 500 camps are packed tight under bamboo frames covered with tarpaulins and open at the side. Their plight will be bad. But the fate of the estimated two million living in the open is even worse.

Even with a giant international effort there is little hope for thousands of children and nursing mothers vulnerable to disease and hunger.

I toured refugee camps in West Bengal and the remote territory of Tripura and saw starving, diseased children who were little more than collections of bones covered in wrinkled skin.

Refugees are still pouring into India at the rate of 60,000 to 100,000 a day, many with bullet and shrapnel wounds, in a flow which began after the Pakistani Army's crackdown in March against East Pakistani secessionists led by Sheik Mujibur Rahman.

Many never finish the trip. Men, women and especially young children drop by the roadside and are left to die of hunger and exhaustion as the hordes move miserably on towards India—and they hope—safety.

But although safety from violence awaits them so does cholera which could prove to be the greatest killer in all Pakistan's strife.

BUSH — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Percy Bush, who passed away June 5, 1961.
Memories are golden, not made so easy,
Treasured still with a love sincere,
In our hearts he is living yet,
We loved him too dearly to forget.
Sadly remembered by wife Ethel and family.

WALKER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Percy Walker, who passed away June 5, 1961.
What would give if we could say,
That he is here with us today,
To hear your voice, see your smile,
Just to walk with him a while,
To hold his hand and hear him laugh,
Cherish him with care,
For you'll never know the heartache,
We share.
The pain in his vacant chair.

Official Plan For Quinte Area Is Possible in 2½ Years

"An official plan for the Quinte Area Planning Board could be tabled within 2½ years," the board was told Thursday night by Paul H. Pirie, planning director with Phillips Planning and Engineering Ltd. of Burlington, when he presented a rush appraisal report on the needs of the recently - formed organization.

The appraisal, authorized last month at a cost to the board of $1,500, summarizes existing date comprising planning documents, bylaws, studies, maps and aerial photographs.

Costs for the official plan are of major concern to the nine municipalities in the Quinte Planning Area.

"Provincial departments are carrying out projects which can be tied into the quinte planning project and they have been making grants available in other cases for maps and recreation research," Mr. Pirie told the board.

"I'm sure that there will be various sources of grants available for the Quinte Planning Board and it's a matter of sitting down with the government departments to review our program in relation to theirs and to determine finally what grants might be available."

He also mentioned that "ARDA has been advancing money in other areas as well."

However, a detailed plan which would prepare the government to offer such grants is not possible at this time. "Until the board has decided what program they really want to have carried out, we haven't been able to arrive at our definite cost figures for the project."

The planning director said the board must set down a "balance of developmenta" setting trends and goals of either commercial, industrial or agricultural planning.

Sidney Township Reeve Jack M. Bush, chairman of the new board, praised the efforts of the Burlington firm in compiling the data in such short order.

"I think it lays down a good planning program in regard t staff and our first planning needs and how to implement a planning study to head toward an official plan," he said during a press interview following Thursday's third meeting of the Quinte Area Planning Board.

"An official plan is a long procedure to get steadied and many public meetings," will be required.

He stressed public involvement both in early and concluding steps of preparations for the official plan governing the nine municipalities involved. The city of Belleville, town of Trenton, villages of Brighton, Frankford and Stirling, and townships of Brighton, Murray, Sidney and Thurlow.

"The consultants have recommended the use of a dual role of consultants and planning staff to develop the official plan together," he told newsmen.

Asked to comment on whether Mr. Pirie's 27-month plan was a bit too optimistic, Mr. Bush said "I do think the 2½ year program is accustoming to aim for . . it sounds like a lot of work, but there are a lot of planning programs done in the area which have to be knitted together to fit the crossword puzzle.

"I think in 2½ years it can be done and we'll aim for that."

He forecast a major problem would be involving the 75,000 residents in the planning area.

"The problem will be to get local people involved and they should be involved to know what is going on.

"It is their plan . . . all we are trying to do is implement it and put it together, but it's the people of this area that have to live with it," he commented.

The planning of local zoning bylaws which are the policing of the plan is the biggest job and if people are not involved as we go through the steps on it, the real meat of it, people will upset if they are not aware of what's going on.

"We hope the public is involved in it all the way through," Mr. Bush commented.

He expressed hope for government involvement, but stressed the balance would rest on the shoulders of the residents.

"We're always looking for some help from our senior levels of government and we will be knocking on doors to get some special grants for planning purposes . . . this has been done in many other areas under area planning."

In answer to criticisms by Trenton Councillor George Greer that the levies came as a top-heavy additional burden to Trenton's budget, reported in Friday's Intelligencer, Mr. Bush said "I think we're all faced with an increased levy of planning for all our municipalities this year.

"Trenton is not alone, but these are the things we are faced with . . . development, policies and plans.

"They cost money and we'll all have to share our costs."

Giant Flat Car Tested by CN

Canadian National has put a 89-foot depressed-centre flat car on its rails to ship container traffic in greater volume. The car can carry six 20-foot containers or a combination of 20-footers and 40-footers of the type used in international shipping to cut down on loading and unloading of individual cargo items. The big flat car was designed by CN engineers and built in the Point Saint-Charles Shops in Montreal with the aim of controlling rising costs by moving containers in larger volumes.

Apartment Permits Outnumber Houses

Despite numerous petitions from ratepayers in the city's West and East Hill districts demanding rezoning to block apartment house construction, permits for the construction of the multiple family living accommodation are still being issued at city hall.

And for the area from which the strongest protest is coming

City hall records show that during May a permit for a 24-unit apartment block was issued for the south side of Highland Ave. across from the John R. Bush Funeral Home.

However, earlier rumor was to the effect that a "high rise" type structure would be erected on the site now occupied by three conventional type dwellings.

The month's building list showed permits issued for a total of 28 multiple family units and nine single family residences.

Building Inspector Grant Stickle reported the month's building value total was $452,000.

Hudson's Nonsuch On Last Voyage

HAMILTON (CP) — The sailing ship Nonsuch is fated, after a long lake cruise this summer, to spend the rest of her days on a Winnipeg parking lot.

The Nonsuch, a replica of the 17th century original that saw service in the infancy of Canada's fur trading days, leaves Hamilton Harbor next Thursday for Toronto, where it will berth at Ontario Place for two weeks.

She then will sail to several Great Lakes ports, winding up in 2,000-mile voyage—her last—at the Lakehead.

The ship will be stripped and moved overland by truck in September to Winnipeg, to be displayed in a parking lot at the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

The 53-foot ketch will be a gift to the province of Manitoba from the Hudson's Bay Co. The company commissioned the replica to commemorate its 300th anniversary in 1970.

The original Nonsuch sailed into Hudson Bay in 1668, carrying Sieur des Groseil liers and a crew of 15. It took a rich load of beaver pelts home, assuring Europeans of a lucrative fur trade in Canada.

The Hudson's Bay Co. was formed two years after the ship's return.

"A Spiritual Birth"

We do not ask you to believe it. See for yourself. If Jesus really is the truth. The Way, you shouldn't have any real hangup in finding Him. The test is up to God. All we can do is tell you when we've seen and experienced and that it's for real. All we can do is tell you the plain truth. We don't challenge you with the printed word. We don't challenge you by mind, we say or do. We do challenge you by what He is. JESUS has transformed the very core of many lives from death to life. Come and see.

Trade Vital To All

It is common knowledge that trade sanctions against Rhodesia, since its breakaway from Britain have been largely ineffective. At the same time there are those who think that Canada and other western countries should refuse to trade with South Africa because of the republic's apartheid policies.

Apartheid in the eyes of the world is racial discrimination against the black population who are vastly in the majority, by the dominant white minority. To the South Africans it is something else: separate, parallel development of the various racial groups.

Development of the Bantu homelands, as the regions set aside for independence of the native peoples are called, is reported to be going on apace. According to a recent statement of the Minister of Bantu Administration and Development, M. C. Botha, additional land has been acquired, mostly through purchase from whites and the latest census indicates that four of the Bantu homelands — those of the Xhosas, Zulus, North Sothos and the Vendas — have been settled by more than half of their respective populations. While businessmen working in the homelands, in mining and other industries, are permitted entry only on an agency basis and do not have ownership rights.

• • •

South Africa of late has been reaching out to its black neighbors. There is trade with Zambia for one, and the republic has extended agricultural and medical aid to Malawi. The South African information service also mentions visits to the republic by President Banda of Malawi and Prince Makhosini Dlamini, Prime Minister of Swaziland. In another sphere, two Bantu nurses, lecturers at a Pretoria nursing college, were reported among representatives from five countries attending a nurses' seminar in Swaziland.

Such facts should be of interest to Miss Janet Somerville, of the staff of the Canadian Council of Churches committee on Christian vocation. Miss Somerville told a Catholic Women's League of Canada convention in Belleville that by trading with South Africa, Canadians are unwittingly contributing to a situation which she claimed all agree was unhappy and unjust, namely apartheid which she further said forced African laborers to live away from their families left on reservations.

Separation of families however, is not exclusive to the African worker. It happens all the time, in all sections of society, everywhere, from merchant seaman to the Canadian Indian high-rise steelworkers in the United States as well as at home.

• • •

Would cutting off trade serve any purpose? Of course not. It benefits Canadians as well as South Africans of all races, just as two-way trade benefits all nations. Another thing that should interest Miss Somerville is the fact that a million foreign black Africans work in South Africa today. And the biggest problem, as the South African envoy to the United States, H. S. T. Taswell, put it recently, is posed by the thousands of others who enter the country illegally. Much, we might add, like the Mexicans who steal into the United States.

Educationally too, South Africa has much to offer all its citizens. Its universities, says Mr. Taswell, have already produced more black graduates than eight other countries in Africa with a combined population of 118 million.

Perhaps the most ironic fact, in the face of universal criticism of South Africa from outside, are the expressions of approval of apartheid by prominent blacks. Professor H. W. E. Ntsanwisi, chief councilor of the Machangana territorial authority, is quoted as saying that he and the Shangana-Tsonga people endorse separate development "because they would not like to see themselves in South Africa." He describes it as a real attempt to permit peoples of different colors, races and cultures to live together peacefully.

Reminder of Home

Strange how in coming to an unfamiliar part of the world there is yet an affinity and familiarity with the homeland one has left, even a sense of having been here before. The latest group of Tibetan families to have arrived in Belleville from India evidently feel at home in this way. Only the mountains are missing; but then, after they have become settled, perhaps even acquire cars, they will find that mountain country is not far away — in the Laurentians or New England or the Adirondacks of New York.

Tradition Dies Hard

Flag in Commons Plea Gets the Cold Shoulder

By GREG CONNOLLEY

OTTAWA — A Member of Parliament has been trying unsuccessfully for over a year to get the Canadian flag into the House of Commons.

Ralph Stewart, (SENG) member for Cochrane constituency in Northern Ontario, believes the national emblem, should be in a place of honor in the Commons. But he is unable to overcome the kind of mentality in Ottawa that resists change.

The maple leaf flag is seen in prominent display all over Canada. It is kept in legislatures along with provincial flags. It is displayed in federal and municipal buildings. It can be seen in churches and schools.

On Parliament Hill the flag flies over the Peace Tower and the East and West Blocks. It may be seen in the offices of cabinet ministers and in parliamentary committee rooms.

But the flag is not in the Commons. In 1971, six years after the emblem was officially unveiled for the first time on Parliament Hill.

Mr. Stewart has raised the matter with Speaker Lucien Lamoureux and reports the latter believes the placing of the flag in the Commons chamber should be a matter for the MPs to decide.

The Cochrane MP has a private bill on the order paper calling for the display of the flag in the Senate and the Commons. But his motion is so far down the order paper it will not be dealt with at this session of Parliament.

On one occasion this year he sought unanimous consent to have the bill moved forward for early debate. But he said some Conservative members who had opposed the adoption of the flag in the first place, would not give their consent.

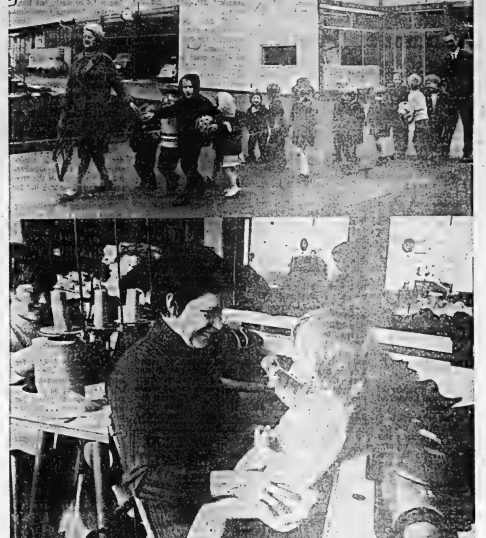
Mr. Stewart said it appeared that some MPs were still "fighting the battle of the flag".

He notes that the maple leaf emblem was officially adopted by Parliament. It had won general acceptance in Canada and now should be treated with respect as befitting the national flag.

And surely, Mr. Stewart observes, one way of demonstrating that respect is to have the flag right in the chambers of Parliament.

"Other countries pay full honor to their flags. You will see them in their legislative assemblies. But here in Canada there appears to be that reluctance or a de - sire to show that showing our flag to full advantage."

Mr. Stewart is not aware of any precedent that would bar the maple leaf flag from the Commons and the Senate. He dismissed suggestions that the flag, as the federal emblem, might appear as an encroachment by government on the independence of Parliament.



"No, I do not accept that at all. It is not the government's flag — it is the flag of all Canadians and for that reason especially it should be honored in the Commons and the Senate.

Some parliamentary sources advance the theory that the reason Speaker Lamoureux does not bring the flag into the chamber is that he fears a row would erupt with objections being voiced by MPs who do not like the maple leaf flag.

During the 1964 flag debate, angry, bitter remarks were hurled about the Commons. Despite the plea of Prime Minister Pearson, Conservative members rejected a motion to make the adoption of the new flag unanimous.

These patriotic passions are calm now... on the surface at least, but would they be aroused by the sight of the flag placed on the Commons floor beside the speaker's chair?

Mr. Stewart does not think so. In fact he wonders if the best thing might be to install the flag in the Commons during the summer recess. "It would just be there when the House resumes in the autumn and I suspect it would be accepted without any fuss at all."

The Pfullendorf textile plant run by Karl H. Haug near Lake Constance in southern Germany has no difficulty keeping women employees even after they marry and have children. Mr. Haug has set up a factory kindergarten and greets the youngsters himself each morning. The children are even allowed to visit their mothers on the job. The result, productivity among the women employees has risen. (German Features photo.)

Quebec and the Victoria Conference

Montreal Le Devoir: Following indications which came out of the February conference and which Mr. Bourassa enumerated in the national assembly May 18, the constitutional conference in Victoria will, as a matter of fact, be asked to consider closely some of the following subjects: Repatriation and an amending formula for the constitution; fundamental political rights; language rights; regional disparity; the Supreme Court of Canada; the workings of federal-provincial relations and modernization of the constitution.

On each of these subjects, Mr. Bourassa now has received ... written proposals. Even if the text of each of these proposals remains rigorously secret for the time being, one can tell from the subjects and the priority one understands ... is being given to them, that the constitutional conference is clearly orienting itself, henceforth, in the direction of Ottawa's views rather than those of Quebec.

The revision has continued since 1968 on two different wavelengths. Conscious of its own problems and aspirations, Quebec continues to insist on the sharing of jurisdictions.

Concerned about reinforcing the present federation, Ottawa, supported by English-Canadian opinion, persists in centring the debate primarily on the political and linguistic rights of individual citizens and on mechanisms required to assure the functioning of federalism.

• • •

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: It is at the very least futile to recall that the next constitutional conference which will be held in Victoria June 14, will be the meeting of the last chance if no positive result is recorded.

The impatience of certain premiers in the face of the marking of time that has until now characterized these meetings is slowly coming into the open. Three of them, Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, Harry Strom of Alberta and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba, might have said they will leave the conference if no solution is found for the problem of constitutional revision.

That is to say that if the next meeting of premiers follows the same lines as the previous ones, it is very possible that the Confederation train will finally halt in Victoria.

But before foundering in pessimism and too easily concluding a fiasco, there is room to question once more the orientation that Quebec, on one hand, and Ottawa, on the other, intend to give to this next meeting.

It is obvious that ... the question of constitutional revision will not present itself in the same way for the other premiers of English-speaking provinces. The leaders of these provinces could be satisfied with some minor amendments to this 100 year-old constitution and the game will be over.

• • •

Granby La Voix de l'Est: There are grounds to be astonished by the trip of Mr. Turner to London.

According to the interim prime minister, Mr. Sharp, the justice minister was gathering information in the British capital on procedures for the repatriation of the Canadian constitution.

But is Canada already set to amend its constitution and above all repatriate it? Would it not be preferable to await the decision of the June constitutional conference in Victoria?

Lost City Is Sought In Bahamas Waters

Kingston Whig Standard

Does the legendary lost city of Atlantis lie beneath the sea off the Bahamas?

About four years ago an aircraft pilot sighted huge wall-like structures which could be man-made. The vast slabs, some of them up to five yards square, and forming a double row about 300 yards long, were later photographed by an American underwater explorer. An investigation was begun by the Science Museum of Miami.

Among the people to have studied the photographs is Dr. Nicholas Flemming of the British National Institute of Oceanography. In an interview with a BBC World Service reporter, Dr. Flemming said from what he has seen of the pictures, he is 99 per cent certain that the structures are man-made. But Dr. Flemming cautioned that there will be considerable difficulty in dating them. On most archaeological sites, he pointed out, there is usually evidence - bones, or bits of wood, or pottery — which can fix an approximate age. Of the Bahamas where the structures lie, there is nothing. The sea has had centuries to destroy such traces of man, Dr. Flemming said.

Atlantis, that city of gold and silver which vanished overnight beneath the ocean, has fired the imaginations of countless people throughout the years, despite the fact that archaeologists generally ridicule the story. Atlantis may never have existed, but beneath the sea off the Bahamas, those walls - if, in fact they are walls - exist and will be waiting to intrigue all who study them, hoping to discover their origins.

Even in an age of moon landings and brilliant scientific and technological achievement, it would be a rather dull world if there were no stories of sunken cities, lost civilizations, and the like.

Netherlands-born Priest Tries To Wean Indians From Welfare

DAVIS INLET, NFM. (CP) — A Netherlands-born Roman Catholic priest has spent the last 16 years in this Labrador community trying to loosen the Nascopie Indians' dependency on welfare by restoring native self-respect and increasing their income to a level of independence.

Rev. Francis Peters, an Oblate missionary, arrived in Labrador in 1955—unable to speak either English or the Indian dialects—to find the Nascopie a victim of "cultural genocide" and facing a loss of identity.

"They were a helpless and dejected people," Father Peters recalled in an interview. "They had lost their manhood."

The Nascopie, or Barren Land Indians, once were nomads of the Labrador hinterland, hunting caribou for food and trading furs with the white man.

"The Indian caught the white man's civilization," said Father Peters. Eventually the game began to disappear and the native grew more and more dependent on the white man.

"Our presence there depleted the natural resources on which his life was based," said the priest, a burly six-footer whose booming voice backs up his convictions.

Since the Nascopie could not return to his former way of life, he had to be integrated with the new social order.

It is this transition for which Father Peters works hardest.

The Nascopie of 1955 were in a pitiable situation, poorly dressed, diseased and existing mainly on charitable handouts and welfare assistance.

Father Peters spent six months learning their language, then with his own resources and provincial government aid, he obtained fishing boats to give the natives an industry. He reasoned that it was important for the Indians to earn enough money in the fishing season to be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits which in fish are a better alternative to direct welfare.

According to Father Peters, since 1955. Sixteen years ago the mortality rate for native children under two years of age was 50 per cent. It has since been reduced to about four per cent by getting the native women to learn simple post-natal hygiene.

Other things have changed since 1955. All the men and about 90 per cent of the women were alcoholics when he arrived here. He said he has been able to reduce drinking by men and all but eliminate it among the women.

But the drinking habits remain—"it stems from the frustration which we have inflicted on them."

Father Peters' greatest method for change is education without which, he said, there is little hope for the Nascopie or their fellow natives, the Eskimos.

Education would prepare the native population for integration with the white civilization, although this process might take up to 30 years.

"We want to make his transition into the white society as easy as possible so he won't lose pride of life. They cannot go back to their former way of life and live in the bush because we destroyed that way of life."

Father Peters has been successful on occasion in concentrating on the material needs of the native peoples and not on their spiritual needs.

"I don't believe in a gospel of sitting in a church and praying that justice will be done to the world while these people are starving. I am trying to give them the essence of the gospel which appeals to any human being.

"Christ's message of love and charity fits in with their way of life just as well as anyone else's."

Some Enjoy Feeling Like Martyr

By DORIS CLARK

At Mayotte (family cash-worker in Regina) and I were discussing the mistakes some long - suffering types make in putting up with too much for too long.

Al pointed out that such persons are saying, in effect, "I'm your door mat, so I'm available for walking on. You couldn't do it to me if I were not available.

Perhaps the individual enjoys feeling like a martyr, but what he does to himself (And, believe it or not, to the one who is encouraged to walk all over him) shouldn't happen to a dog!

• • •

Dear Doris: Why do certain psychiatrists feed drugs while another tries to reduce the number of drugs?

After a few months of treatment I have succeeded in going back to teaching. However, I still take a lot of sleeping pills. What will happen to me if I must keep taking this medication?

My doctor says not to worry, but I would feel safer if I knew. I am working as a volunteer with former mental patients, not that I regard myself as a completely stable person, but as a friend. Is it? I have received full support from my doctor. — Disturbed but Not Ill

According to my psychiatrist consultant, continued medication is not considered habit forming, except in the sense that people do get emotionally dependent upon it, as with many other non-addictive drugs.

It is one of the many safe, often used drugs. But with any form of medication, the following general rule is a good one: The less you can manage to take, and the less often you can manage to take it, the better.

You can depend on your doctor's advice. He knows your individual state of health.

Dear Doris: Your little gem, "Children Learn What They Live", is food for thought for any parent. — Mother of Two

Dear Mother: Right! It's not do-as-I-say, but do-as-I-do, that delivers the message best. In other words, when a child is raised in a loving home, he has a good chance of developing a loving and outgoing personality; but if he is being corrected, punished, disapproved of all the time, he is going to despair about himself. This doesn't make for anything but failure.

"If a child lives with fairness, he learns that the world is a nice place in which to live." These are the last two lines of Dorothy Law Nolte's poem. Anybody desiring a complete form by writing to Doris, care of this newspaper, enclosing 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

WATERSHEDS.

"For each age is a dream that is dying, or one that is coming to birth."— Arthur W. E. O'Shaughnessy (18444-1881).

Good-bye May Hello June!

And along with J. R. Lowell's "What is so rare as a day in June?", we look forward to its 30 days, for like all good lovely things of life, June is meant to be shared.

Then too, June brings a season bonus: Spring at its height ushers in Summer.

A watershed, so to speak. A word my father once explained upon coming to a ridge of land on which slope we had been driving. At the top he stopped to say: "That is called the Great Divide, or watershed. It is the highest part or peak, gained by climbing one slope and rellnquished by descending the other."

Later in life watershed took on a spiritual meaning. "a summit of decision."

As for June then it has a watershed of its own meaning. One at its height, the other just at its birth or beginning. It is a reaction touching adjustment of circumstances and acceptance of change.

Just as seasons have watersheds, so do eras. . . "for each age is a dream that is dying or one that is coming to birth" as quoted above. Many, for example will recall hearing of the Golden Age Parties of the 1920's, an era when beautifully dressed show girls appeared with such stars as Eddie Cantor, Will Rogers and Ruby Keeler and reached its watershed as the Great Depression by 1932; and no one could afford the extravagant seats.

Another era's watershed ended in 1913 with the outbreak of World War One, when "the English felt their way of life was as permanent as the rain sweet skies."

Fancy dress balls were the rage, women's fashions emphasized late ladies with two foot high feathers, and all gentlemen had their hats, shirts, gloves, ties and handkerchiefs made to order; and everyone did the Tango.

While in New York, the social world summered at Newport and was rather at a loss concerning the new ideas created by Irving Berlin's Alexander's ragtime Band and rescued by the charming dancing couple Irene and Vernon Castle, (the latter to further his training later as a war aviator at Deseronto), who by their dignity aided the elite to save the dignity of New York society. Ford began 1914 by raising the wages from two to five dollars for everyone, an epoch in the industrial world. All a way of life that was much more jolous to the dark gathering clouds of World War One . . . and thus 1913 was the end of an era.

Godey Fashions in 19th Century

One of the arbiters of 19th century styles in North America was Louis Godey, an American of French emigre parents who was born in 1804. Godey lived an Horatio Alger life, starting in poverty and ending as a millionaire. He got a job in a printing office at age 15 and by age 24 was able to go into partnership with his original employer to publish the "Lady's Book". He eventually took over entirely and for 40 years it was published as Godey's Lady's Book.

Early editions were illustrated with material lifted from English and European publications. In 1837 Godey bought out the Boston Ladies' Magazine and began to publish North American material. His advertisements appeared in Canada and the States.

Godey published a number of other magazines, the Saturday News and Literary Gazette. The Lady's Dollar Newspaper, Arthur's Home Magazine. Mrs. Hale published 36 volumes in her own name, some of which have recently been re-issued. Between the two of them, they made Godey's Lady's Book the best known of all periodicals for 19th century women and inspired a host of imitators.

The book was issued in sections, put together and bound. Each section contained fiction, editorial matter, sheet music and fashion plates. Today the book is collected mainly for the fashion plates, many of them hand-tinted. They cover the whole range of feminine fashion from 1830 to 1890.

Each section contained at least one print, often more. Early circulation reached tone of the magazine and the illustrations are presumably her selection. They were treasured when new and are collected today. Colored fashion plates are the most valuable. In many cases contemporary imitators produced superior engraving but all are lumped together as Godey prints.

It is sometimes possible to pick up Godey prints for as little as a dollar. Prices range to $25 or more in a frame.

150,000 in Canada and the States and there must be a goldmine in forgotten Godey prints waiting to be discovered.

With the Boston Ladies' Magazine, Godey acquired the editor, Sarah Josepha Hale. She was a respected author who continued with Godey until his death in 1878 when she retired at age 90.

Sarah Josepha Hale published works of Emerson, Poe, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Longfellow, Holmes and Hawthorne. She helped establish Thanksgiving as a national holiday and made herself famous by writing, "Mary Had a Little Lamb".

Her taste established the

UCW MEETINGS

TRINITY ROSLIN UCW

Mrs. Fuller and Miss Clara Adams, Presbyterial secretary for Christian and missionary education were guest speakers at the May meeting of the Roslin general UCW held in the church hall. With the help of posters and pictures they showed the gathering how to present Christian education. They also gave some information on where to obtain material such as tapes, records, plays and books to help arrange programs. They closed this part of the meeting with prayers.

Mrs. Irene Chisholm thanked the speakers and presented them with tokens of appreciation.

The devotional was conducted by the Plainfield unit who used as their theme "flowers". Mrs. Dilts rendered a solo. Mrs. Kerr read a paper on "Say it with flowers".

A considerable amount of business was dealt with. A motion was made to buy items for the church. Invitations to a tea in Foxboro and to a ballad supper given by the Plainfield unit were read. Mrs. Bailey reported for supply and welfare and asked for donations for overseas bales to be sent to her place by the end of May.

Earlier, the secretary's and treasurer's reports were given. At the close of the meeting the Bethel Zion unit served refreshments.

Teener Should Thank Brother for Advice

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll come straight to the point because I know you are busy. Please tell me what can a 15-year-old girl do about a brother who is only two years older than she but thinks he is her father. My brother tells me how to dress, how to wear my hair, how much makeup to put on, how to talk to people, how to sit, stand, walk and breathe. He also wants to pick my friends.

Last night he gave me a lecture un gipsy. He told me not to go with "A" because he pushes pot, not to go with "B" because his whole aim in life is to see how many girls he can make, and not to go with "C" because he is a beer drunk and a dangerous driver. This bossy brother of mine has a knock for everybody. If I listen to him I will be an old maid.

Please tell me what to say when he tries to manage my life, which is like all the time. — OPELOUSAS, LA.

DEAR OP: Say, "Thank you."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I couldn't believe my eyes when I read the letter from "Disgusted Daughter" who said she had just returned from another rotten dinner at her mother's house. She described the apartment as "filthy" and the food as "inedible." She went on and on until I was sick to my stomach.

My mother wasn't a very good cook and her housekeeping was nothing to brag about but she was a lovely, generous person and I adored her. It has been eight years since Mama passed away and I think of her a dozen times every day. So many things remind me of her.

I hope girls who are critical of their mothers will look deeper before they make harsh judgements. Every mother wants to do right by her children. Being only human she frequently falls short of the goal. But for a daughter to write such a vicious letter, to be so full of hate, is unnatural. Can you explain it? — LOVED MINE.

DEAR LOVED: I did explain it. I told "Disgusted Daughter" that it wasn't her mother's dirty apartment or the poor food that bugged her, it was something else, probably unrelated, and I hope she finds out what it is.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a very nice person 95% of the time. He is faithful, kind, considerate and people take to him because he has a warm, outgoing personality. But one little drink and he talks so crude I want to crawl under the rug.

Last week we were at a small dinner party and he was describing a Chinese woman he had met through business. He said, "She was unusually well stacked for a slant-eyed broad." I nearly collapsed. Next to me was seated a dignified Chinese gentleman. He pretended not to hear. When the entre was served my husband turned to the Chinese gentleman and said, "Beats chop suey, doesn't it?"

Is there anything a wife can say to smooth over such remarks? Or is it best to say nothing? Thanks for any help you can offer. — EMBARASSED FOR HIM.

DEAR EM: The solution, of course, is no booze, but your husband will have to make that decision for himself. No one can make it for him. There is no way to smooth over a crude remark — your husband's or anyone else's. Your best bet is to change the subject as tactfully as possible.

Sample Menus for 1000 Calorie-a-Day Diet

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am 50 pounds overweight and the doctor says I should reduce for my health's sake. I am going to do it but need some help. I have some friends who want to lose too. Would you mind giving me a few sample day's menus for approximately 1,000 calories per day diet? — "Chubby" McGuire"

ANSWER: I will do what you request Chubby but it is not all that simple. You will have to change your eating habits for keeps. You will also have to 1) ask your doctor what your best weight is; 2) educate your appetite and learn the mineral-vitamin containing foods; 3) eat a great variety of low calorie foods that are high in nutritional content; 4) set yourself a weekly goal; 5) plan to be more active — such as a walk an hour a day.

HELPFUL HINTS

Put a sign on the refrigerator door to remind you not to open it unless for a legitimate reason. Keep tempting foods out of the house. Enlist the help of your family by asking them to encourage not discourage you by criticism. Drink plenty of water. Reduce your normal servings by half. Never feel sorry for yourself. Visualize that lovely slim figure inside that coating of fat and bring it out into the open for your world to enjoy.

NOTE: Write to me for booklet "Menus and Recipes" for reducers enclosing self - addressed 10 cent - stamped 10 x 8" envelope.

Nuts, popcorn, hard candies are not for tiny tots. A great many children are rushed to the emergency wards of hospitals because they are choking on such tidbits. If you like to have such refreshments handy for adults in the family or for guests, keep them out of reach of preschoolers. Forbidding a child to touch them may not be enough to deter him if the snacks are accessible.

"Year-round climate control makes a very big difference in the way you feel," says Millicent Parkes.

"The air conditioning is really special," Mrs. Parkes adds. "I can cook a meal in complete comfort, even on the hottest days. And I've often heard people say how lovely it is to come in here out of the heat."

The Parkes have lived in their present home in Peterborough for twenty years. Three years ago they decided to install an electric heat pump to heat and air-condition their home, using the existing ductwork of their old heating system. The heat pump does just what its name says—it pumps heat—into each room in winter, out of each room in summer. So one simple electric unit provides year-round climate control.

"We find it keeps the house a lot cleaner, too," Mrs. Parkes' husband, Norman, adds. "We don't get the dust we used to. And because we can keep the windows shut, we don't get the noise from outside, either."

Mr. Parkes agrees. "We get a constant, even circulation of fresh air at whatever temperature we set, so the house never feels stuffy. We can go away for a couple of weeks and come back and the house feels fresh, not like it's been closed up. And you don't find a layer of dust all over everything."

Both agree that they wouldn't go back to any other system. "We feel we've got the right type of heating in winter, and we're very thankful for the air conditioning in the summer," is the way Norman Parkes sums it up.

Discover how easy it is to convert your home to year-round comfort with a heat pump, or one of the other total comfort conditioning systems described below. Check with a qualified contractor or ask your Hydro.

Spring into Summer with total electric comfort conditioning.

This is total indoor climate control—the electric way.

your hydro

An electric furnace plus an electric cooling unit gives complete year-round comfort control.

Or choose the heat pump! It maintains the temperature you set, winter and summer, completely automatically.

No matter what type of forced air heating you have, it's simple to install a central electric cooling unit.

These two refinements are easy to add—central, automatic, humidity control, and electronic air cleaning to take dust, smoke and pollen out of the air.

CDC Goal Profit Making

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has tried to combine the pursuit of profits and the public interest in its proposed Canada Development Corporation, displeasing Commons supporters of both.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis labelled the CDC an abortion in the Commons Friday.

"It is a further sellout to private enterprise in this county and will destroy the possibility of control of the Canadian economy being regained not only by Canadian investors but by the Canadian people," he said.

From the other side of the issue, Conservative finance critic Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) called the government proposal a two-headed monster, "each of the heads opposed to the other in principle."

They were speaking in debate on report stage of the bill, the step before third and final reading.

The debate continues Monday.

The bill would set up the corporation to be an agency for investment by both government and individual Canadians.

Starting with a $500-million bundle from the government, the CDC would first buy up some existing Crown corporations. It would gradually issue shares to the public, raising its eventual capital to $2,000 million.

The government would retain at least 10 per cent of the voting shares, with the option of having representatives on the board of directors.

The CDC could buy into existing private and public companies, and aid the start 'of new ones.

Pat Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said there are widespread misconceptions about the CDC, which he set out to clarify.

Some felt the CDC's objects were value, that it held conflicting goals of national interest and profits and that it would suffer government interference. "The objects of the CDC are deliberately broad. . . . The directors must be free to establish new policies to meet new situations," Mr. Mahoney said.

The CDC's goal was set out in the bill: to make profits.

The New Democrats offered a bath of amendments that would turn the corporation into a strictly public corporation and turn it away from the profit motive. Votes were deferred to the debate's end.

Mr. Lewis called the bill a "shameful distortion of an important and imaginative idea" that had been introduced by the NDP in 1961.

The bill would do nothing to solve the big economic problems—foreign ownership, regional disparities, inefficient branch-plant industries and a scarcity of domestic research and development.

Conservative Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin) agreed the bill was "another of the government's great failures," but for a different reason.

There was a danger the CDC will "dampen, or deter external participation in or economy because potential investors from abroad may fear that they will be subject to take-overs or other hazardous action from the Canada development corporation at any time when the corporation's board of directors deems it to be in the national interest to move in on them."

So what, said Max Saltzman (NDP—Waterloo).

Liberal MPs—and apparently Mr. Ritchie—had been "brainwashed by their own silly philosophy" that foreign investment was essential to economic growth.

Actually, "foreign ownership has probably reduced our standard of living."

Mr. Saltzman said foreign-owned industries in Canada—excepting the resource industries —were the least efficient in the country, helping to make the Canadian economy one of the least efficient in the world.

Air Canada, Polymer Corp and the CBC had shown that publicy-owned companies can be efficient, competitive and productive.

Social Crediter Henri Latulippe (Compton) joined the tirade against the CDC, but again from a different angle.

He said it would put small businesses out of the running, aiding only rich corporations.

And Crown corporations were inefficient because "people don't pay any attention to their duties and responsibilities when they worked for a state enterprise."

Postal Workers Union to Expand

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers plans to expand into all areas of the communications industry.

William Houle of Ottawa, union president, said a new constitution adopted Friday at the annual meeting envisages a union of all workers in the post office, the telephone and telegraph services organized on a country-wide basis.

The provision to include all employees of the "communications services" was suggested by the Montreal local, which rejoined the convention Friday after walking out the day before in protest over methods of handling the revised constitution.

In an interview later, Mr. Houle said CUPW would not be raiding other unions to gain increased membership, a move strictly forbidden by the Canadian Labor Congress.

But the CUPW could expand by simply bringing in workers in relatively new fields such as telecommunications "which is expanding so rapidly."

Another possibility is a series of mergers, although delegates at the convention voted against a bid to affiliate with the 150,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees.

One obvious merger is with the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada.

Besides embarking on an expansionary course, the first constitutional change for the 18,000-member union since its inception five years ago contains several provisions that members feel will enhance their bargaining position.

The constitution, based largely on a report by union streamlines the operation of the national executive board by centralizing more authority at the top and gives the five-member board more power to keep locals in line with national policy.

It also sets up a system of regional officers with their own staffs to match the federal government's re-organization of the postal department.

The week-long convention returned to normal Friday, hearing completion of the lengthy business agenda. There had been frequent rumblings of discontent and two walkouts by the over points of procedure earlier in the week.

Divers Could Be Key to Canada's Pan-Am Game Chances

QUEBEC (CP)—More than 30 of the best Canadian divers are competing for eight spots on Canada's 1971 Pan-American Games diving team at trials here this weekend.

The three-metre springboard trials for both men and women are to be held today at Laval Dorion Pierrefonds education and sports centre, with the 10-metre tower competition scheduled Sunday.

The Canadian Amateur Diving Association, meeting here Friday, named two coaches to Canada's diving team for the 1972 Summer Olympic Games at Munich, Germany.

Don Webb, currently coach of Canada's national team, and Tony Schiller of the Saskatoon Optimist Club were selected to direct the Olympic squad. Irene MacDonald of Vancouver was named team manager.

Webb said the top two men and women in both the springboard and tower events would be chosen for the Pan-Am team.

However, he thought there would probably be only six divers chosen as at least one member of both the men and women's teams were expected to qualify for both the three metre and 10-metre events.

Canada is sending more than 200 athletes to the Pan-American Games, being held in Cali, Colombia, in late July and early August.

Brad Stevens, technical director of the CADA and coach of the Vancouvers Hollyburn Country Club diving team, said members of Canada's national team are expected to figure prominently in the meet.

The national team recently competed in international diving meets in East Germany and Russia.

Stevens said competition would likely be closest in the women's springboard event, where several national team members are vying for two available openings.

He said Beverly Boys, Nancy Robertson and Cindy Shatto, all of the Oshawa Aquatic Club, and Liz Carruthers of Edmonton are the favorites in the event.

All four are also entered in the 10-metre competition.

Tyri York of Simon Fraser University was highly-rated in the springboard competition until she fractured her wrist in a practice dive Thursday.

Miss York said the injury occurred when she hit the water from the 10-metre board. Her wrist is taped and she will be unable to compete at the trials.

Ken Sully of Simon Fraser University and Ron Peterson of the University of Saskatchewan are favored in the men's three-metre and tower dives, Stevens said. David Pope of McGill University, Glen Grout and Alan Crawford of Shelbyburn, are expected to provide strong challenges.

Bob Eaton of Toronto is the strong contender for a position on the men's tower diving team, he added.

Most of the divers practised Friday testing various levels of spring in the adjustable diving board.

Only Two Left

Canonero II seeks to become the first Triple Crown winner since 1948 today. Meanwhile, back at the ranch are Count Fleet and Assault, the only living Triple Crown winners.

Count Fleet, the 1943 winner, now 31 years old, is in retirement at Norman Woolworth's Stone Creek Stud Farm just north of Paris, Ky.

The 25-year-old Assault, 1946 standout, is at the King Ranch in Sarita, Tex.

Count Fleet now spends his time grazing in a paddock next to the one that holds Neville Pride, a champion trotter.

"They're real friends," said farm manager Charles Kenny Friday. "If Count Fleet isn't out there, Neville Pride gets bother than a .45 pistol."

But Count Fleet won't allow himself to be turned out at night, as are most stallions, except during breeding seasons.

"He's always been used to being put up at night and when I tried leaving him out one night he got in a fight, a father just coming up and down the fence row here close to the house," Kenny said. Count Fleet sired his last foal in 1955.

At the King Ranch, Dr. J. K. Northway, a veterinarian, said Assault "is a great old horse."

"He's in good physical condition, has a nice paddock and all the green grass he can eat.

Riding High

Mile-and-a-half to Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — The gruelling 1¼-mile of the Belmont Stakes and 13 three-year-olds stand today between Canonero II and thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

Canonero II, the Kentucky-bred Venezuelan-owned $1,200 yearling purchase, was the early favorite to add a victory in the Belmont to his triumphs in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

Two colts who tested Canonero in the first two races of the Triple Crown series were against him again—Jim French, second in the Derby and third in the Preakness; and Bold Reason, third in the Derby and fifth in the Preakness.

Jim French also had a stablemate, Good Behaving, who was a supplemental nominee for $3,000.

Others entered were Epic Journey; Twist The Ace; Pass Catcher; Purse Finder; Adobe Ed; Sense A Fear, a last minute entry by Steve Sterre of Toronto; Salem; Royal JD and Highbridge.

Post time for the $125,000-added, 1¼-mile Belmont in which 13 were entered, was 3:35 p.m. EDT. Television coverage was set for 5-6 p.m. on the CBC national network.

The eight Triple Crown winners were Sir Barton, 1919; Gallant Fox, 1930; Omaha, 1935; War Admiral, 1937; Whirlaway, 1941, Count Fleet, 193, Assault, 1946, and Citation, 1948.

But since 1948 the Belmont, in connection with the Triple Crown, has meant only frustration. The most recent failure of a colt who had a shot at the Triple was Majestic Prince in 1969.

The colt was owned by Vancyer industrialist Frank McMahon and trained by Johnny Longden, former jockey recently inducted into Alberta's Sports Hall of Fame.

The Prince, who had edged Arts and Letters in the Derby and Preakness, suffered the only defeat of his career in the Belmont, losing to Arts and Letters by 5¼ lengths.

The others who had a crack at becoming the ninth Triple Crown champion but came up short in the Belmont were Tim Tam, 1958, Carry Back, 1961, Northern Dancer, owned by Toronto's E. P. Taylor, 1964, and Kauai King, 1966.

Tim Tam's effort was particularly courageous. Owned by Calumet Farm, as was Citation, Tim Tam ran the final eighth of a mile with a fractured sesamoid and finished second, six lengths back of Carvan. Tim Tam was saved for a stud career.

Carry Back's Belmont was a tremendous upset. Sherlock was said paid $132.10 as the Derby and Preakness winner finished seventh in a field of nine.

Northern Dancer could do no better than third in his Belmont bid, beaten by Quadrangle and Roman Brother. Arnbrell Bluffie and Advocator finished ahead of Kauai King in 1966.

The other colt who missed a chance to win the Triple Crown by losing the Belmont was Previse, who was nipped by a half-length by Bounding Home in 1967.

Swedes Hire Harris

TORONTO (CP) — The lure of international hockey competition has led National Hockey League veteran Billy Harris to Sweden where he takes over in September as that country's national team coach.

"There's something different in playing for an international team," said Harris, who also played for Canada's national team.

"There's a different kind of excitement about it and I've got the same feeling now in taking over as coach of the Swedish team."

P. O. Wester, director of the Swedish Ice Hockey Federation, told a news conference Friday that Harris has signed a one-year contract to coach and manage the national team.

Harris told the news conference he is especially looking forward to the 1972 Winter Olympics in Sapporo, Japan.

"I have a lot of time and all our preparations will be geared for the Olympics in February."

The 35-year-old Toronto native who started his NHL career with Toronto Maple Leafs in 1953 also will serve as advisor to the Swedish Vikings, the country's B team.

BILLY HARRIS

He said he had no plans to return to the ice as a player-coach.

"I think I made up my mind a year ago that my playing days were over."

Harris replaces Arne Stromberg whose 11 years of coaching the Swedish team ended when he resigned following the world championships last April in Switzerland.

The Swedes finished in third place in the six-country A group behind the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

Harris said he has no preconceived idea of what style or hockey he wants the Swedish team to play and he will adapt his coaching to the type of players he has on the team.

However, while he has always admired the Swedes' skating ability, he said he thinks they should concentrate more on checking.

"By that I don't mean body checking—I mean forechecking. With good forechecking you can bottle the Russians up in their own end."

Harris said that both he and the Swedes sought the one-year contract for the first year. He said he wants to see how the move will affect his wife and family of four children before he signs for a longer period.

Harris played centre for Toronto in the NHL for 10 years before brief stints with Detroit Red Wings, Oakland Seals and Pittsburgh Penguins.

He joined Canada's national team on its last European tour in 1969, just before Canada withdrew from world competition.

He has operated a summer hockey school with former Leaf team-mate Dave Keon and mid-way through last season he took over as coach of Hamilton Red Wings in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Laverne Hanover Shows Heels to Field

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — "I didn't have much problem. I had a perfect trip. I felt I could win at anytime when I left the rail."

That was George Sholty talking about his impressive victory with Laverne Hanover in the $100,000 Martin Tannebaum International Pace at Yonkers Raceway before 23,982 persons Friday night.

The 36-year-old driver from Logansport, Ind., pulled out from second place on the rail at the head of the stretch and drew out to beat Rum Customer, reined by Billy Haughton, by 2½ lengths.

It was a 1-2 finish for the even-money favored Haughton Stable entry and gave the United States a third straight victory in this blue ribbon event of harness racing. Fulla Hanover won last year and Overcall in 1969.

Sholty brought Laverne Hanover home in 3:03 with a 29 2-5-second last quarter, just two-fifths off the world record of 3:02 2-5 for the 1¼ miles set by Overcall in the 1969 international.

Calridge, a 12-year-old gelding from Australia, surprised by finishing third.

Driven by Joe Green, Claridge went off at 53 to 1 and paid $5 to show. The winning entry returned $4.20, $3.60 and $2.60.

Canada's three entries, Super Wave, Horton Hanover and Keystone Pat, finished fourth, fifth and sixth. Tempered Yankee was seventh.

Super Wave is owned by Dr. George Boyce of London, Ont., Horton Hanover was driven by Joe O'Brien, a native of Alberton, P.E.I., and owned by Ted and Elgin Armstrong of Brampton, Ont. Keystone Pat is owned by Robert and Conrad Shapiro of Montreal and driver-co-owner

ROME (AP) — Organizers have cancelled the Rome show for the musical tour of world heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier and his Knockouts calling the act a threat to French talent, head of the group backing the Frazier tour in Italy, said in a terse statement: "The show, which was offered to Europe significances last spring it would be presented on the basis of a world-wide name, has shown itself absolutely lovalid artistically and — what concerns me more — from the standpoint of socialism, which is what justifies any show." Frazier has been touring Europe, singing with his rock 'n' roll group, for several weeks. He already has given a number of performances in Italy, playing to largely empty houses. His Germany tour also was a flop. The heavyweight could not be reached for comment immediately, Thursday, however, he said "As a boxer I am the world champion. As a singer, I'm almost an amateur."

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trainers are "improving in leaps and bounds each year" in Canada because of the emphasis placed on athletic injuries, Sandy Archer, head trainer of Saskatchewan Roughriders, said Friday. Archer, here for the Canadian Athletic Trainers Association symposium, said the improvement is partly due to the new methods of treatment constantly being found.

ROY EDWARDS

Back Wing Lost

DETROIT (CP) — Detroit Red Wings announced Friday that goalie Roy Edwards, 34, decided to retire from the National Hockey League club because of "recurring dizzy spells" that have bothered him since he suffered a skull fracture last Dec. 6.

Edwards suffered the head injury in a game here against St. Louis Blues when he fell to the ice trying to stop a shot.

The Wing said Edwards announced his retirement from his home at Calgary.

Red Wings' manager Ned Harkness said he had a long talk with Edwards.

"The organization thought highly of Roy's goaltending ability but he owes his health and well-being to himself and his family," Harkness said.

Edwards, a native of Seneca, Ont., played in only 27 games last season.

Despite only four seasons in the major league, Edwards was the Wings' most experienced netminder. His backup men last season were Jim Rutherford, Gerry Gray and Don McLeod, all rookies.

HAP EMMS

Flyers Stay Put

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series said Friday the franchise would remain where it is for at least another year.

Bud Hiscock, chief scout for the Flyers, said he had been talking to owner Hap Emms "and he assured me that we will be in Niagara Falls at least one more year."

The announcement spiked rumors that a Sudbury Wolves franchise would be admitted to the series for the 1971-72 season.

The Sudbury team quit the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series in the hopes its application to enter a team in the OHA would be accepted.

This week, the NOHA announced that the Wolves' franchise would not be welcomed back next year although other interests in the mining centre could apply for entry.

"I've had numerous calls from parents of players, especially those of the 16 boys we drafted in Peterborough, about whether or not we are moving," said Hiscock. "We want to assure them that we are not. Beyond next season, I couldn't say."

Kuhn Investigates Report Indians Using Bonus Contracts

CLEVELAND (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn is investigating reports that at least three players of Cleveland Indians this year were signed to performance bonus contracts, which are illegal by league rules.

Pitcher Sam McDowell, third baseman Graig Nettles and the first baseman-outfielder Ken Harrelson are believed to be the players involved.

A spokesman for the commissioner's office said Friday: "The commissioner is looking into the matter."

If proven true, Kuhn could declare all players involved to be free agents, allowing them to sign with any team.

Or he could negate the contracts, requiring the principals to negotiate new contracts and making them ineligible to play until the new contracts were agreed upon.

Kuhn also could wipe out the bonus plans, let the base salary agreements stand and fine the ball club a minimum of $10,000.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said Friday that Kuhn has been conducting his investigation for three weeks and has talked to the three players and also to manager Alvin Dark and Gabe Paul, president of the club. The newspaper said Kuhn is expected to reach a decision in a week to 10 days.

The rule involved states, "no contract shall be approved by the president of the league that shall provide for the giving of a bonus for playing, pitching, or batting skills; or which provides for the payment of a bonus contingent on the standing of the club at the end of the championship season."

A's Beat Clock After 21 Innings With Senators

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland Athletics, their headstone gold and green uniforms looking a little straggly after 20 innings, beat the clock and Washington Senators 5-3 in the 21st inning Friday night.

Jim Shellenback, one of 13 pitchers thrown into the marathon five-hour 19-minute game, walked Reggie Jackson with the bases loaded, forcing home the tie-breaking run, then wildpitched another across as Oakland scored twice in the 21st inning—their last chance.

The clock in Robert F. Kennedy Stadium was beating down on 1 a.m., EDT, the local curfew after which no inning in the American League game could be started. Had the Athletics not scored when they did and the tie remained intact through 21 innings, the game would have had to be replayed from the start on another date.

In other league action, Boston Red Sox belted California Angels 10-1, Kansas City Royals clipped New York Yankees 8-2, Chicago White Sox edged Detroit Tigers 3-2, Baltimore Orioles blasted Milwaukee Brewers 13-5 and Cleveland Indians downed Minnesota Twins 4-3 in a game ended by rain in the sixth inning.

It looked as though fate wasn't on Oakland's side when Larry HUTTNER FIRED A STRIKE TO CATCHER Paul Casanova, cutting down Dick Green with the potential lead run when he tried to score on Curt Blefary's single in the 21st. Blefary moved up on the throw and Shellenback walked Bert Campaneris intentionally.

He whiffed the runners up and then walked Joe Brown and Jackson, forcing home the go-ahead run, before another wild pitch delivered Campaneris with the second run of the inning.

The game fell one inning short of the longest night game in American League history—a 23-inning affair at Washington on June 12, 1967 in which the Senators beat Chicago 8-5.

Boston ripped the California with a five-run fifth inning and a 17-hit assault that made Gary Peters' sixth victory of the season easy.

Carlos May drove in all of Chicago's runs with three singles and Wilbur Wood checked Detroit for his fourth victory of the season.

Mike Cuellar's four-hit pitching and a two-run homer by Frank Robinson pushed Baltimore past Milwaukee.

Miss Mann Plays Ace

BALTIMORE (AP) — Hometown favorite Carol Mann, who hasn't won a golf tournament in 16 months, fired a hole-in-one and shared the first-round lead with Jan Ferraris in the $25,000 Lady Carling Open Friday at three-under-par 70.

Miss Mann, playing in the same threesome with Marilynn Smith, who sank a double-eagle two on the opening green, made the second ace of her career on the 179-yard eighth hole.

Yanks Duel for British Title

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — Steve Melnyk and Jim Simons met today in the 36-hole finals of the 1971 British amateur golf chmpionship and the fact they are both Americans left everyone else around the property just a little cold.

Melnyk, 24-year-old public relations man from Jacksonville, Fla., teed off on Carnoustie's fearsome 6,828-yard, par-82 Seaside links against Simons, 21, of Butler, Pa.

Melnyk, 1969 U.S. amateur champion, reached the final Friday by beating Ed Updegraff of Tucson, Ariz., 4 and 3 in a quarter-final, then Peter Moody of England 4 and 3 in the semi-finals.

Simons met Hugh Stuart of Scotland, who reached three wins in three matches against the Americans in the Walker Cup at St. Andrews last week. The margin for Simons this time was 2 and 1.

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — Zahir Abbas innings-by-innings score to 274 Friday as Pakistan continued the humiliation of the England attack on the second day of the first cricket Test match here.

The record-breaking Pakistanis took their total to 602 for seven wickets by close of play.

Among several records topped, the Pakistani total passed the previous best for an England-Pakistani Test match set by England in 1956—and Zaheer's record for a Pakistani batsman against England, eclipsing Hanif Mohammad's 187 not out in 1967.

The win was the fourth for the visiting Italians in as many games against NASL competition.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union ended its annual meeting here Friday night without making a decision on athletic shoes.

The 80 athletic directors from universities and colleges across the country did agree to form a committee to look further into the matter.

Carl Totzke of the University of Waterloo, newly-elected president of the CIAU, said the majority of directors were "definitely against scholarships."

Even if Canadian universities did offer them, many athletes would continue to go to the United States.

"Many of them don't have the entrance requirements for our universities," he said. "Others are attracted by the status symbol of going south, and the Americans also have specialized areas of coaching which we can't compete with," he said.

Reds Rebound at Cards

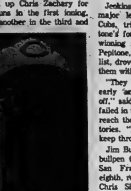
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cincinnati Reds, floundering National League champions who were victims of Chicago southpaw Ken Holtzman's no-hitter 24 hours earlier, rebounded Friday night with a 17-hit salvo that floored St. Louis Cardinals 12-0.

"Maybe we needed that nohitter," said Tony Perez, who cracked four hits, including a two-run homer, to pace the assault. "Maybe we needed a kick in the back."



"We were at a point yesterday," added Manager Sparky Anderson, "where we couldn't go any further.

"We just came out swinging."

While the Reds snapped a four-game losing skid that belied the three-hit pitching of rookie Ross Grimsley, St. Louis fell from first to second place in the East Division, behind New York Mets, who trimmed Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 on Tom Seaver's six-hitter.

Elsewhere, Ferguson Jenkins, the Chatham, Ont., hurler, followed up Holtzman's no-hit gem with a three-hitter and the Cubs backed him with a 13-hit barrage in walloping Atlanta Braves 11-0 while Philadelphia Phillies upended San Francisco Giants 5-3, Pittsburgh Pirates nipped Houston Astros 3-2 and Montreal Expos beat San Diego Padres 3-1.

The Reds, who had lost four in a row to fall 12 games under .500 and 18½ behind San Francisco's West Division leaders, roughed up Chris Zachary for three runs in the first inning, scored another in the third and knocked out the St. Louis starter in the six-run fourth.

Geronimo Pena also had four hits for Cincinnati and Grimsley scattered three singles.

Seaver ran his season mark to 7-2 while beating the Dodgers for the 10th time in 11 career decisions as the Mets regained the East Division lead.

Five Los Angeles errors—two in the sixth inning and three in the eighth-handed the Mets two unearned runs.

Jenkins breezed to his 100th major league victory as the Cubs, triggered by Joe Pepitone's four-hit spree, ran their winning string to four games. Pepitone, just off the disabled list, drove in three runs, one of them with a homer.

"They got me some runs early and took the pressure off," said Jenkins, 9-5, who had failed in three previous starts to reach the century mark in victories. "All I had to do was keep throwing strikes."

Jim Bunning came out of the bullpen to snuff out a two-run San Francisco rally in the eighth, reaching winning pitcher Chris Short and helping the Phillies extend the Giants' losing streak to three games—longest of the season for the West Division pace-setters.

Gene Clines poked two run-scoring singles as the Pirates built a 3-0 lead and then held off Houston for their sixth victory in seven games.

The Expos snapped a 1-1 tie on Bob Bateman's two-run double with two out in the ninth and Bill Stoneman shackled the Padres on four hits, including a homer by Clarence Gaston.

Backus Beaten at Own Game

Napoles stopped Billy Backus after one minute 53 seconds of the eighth round in their scheduled bout of 15 Friday night to take back his 147-pound boxing crown.

The southpaw Backus had stopped the 31-year-old Cuban exile in the fourth round of their initial meeting in Billy's home town of Syracuse, N.Y., when Napoles suffered an eye cut.

This time Napoles suffered another cut in the first round when the cut reopened headbut Backus couldn't take advantage of it.

"I used my left jab to keep him off balance and it was a left hook in the eighth round that was the big punch," Napoles said through an interpreter.

Never knocked down before, Backus was on the canvas twice in the eighth round before Referee Dick Young stopped the fight. The New Yorker weighed 145¾ and Napoles 146 as they met before a crowd of 14,645 which paid $185,755.

Although Napoles admitted that at least one of Backus's punches had hurt him, the fight belonged to the Mexico City veteran.

His jabs had Backus off balance even fighting from a flat footed stance. Billy suffered a cut under his left eye in the third round, over it in the fourth. Referee Young had Napoles ahead 4-1 at the end and The Associated Press had it 6-0 under the California rule of awarding one to five points to the winner of each round.

Don't Be Surprised If Winners Smile

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

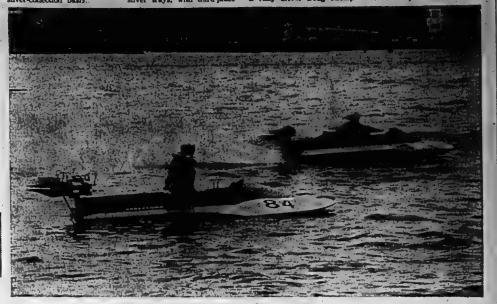
Don't be surprised if you notice the winners of Sunday's fourth annual harbor hydroplane races wearing especially broad smiles as they cross the finish line.

The 75 drivers, as well as the spectating public, will all be stars of a film commissioned by the Ontario Department of Tourism designed to show the variety of summer activities in the province.

The film, which may end up on the 65-foot Hth Cinesphere screen at Ontario Place, was literally a life saver for organizers of the Victoria Park boat races.

"We hadn't intended on having races at all," revealed Quinte Hydroplane Racing Club president Bill Boulter. "But when we got this letter about a film, we went to the city and the park's and recreation commission is helping us cover costs for insurance and officials.

"It's good advertisement for the club and for Belleville."



Sunday's racing program, like the previous three, will be open to the public on a silver-collection basis.

Racing to seven classes, ranging from the 80-mile-an-hour "B Alkies" down to the A Utility runabouts, gets under way around 1.30 p.m.

First and second-place finishers will receive handsome silver trays, with third-place drivers collecting camera outfits.

Each heat consists of three laps of a mile-and-two-thirds course laid out off the west beak of Victoria Park.

Local entries to look for are B Alky driver Doug Thompson of Bloomfield, in boat 42, Tom Boulter, running SCE in B Stock Hydro, John Royle in SCE in C Stock Hydro, and Denny Hogue, entered in A Stock Hydro with what will probably be the only purple boat in the pits.

Busy on the Brink

It's serene right now, but the west shore of Belleville's Victoria Park will be buzzing with activity Sunday afternoon when the fourth annual harbor hydroplane races get under way. This was the scene as entrants made last-minute pit preparations at last year's races.

'Please Help Me, I'm Stalling'

There's nothing more futile than the feeling a hydroplane racer gets when his motor sputters out. There's not much to do but bob around in the water, watch your competitors roar past, and look toward your pit crew in despair. Such was the fate of this unlucky driver in last year's Victoria Park hydroplane races, which are renewed for the fourth time Sunday.

Mariners Barely Unbeaten

The Merch Mariners didn't find their Industrial Softball League sailing as smooth Friday, but they kept their undefeated record intact by scoring in the home half of the last inning to gain a 3-3 tie with the Fire Department.

Wilson Bulpit tossed a six-hitter at the firemen, striking out 10 while only issuing two walks. He got key support from Glen Reynolds, who stroked a home run, double, and single.

Perry Soule's eight-hitter, with nine strikeouts and three walks, was chiefly aided by Brian Reid's homer and single.

Meanwhile, the CNR Yardmen finally got on the winning track, blasting a 13-3 win over Brooke Bond.

Greg Bellis earned the win, scattering four hits, striking out six, and walking only three. Ron Marshall, Mike Fahey, and Butch Duvall each contributed a pair of hits to the cause.

Bill Hayes and Garry Cameron shared the duties of the losers' slab, walking 17 trainmen while only fanning two between them.

Minor Lacrosse Moves Already

Minor lacrosse has only been operating in Belleville for three years, but the blossoming sport has already found a new home.

Effective Monday, BMLA president Roy Payne informs, all city minor lacrosse games will be played in the new Dick Ellis Rink on Harder Drive.

Friday Night Not for Pitchers

Friday night was definitely not pitchers' night in minor baseball play.

Only Plane's Concrete tadpole mound staff of Blane Waddell, Tony Parks, and Brian Cronkright got off light. The three combined for a two-hitter, five walks, and 16 strikeouts as Plane's walloped Wanamaker's Exxo 19-4. Cronkright contributed a home run to his own cause.

A pair of pewee contests turned out to be real slugfests.

Dennis Grier banged out three singles and a double to pace CNR Yardmen to an 18-13 win over Fitzgibbon Construction.

Meanwhile, Trenton Legionnaires were surviving a 13-11 duel with Foster's Thurlow Peewees.

Steve Peterson's homer and double paced the winners, while Brian Masterson's three singles was best on the Thurlow bench.

Milligan Wins Leap

TORONTO (Special) — Glen Milligan, Trenton High School's track and field standout, doesn't rest on his laurels.

Friday the 18-year-old Grade 13 champion of three COSSA categories won the senior long jump at the Ontario Federation of Secondary School Athletic Association meet in Toronto's CNE park.

Milligan's winning performance of 22 feet, 4½ inches was much more than the 21 feet, three-inch effort he needed to win the COSSA title at Peterborough last weekend.

The OFSAA meet concluded today with finals in the track events and the remainder of the field competitions.

Miller Kept Cool

ATLANTA (AP) Jack Nicklaus, seeking his third straight victory, forged a tie for the Atlanta Golf Classic lead Friday with a young Californian who seemed unconcerned.

"A 70 is not bad," said 34-year-old John Miller of San Francisco.

"If that's my worst round, I'll win the tournament."

Nicklaus, ending a three-week lay-off, had a 68 over the 6,833-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course to gain a deadlock at 135 with Miller.

Gravel-voiced Comic Succumbs to Diabetes

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe E. Lewis, the gravel-voiced night club comic, died Friday in hospital where he had been in a diabetic coma for several days. He was 69.

Lewis was rushed to hospital a week ago after collapsing in his hotel suite, and was placed under intensive care for diabetic acidosis.

A hard-drinking, free-wheeling man, Lewis fashioned his own cult in 49 years on the speakeasy ad night club circuit, delivering his razor-sharp humor between gulps of undiluted scotch.

Although he ignored doctors' advice to quit drinking, he had no illusions that it could last forever.

"Already I can see the handwriting on the floor," he said on his 69th birthday.

A dapper dresser, Lewis started out as a crooner in the 1920s, and he was so popular his services became the target of a gangland feud in 1929.

Working the club of a gangland boss that year, Lewis declined when a rival mobster tried to hire him away. The gang that lost out ambushed Lewis, slashed his throat and left him for dead in an alley.

He could neither talk nor sing for years, but came back as a comic whose bull-frog voice fascinated night club regulars. During most of the post-Second World War era, he earned $400,000 a year.

For those outside the saloon circuit, Lewis was best known for his one popular hit song—Sam. You Made the Pants Too Long.

Lewis was born on New York City's Lower East Side in the

Variety Shows Axed

NEW YORK (AP) — The variety show, television's single most popular form during the 1970-71 season, goes on the endangered species list in the 1971-72 season.

Out of about 15 programs in the category during the fall and winter, only four have survived for another year.

One theory is that big, brassy variety shows, costing $200,000 or more a program, are victims of the economic pinch because they are good for only one or two repeat broadcasts.

There are those—fairly older viewers—who believe that variety has been guttered to death; all those long-haired guys in suede jackets and fringe strummin' and preachin' about peace and love.

Others insist that there have been so many hours of comedy with music or music with comedy that one show looked pretty much like the next one, particularly since the same faces were making a circuit around them.

Carol Burnett, Glen Campbell, Dean Martin and Flip Wilson have escaped the wholesale axing, but the casualty list is long, ranging from Ed Sullivan and Lawrence Welk to Johnny Cash, Tom Jones and Andy Williams.

Meanwhile, there is a whole summer to get through, and variety shows are the broadcasting equivalent of the publishing business's hammock reading—light, hot weather diversion.

Before long there will be NBC's Make Your own Kind of Music, CBS's Newcomers and Sonny and Cher Show, and ABC's Val Doonican Show. Mel Torme's It Was a Very Good Year has already made its ABC debut.

Des O'Connor returned to NBC Wednesday night, once again the summer substitute for Music Hall. It was an unusual occasion since Jack Benny, in good form, was the guest star.

The London-made program with its British star is pleasantly low key and easy to take. O'Connor functions agreeably as host and straight man, frequently breaking into song.

Connie Stevens is to be a regular on each of the 16 programs. She handled a couple of songs and one dance number well.

Jail System Flayed

EDMONTON (CP) — Penal systems in North America were under indictment Wednesday at the premiere of a feature-length motion picture which claims that the real byproduct of prison is moral perversion, not reform.

Warden Roger Noel of Fort Saskatchewan provincial jail, who was among the first-night audience attending I'm going to Get You Elliott Boy, said he agreed with the 90-minute story line that major innovations in penology are long overdue.

"There has been no change (in penology) in over 100 years," he said. "Its been incarceration, incarceration, incarceration across the board."

Cinepro Productions Ltd., backers of the Edmonton-based movie, said Elliott Boy is an authentic inside look at a young man serving a first term, who emerges from prison a hardened murderer. What happens between is the story line of Elliott Boy and its condemnation of penal systems.

The picture opens Thursday in Calgary and Friday in Toronto. Later this month it will open in 30 other Canadian towns and cities.

Author Roger Duhamel, the playwright, assembled the material after convincing his wife into Alcatraz in 1963 to write the biography of Robert Stroud, the Birdman of Alcatraz.

Duhamel died last summer in Vancouver during the final filming of Elliott Boy.

Director Ed Forsythe, with movie credits including "Easy Rider and television's I Dream of Jeanie, operated on a $250,000 budget. Producer was A. M. (Bino) Slutker, operator of a group of dry-cleaning plants.

Dynamite Truck Blast Kills Five

WACO, Ga. (AP) — Five persons have been killed and 27 injured in the explosion of a truck laden with 400 cases of dynamite. It caught fire after colliding with an auto in this small northeast Georgia community.

The blast Friday night demolished both vehicles along with a fire truck and ambulance that had rushed to the scene. An area the size of three football fields was left a wasteland of charred stumps and scattered debris. A crater 75 feet wide and 30 feet deep severed U.S. highway 78. Windows were broken in Waco and Bremen.

A. W. Fielding, driver of the truck, said he spotted a small foreign car careering toward him.

"I seen him cut to the left, and I applied my brakes but he just kept coming."

Killed were David Lee Smith, 33, a volunteer fireman from Bremen; Troy F. Allen of Muscadine; Doyal Bell, 31, a Waco volunteer fireman; Cleve O. Heath, 46, a Bremen wrecker driver; and Talmadge Adams, 40, of Waco. Authorities said Adams was the driver of the Volkswagen which collided with the truck.

Fielding said he was unable to open the truck door after the collision, so he crawled out a window and raced for a ditch.

Fielding said his first impulse was to warn motorists and spectators to flee as firemen and civil defence crews fought the blaze.

"I practically begged them," said Fielding, who escaped injury. "Some of the people would not pay a bit of attention to me.

"They thought I was joking."

Fielding said one woman with several children drove up near the scene.

He said he repeatedly pleaded with the woman to leave, then finally shouted: "Lady, for God's sake, would you get out of here! That is a load of dynamite and it is liable to explode at any time!"

He said that convinced her to leave, he ran and "about that time it blowed up."

The blast also knocked out telephone service in Bremen and Waco. Fire dotted the area after explosive particles touched off blazes where they landed.

Authorities said no dwellings were in the immediate vicinity.

Acceptance Is Part Of Helping

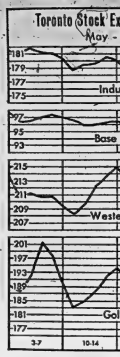
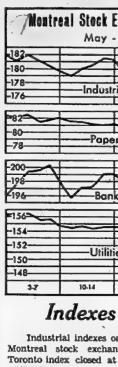
MONTREAL (CP) — If hospital personnel are to help young drug-users, they must look past strange garb and extreme hairstyles and accept the liberal use of four-letter words, says Dr. B. L. P. Brosseau, executive director of the Canadian Hospital Association.

He told the association's annual meeting Friday that the "basic English" of young people today is not intended as an insult but rather as "descriptive and forceful."



"To us of the other generation this, initially at least, is somewhat shocking and takes some getting used to. But like the strange clothing, we must see beyond the words if we really want to communicate and understand."



He described a three-day symposium on hospital responsibility toward drug-users held in February, which urged that priority be given to providing co-ordinating and extending street clinics or alternative services in smaller centres where facilities are often lacking.

"What is wanted here," Dr. Brosseau said, "is acceptance of the role of the street worker and recognition of the important role they have in understanding, communicating with and helping the youth of Canada, particularly the transient group and the teen-agers."

The symposium felt that the federal government should declare an immediate moratorium on penalties for possession of marijuana, and should pass legislation restricting the importation, manufacture and distribution of drugs to a supply which provides a reasonable balance between availability and need.

Dr. Brosseau said the number of tranquilizers manufactured in Canada each year exceeds the number prescribed by at least 20 times. Another symposium resolution called on the federal government to ban advertising of all drugs, including non-prescription drugs and alcohol, in the media.

Indexes Down

Industrial indexes on both the Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges fell during May. Toronto index closed at 177.84, a drop of 3.75, while Montreal closed at 178.35, down 3.77 from last month's close. In Toronto, western oils closed at 209.19, a loss of 4.59, golds were down 13.27 at 179.06 and base metals closed at 93.40. In Montreal utilities closed at 151.01, a loss of 5.47, banks rose 3.16, closing at 199.22, and papers closed at 79.95, a loss of 2.72.

Marmora

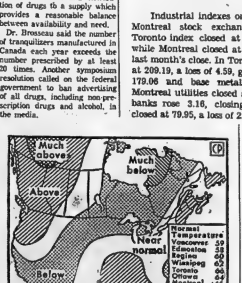
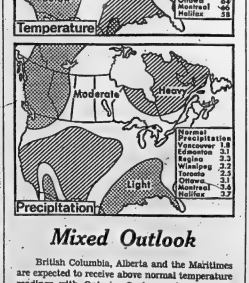
MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reynolds attended the recent official opening of the Regional Correctional Institution in Napanee at which Mr. Syl Apps MLA performed the ribbon cutting ceremony.



Mrs. Joseph Clairmont left Marmora on Saturday to take up residence in Oshawa with her son Jack, Mrs. Nahrgang and family.



About 15 friends and neighbors presented Mrs. C. Clemens with a gift recently, prior to her departure from the community to live in Marmora. Mrs. W. Ramsey was hostess for the occasion, which was arranged by Mrs. Eileen Bell and Mrs. Marie Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reynolds attended the wedding of their niece, Miss Linda Watson, in Oshawa last weekend.

Two carloads of Marmora residents attended the Anglican World Mission Whitsunday service at St. George's Cathedral in Kingston on Sunday evening. The Primate of all Canada, Archbishop Edward Scott, was the speaker. Those who attended the service were Rev. J. Lombard, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Neal, Mrs. R. G. Winters, Mrs. R. E. Bonter, Mrs. I. Snell, Miss Shirley Lummiss, Mrs. C. Bedore, Patsy Neal, Ken Knox and Norman Dayton.

At the reception following the service, the Marmora residents renewed acquaintances with Dean and Mrs. Richard Fleming. Dean Fleming's first parish was St. Paul's in Marmora.

Mixed Outlook

British Columbia, Alberta and the Maritimes are expected to receive above normal temperature readings, with Ontario, Quebec and portions of Manitoba receiving normal readings according to the 30-day weather outlook of the United States weather bureau. Light to moderate precipitation will cover most of the country with Quebec and part of Ontario receiving heavy precipitation. This is not a specific forecast and changes may occur.

Public Accepts Medicare

MONTREAL (CP) — Governments may have been heavy-handed and doctors ungracious but as far as the general public is concerned, medical care insurance has been well received, the Canadian Hospital Association was told Friday.

Yvon Dupuis, host of a daily three-hour open-line program on Montreal radio station CKLM and former federal cabinet minister, said several callers have told him implementation of medical care insurance was a relief.

Mr. Dupuis said he conducted two radio programs solely on hospital care a few months after the Quebec insurance plan was implemented last November.

He said he was braced for complaints but, to his surprise, 99 per cent of the callers had only flattering remarks for hospitals and praise for their doctors.

However, he added, there have been a few letters complaining that the waiting period for a hospital bed now is too long, the doctors tired and check-ups are too fast.

Two physicians agreed that regionalization of health services is the trend of the future, but questioned the effect it will have on patients.

Dr. Gustave Gingras, president of the Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons, spoke of a time when patients will make appointments with a health team, rather than with their personal doctors.

They would not necessarily know the doctors who examine them, although a complete medical history of each patient would be on file so the specialists could become immediately familiar with the case.

However, Dr. Arnold L. Swanson, administrator of Toronto's Queen Street Mental Health Centre, said "the citizen cannot obtain health care from some super-mammary gland, no matter how well regionalized or centralized."

"He will get it in the year 2001 from individual doctors, nurses, hospitals or their computerized, automated equivalents."

Limited Election Campaigns Proposed by Ottawa Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — Suggestions to limit Canadian federal election campaigns have been advanced by the all-party special Commons committee on election expenses.

It will be up to the government to translate the recommendations into amendments to the Canada Elections Act.

In a report to the Commons Friday, the committee proposed that active campaigning be confined to 28 days before election day. There is no limit whatever now.

It takes at least 50 days for the chief electoral officer to prepare for an election from the day one is called.

Thus the committee's recommendation would mean, in effect, the leashing of candidates for half the time available to them for campaigning.

The only way to reduce the 50 days is with a permanent voters' list and MPs had earlier rejected such a proposal on the ground of the big costs involved.

The special committee recommends limits on campaign spending and that the public treasury pick up some of the tab for candidates' expenses.

Contributions to political parties or candidates would be deductible for income tax purposes, like charitable donations.

But such contributions by corporations or individuals would not be open to public scrutiny. Disclosure would be made only to the minister of national revenue.

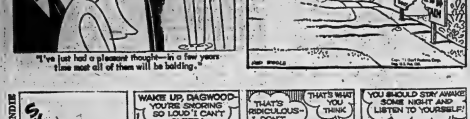
The committee said disclosure to the public would be invasion of privacy.

Under the chairmanship of Hylland Chappell, Liberal MP for Peel South, the committee made 53 recommendations.

Party election spending would be limited to 30 cents an elector in each riding. Spending by candidates would be set at a maximum of $1 an elector for the first 15,000 electors, 50 cents an elector for the next 10,000 and 25 cents an elector for a figure beyond 25,000. In 21 geographically large ridings an extra 10 cents an elector would be allowed.

Candidates would be publicly supported for part of their expenses, including campaign literature and postage. Candidates would have to produce vouchers.

The report recommended that the ban on political broadcasting on pre-election day be extended to the print media with the exception, of newspapers which publish regularly on Sunday.



A total of 6½ hours of prime-time free-broadcasting would be allocated among registered parties on each of the public and private television and radio networks.

Parties would not be permitted to buy air time behind this allocation. But they could accept it free from the broadcasters provided the time was allocated to all parties on the same basis as the original 6½ hours.

Broadcasters would be required to provide 50 per cent of the studio costs and broadcast time. The public would pay the other half.

The committee proposed that the ban on political broadcasting deposit be increased to $300 from the present $200, an amount set in 1882.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I hope my husband reads my letter and your reply. He's so stubborn he won't even consider that it's possible he can get a heart attack simply because he's only 28.

Personally, I think he's killing himself. He's doing everything wrong. See if you don't agree. He smokes over two packs a day. Eats like the proverbial horse — is at least 40 to 50 pounds overweight.

With it all he goes in for a lot of tennis, golf and basketball. Comes home exhausted, perspiring and actual pale and drawn. When I protest he shrugs it off. He says "Don't be silly. Just look at the statistics. People don't get heart attacks until they're at least 40." Can you set him straight? — Mrs. O.

COMMENT: It's important for your husband to know statistics always have their exceptions. Although it's true that people over 40 are more likely to get heart attacks than youngsters, it's also true that youngsters of 28 are less are not free from danger.

I recall a report I read some years ago from studies of a large clinic, that investigators had not seen one case of coronary disease in any female under 30, in 80,000 case reports studied.

The following week, in my own practice, a girl of 21 had a heart attack due to a blocked coronary artery, and another had anginal pains while still in her mid-20s. (I recorded these case histories in the Connecticut State Medical Journal.)

More common over 40? Yes. But absolutely impossible in the 20s? No. Many cases of acute coronary attacks have also been found in young servicemen.

What it comes down to, Mrs. O., is that your own husband had better forget statistics and agree that he has been mistreating his own machine. Oversmoking, overeating, over-exercising, are invitations to cardiac strain.

Why invite a calastrophe? Whatever the disease, the calendar should not be consulted as the only judge.

For Mrs. L.: The following letters by ice and starch eaters should be interesting. I think you will agree that it's time you had a blood checkup. It may help you, as it helped these patients.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read your response concerning ice. Not only did I eat about three trays of ice a day, I ate starch, too. My doctor you said, as iron deficiency. He prescribed a medication and within a week or so my taste for ice and starch disappeared. — Mrs. P.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Regarding that 14½-year-old girl you wrote about who had ice cravings. Pica, I think you called it. I had the same thing. Doctors discovered that I was very anemic. I've been taking iron pills every day. I do not have ice craving any more. — Miss B.

* * *

For Mr. S.: There are many choices on how to perform a legitimate operation. In many cases the doctor does not "have to go in" through the abdomen. "Transuretral prostatectomy" is a common procedure.

Coronary Can Hit Men in Twenties

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 6

Your birthday today: Momentarily you pause on a steply upward path of personal development. Nothing remains static in your life this coming year, no matter how long established. Relations open for intensification or dissolution, according to how you handle matters. Improvement is gained with fairly simple, consistent effort. Today's natives are sensitive, emotional apt to let companions guide them too far.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Do your accustomed duties for the community, then seek a rosy vacation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You take sides in issues between people of differing ages, or are called upon to bridge the gaps between discordant opinions. Try to see the logic from all angles.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your own interests require full attention, despite temptation to mix into other people's activities.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): There are no bargains or short cuts. Stay with the tried and true and in moderation.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Repeating a set of previously unsuccessful moves promises no better results in mapping with present tensions and issues. Try something beyond your ordinary approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Watch for some subtle test of your skills and presence of mind. Later hours bring another viewpoint.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your impulse is to go too far in trying to correct a shortage or imbalance, especially where you were patient for too long with something that eluded a ready adjustment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Friends say little or may say very uncomfortable things, but watch what they do and be glad you have friends. Jumping to conclusions would produce poor results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your restless mood is both healthy and constructive. Breaking away from old habits has to happen eventually, and now is as good a time as most. Care for the feelings of others while you frolic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Almost any move you make implies eventual increases in obligation. Just be sure you are getting what you want with no unneeded extras or substitutions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Promote your main ideas. Your persuasive powers are at a high tide — especially among fresh acquaintances.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Seeing the other fellow's point of view is a necessary art, along with finding sympathy for those you disagree with.

For June 7

Your birthday today: An extensive year opens for social progress and emotional development. Many opportunities are available for material welfare; some brand new, others which existed all along but not realized. Your barriers are into everything and will upset any effort to retreat or take a tooeasy course of action. Keep them busy in return.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Big ideas dominate the financial department—if your life today. Just make sure they're yours and that you have the resources to carry them to conclusion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Indications are for changes in partnership arrangements and working conditions which permit more time and space for action.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): When least expected and from an unplanned direction comes challenge, and excitement in meeting it. Romance complicates matters, as well.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Morning is good for hearing proposals or for reviewing schemes. Afternoon or tomorrow are better for even minor decisions. Give your unconscious time to react. Devote evening hours to improving home life.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Group and family considerations come to the surface with some issues you've neglected or failed to notice. Listen to all of it, then clear away the confusion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Where you lend an ear, put a suggestion with it, but avoid the pitfall of trying to make anybody else's decisions. Meanwhile put in consistent effort at normal routines while the going is good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Express your inner serenity to adjust all phases of your life toward tranquility. This doesn't mean leaving some vivid criticism or an argument unanswered.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): People listen to you today, including some you'd just as soon avoid. Younger people stir a creative streak in you — strive for a constructive application.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Much of what you do today yields results much later on, after you've given up hope. There is no excuse for not doing your best, merely the need for philosophic balance which you work for distant as well as close-by goals.

Slipshod Handling of Funds

Auditor Charges Spending Control Slipping Away From MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is spending increasing amounts—hundreds of millions of dollars annually—in violation of the democratic principle of advance public scrutiny and parliamentary safeguards against abuse.

Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, whose office watches over government spending on behalf of Parliament, cites a long series of examples of "the weakening of parliamentary control" over public spending in his annual report for the financial year ended March 31, 1970.

His 385-page report, published Friday, also catalogues discoveries of other instances of careless handling of public funds, covering amounts from a few hundred dollars to millions.

He says there is loose handling of financial aid to private business under various programs designed to encourage industrial development. He records unproductive spending on everything from mailmen's boots to the much-troubled hydrofoil submarine-chaser Bras d'Or.

The 53-year-old auditor-general, who survived an abandoned effort by the Trudeau government last year to reduce his powers, also compiles a scene that his critics back the manpower and pay scales to do the accounting job as thoroughly and quickly as it should.

Early in the bulky report, Mr. Henderson returns to a perennial complaint—that the government and its public servants are whittling away the hard-won historical right of the voting public's representatives to check every penny of spending before it is paid.

He cites a half-dozen examples in the year to March 31, 1970.

A total of almost $175 million, earmarked for spending by various departments by votes in the 1969-70 year, was not spent that year but held over for future spending. In all, there was $295.5 million of such money held over at the close of the fiscal year.

"One of the most important controls exercised by Parliament over public expenditure is its requirement that all estimates of expenditure submitted to it shall be for the services coming in course of payment during the fiscal year," he says.

"This control is seriously weakened when funds are credited to special accounts to be available for spending in future years."

He also assails the practice whereby so-called contingency votes of money by Parliament—designed to meet unexpected costs—have grown larger in recent years.

The Commons public accounts committee has protested about the scale of such appropriations —$100 million last year—and particularly about the need for the government to get parliamentary approval for spending the money in supplementary votes.

"Not only has the practice . . . been continued, but the purposes of the contingencies vote were extended in 1966-67 and again in 1969-70 to establish a reserve"—$38.6 million last year—for future spending.

Among other systems of operation that weaken parliamentary control, the report says, is a new method whereby revenue-earning departments may spend excess income without reference to the Commons.

Five departments had access to about $3 million of such money in 1969-70, the report says.

In a similar vein, no department ever reports that it has exceeded its budget. The department often delays payment for costs already incurred without authority until covering sums are voted, as if for a new requirement.

The report calls such a technique misleading. It also chides the treasury board for making payments under some programs without Parliament's prior approval. The board authorized 16 grants amounting to $230,289 in that manner during the year.

Mailman's Boots Tax-Free

OTTAWA (CP) — Did you know that your mailman delivers in tax-free boots?

Well, it's true. Furthermore, he doesn't pay taxes on his blooming gloves either.

All this is revealed in Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's latest report on the vagaries and whimsies of government spending.

Since Oct. 1, 1968, the post office has been giving the mailmen boot-and-glove allowances worth $75 a year.

However, it hasn't been including the allowances for income tax purposes in the earnings of postal employees.

Mr. Henderson says that as long ago as 1925 the tax department decided post office allowances were taxable.

Between 1968 and 1969, the post office gave employees a $60 salary increase instead of an allowance, removing the problem of failure to report the allowance.

When the separate $75 allowance was instituted in late 1968, the post office again failed to report it for income tax purposes.

It Was A Cold Winter

OTTAWA (CP) — If the boys in the armed forces recall the winter of 1970 as a mighty cold one, Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson tells why.

It was three green overcoats, basically.

The government ordered 100,000 of them in early 1969 at a cost of $1,740,000.

It anticipated that 16,000 would be available by the end of 1969.

But by September only 859 had arrived and the year-end figure looked more like 4,000.

The defence department needed at least 10,000 by Jan. 1, 1970, to go with the new green uniforms.

So a new contract with another manufacturer was negotiated in the fall of 1969.

It called for 15,000 overcoats at a cost of $451,800—which Mr. Henderson says exceeded by $186,000 the cost under the other contract.

"We understand that although the major part of the delay in production was the fault of the contractor, no part of the additional cost of from him as the contract does not provide a penalty for failure to meet contractual delivery terms."

Ottawa Won't Aid Book Firm

TORONTO (CP) — The question of government loans to ailing Canadian publishing houses was discussed on four fronts Friday. It was rejected as a poor solution by the president of a major Canadian publishing firm.

Prime Minister Trudeau said in Ottawa the federal cabinet had arrived at a decision regarding participation in a $1 million loan to help McClelland and Stewart, Ltd., a Toronto publishing house, stay in business.

Allan Grossman Ontario minister of trade and development said in an interview later in the day that the federal government had decided not to participate.

Premier William Davis told the Ontario legislature the province would go ahead with the loan, despite Ottawa's decision.

And Jack C. Fleming, president of Thomas Nelson and Sons Canada Ltd. told the royal commission on book publishing here that government loans "would inevitably lead to governmental controls."

He said governments should aid financially-troubled firms with tax concessions instead.

Mr. Fleming said public concern about the publishing industry was based on the recent sale of two publishing firms to United States interests, and not on an understanding of the real problems of publishing in Canada.

The United Church of Canada sold Ryerson Press of Toronto last December to the U.S.-controlled McGraw-Hill Co. of Canada Ltd.

Earlier, W. J. Gage Ltd. of Toronto sold a controlling interest in its textbook division to Scott Foresman and Co. of Illinois.

The Ontario government, which announced the inquiry a day before Ryerson Press was sold, instructed the commission to study functions of the publishing industry in contributing to the cultural life and education of the people of Ontario and Canada.

The province also told the commission to report on possible consequences of foreign ownership or control of publishing firms.

Business Urged To Adapt

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian National Railways has placed orders amounting to more than $15 million for new railway equipment, the company announced today.

The equipment will be built in plants in Trenton, N.S., and Hamilton, Ont.

Ordered from National Steel Car Corp. Ltd. in Hamilton were 500 70-ton insulated box-cars to cost $14 million. Delivery is to take place between Dec. 13, 1971, and ebruay, 372.

At the same time, CN has placed an additional order for 85-foot container flatcars with Hawker Siddeley of Canada Ltd. in Trenton.

The company earlier ordered 150 of the cars, capable of carrying four containers at a time. The latest order is for an additional 60 cars at a cost of $1.1 million. The earlier order was worth $3.7 million.

Civil Rights To Be Guarded

TORONTO (CP) — Anyone involved in a hearing before an administrative board, or a public inquiry such as a royal commission, will have the right to bring a lawyer and to cross-examine witnesses under legislation introduced Friday in the Ontario legislature by Premier William Davis.

Hearings of inquiries such as royal commissions will be open by law unless the commissioner feels public security or intimate financial or personal matters outweigh the advantages of publicity.

The four bills Premier Davis introduced Friday are a consideration of a program to implement recommendations contained in the first report of the McRuer commission on civil rights in Ontario, which came down in 1968.

One bill, the 287-page Civil Rights Statute Law Amendment Act, follows a review of 250 of the province's more than 500 laws.

Amendments are made to 32 laws to redefine the scope of boards and tribunals, insert the right of appeal where it was considered to protect the individual when he fits comes into contact with administrative boards so that the system, not the individual, will be responsible for maintaining his rights.

The Statutory Powers Procedures Act governs the proceedings of all tribunals in Ontario in short, any board that holds hearings to make decisions affecting an individual.

A person will be assured that he has reasonable notice of the hearing, that it is held in public, that he may be represented by counsel and may examine witnesses, that he will have a written decision with reasons if required and that he will be entitled to a stay of proceedings pending an appeal.

The bill also provides that the tribunal may call any necessary witnesses and documents.

A committee will be set up to review all rules of these tribunals.

Mr. Lawrence said duties and powers of boards have grown immensely in the last two or three decades with the result that some boards have as much power as courts.

The Judicial Review Procedure Act, also introduced earlier, outlines the procedure for judicial review which will make it faster for an appeal to be processed.

The public Inquiries Act introduces safeguards for persons having a direct interest in the subject matter of a public inquiry. They will be entitled to call and examine witnesses.

A person who gives evidence can be charged after the inquiry but if he testifies under protective evidence legislation his evidence may not be used against him, Mr. Lawrence said.

Hearsay evidence will still be allowed at public inquiries.

In addition, a commissioner will not be able to cite a person for contempt of the hearing, the attorney-general said. The practice has grown up under the guise of a commissioner also being a judge.

Warehouse Blaze Kills Watchman

Doug Hayhoe

Milton Richard Reid Dies at Wellington

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON (Staff) — A nightwatchman burned to death Saturday evening in a blaze of undetermined origin which levelled a Wellington warehouse located at the site of a closed canning factory.

Dead is 64-year-old Milton Richard Reid, who occupied an apartment in the front half of the warehouse, owned by Bloomfield wrecking contractor Murney Howe.

A fire alarm turned in by an unidentified person at about 10 p.m. Saturday night was answered by members of the Wellington and Bloomfield fire departments. Each brigade dispatched a pumper and a tank truck to the site of the metal warehouse adjacent to other factory buildings. Witnesses to the fire said light from the flames could be seen as far away as Presqu'ile Point and Belleville.

Firefighters battled the smoky inferno until 5 a.m. Sunday, striving to prevent it from spreading to nearby buildings. Quantities of lumber and tin stored in the burning warehouse were lost in the fire. No estimate of damage to the building and its contents has been released to date.

The charred body of the nightwatchman was found near the door of his apartment by members of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police at approximately 3 a.m. Sunday. A police spokesman said no decision concerning an inquest into his death has been reached.

A representative of the Ontario fire marshal's office, P. M. McKeracher of Belleville, inspected the ruins of the building Sunday. Wellington fire chief Otto Bowerman said firemen believed Mr. Reid was in the building when the fire started.

Mr. Reid's body is resting at the Hogle Funeral Home in Shannonville.

The fire victim is survived by his wife, Helen Reid, RR4, Stirling.

Soyuz Joins Space 'Lab'

"Leningrad orbital filling station"

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's latest manned spaceship, Soyuz 11, linked up today with the space laboratory Salute launched seven weeks ago, and the three cosmonauts from Soyuz 11 boarded Salute, Tass announced.

"A soviet manned orbital scientific station is functioning in space," Tass said.

Tass said the combined space traveller weighed 25 tons, indicating that Salute—whose weight had hitherto been a closely guarded secret—weighs a record 17½ tons. Soyuz 11 weighs 7½ tons.

The previous record weight in orbit was a 17-ton unmanned Proton scientific satellite sent up by the Russians in 1969.

"The cosmonauts entered the station Salute through a passage," the official Soviet news agency said. "The task of delivering the crew to an orbital station by a transport ship has been solved for the first time."

It reported that the equipment aboard Salute was functioning normally after seven weeks of unmanned orbital flight.

"The cosmonauts have started to fulfil their flight program," the announcement said.' It added that the joined Salute-Soyuz cosmic system" has a total weight of more than 25 tons.

Soyuz 11 was sent into orbit Sunday to do the job that Soyuz 10 failed to accomplish, send one or more men into Salute to carry out further experiments in the Soviet program to establish the first permanent space station. Soyuz 10 cruised in tandem with the laboratory for 5½ hours in April, but there was no transfer of personnel.

Lt.-Col. Georgi Dobrovolsky, 43-year-old commander of Soyuz 11, made a flight correction Sunday to bring his ship's path within 2.5 miles of Salute, Tass said only one further small correction was needed to swing in and dock with the big unmanned space laboratory.

Commonwealth Trade Fund Is Proposed

LONDON (CP) — Proposals for helping developing Commonwealth countries increase their exports will be discussed here Tuesday at a meeting of representatives of the 31 nations.

The Commonwealth secretariat under Canadian Secretary-General Arnold Smith has prepared a two-pronged plan calling for assistance from the wealthier countries and expectations in informed quarters are that at least part of it will be approved.

1. Establishment of a Commonwealth export market development fund to which contributions totalling £2 million ($4.8 million) a year would be made.

2. Creation of a Commonwealth export-import bank which would enable underdeveloped countries to extend long-term credits to customers.

Legion President In Favor of Draft

EDMONTON (CP) — Judge Redmond Roche of Montreal said Sunday he believes Canada should have compulsory military service.

"It would build a sense of responsibility and discipline," he said in an interview. "Young people in this country will become better citizens if they serve in the armed services."

Judge Roche, Dominion president of the Royal Canadian Legion, is in Edmonton for the 27th bi-annual meeting of the Legion's Alberta Command.

He said also that he favors young people travelling across the country this summer.

"If the government is giving youth money so they'll know their country better, and using travelling as an education, then I'm all for it."

Girl Returns Home

MONTREAL (CP) — While police were searching across Quebec province this weekend for Johanne Wagner, 16-year-old daughter of former Quebec justice minister Claude Wagner, she was staying with a girl friend. She returned to her home at 10:30 p.m. Saturday when she heard of the search launched to find her, police said.

Calcutta Fears Cholera Will Sweep Over City

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — Faced with the possibility of one of the greatest plagues of modern times, doctors here warned today that if cholera gets a foothold in this teeming metropolis of 7.5 million people, there is nothing that can stop it.

Despite police cordons thrown around the city, disease-ridden refugees from the fighting in East Pakistan already have set up a camp just inside the city limits.

And it seems that even troop blockades cannot halt the inexorable tide of victims from carrying death into India's major port.

At the moment the threat appears deceptively small—of the 12,000 refugees who have crowded on to open ground in a new housing development in northern Calcutta, only six have been sent to hospital with cholera.

So far, the only known deaths inside the Calcutta camp are two small children suffering from dehydration and malnutrition, but doctors warned that they already are dealing with 300 cases of cholera and gastroenteritis.

Well-informed diplomatic sources have estimated that 8,000 refugees have died of cholera as they trekked across the border from East Pakistan into India.

In a desperate bid to slow the tide of refugees, Indian security forces Sunday sealed off a stretch of the frontier with East Pakistan. But the human flood refused to be contained, and thousands pushed on into West Bengal State.

The Indian government is providing food for 40,000 refugees at a tent city outside Calcutta, six miles from the housing development, and a handful of Indian doctors and medical students are doing their best to inoculate them and care for the sick.

Help is on the way from many governments and charities, but there are fears here that it may be too little and too late.

The Indian government said 1.2 million doses of cholera vaccine are needed each week, but local production is only 300,000 doses a week.

An estimated 4.5 million refugees fled to India during and after the civil war in East Pakistan.

The tent city camp has grown from a handful of refugees 10 days ago. Men, women and children are moving closer and closer to Calcutta from outlying camps, where conditions are indescribably worse and the disease is rampant.

A retired army officer in charge of the camp in the Calcutta suburbs warned that unless sanitation facilities—now non-existent—were supplied immediately, cholera would sweep the camp and spread like wildfire across the city.

Cholera is endemic in the Ganges Delta and periodically throughout history it has reached epidemic proportions and swept in waves north, west and east, going as far as Europe on the one hand and North America on the other.

The virulent Asiatic strain now rampant along the border is fatal unless tackled immediately.

Warehouse Ruins

A crowd of the curious inspect the ruins of a Wellington warehouse, at an old canning factory, once called "Old 45." The warehouse was razed by fire Saturday night and the body of Milton Richard Reid, nightwatchman, was found near the door.

Jetliner Hits Fighter, Crashes in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jetliner carrying 49 persons cartwheeled "like a shooting star" into a mountain region and exploded after a collision with a U.S. marine jet fighter. The pilot of the warplane was one of the two crew members aboard the military plane.

"It may take two or three days to get all the bodies out," said Dr. James Kono of the Los Angeles County coroner's office.

All the bodies will have to be brought out by helicopter in separate baskets, he said, because the "closest we can land by helicopters is 800 yards from the crash scene."

The Sunday night crash of the Hughes Air West DC-9 was the worst civilian plane disaster in California history. And it was the first crash in the United States of a scheduled airliner in more than a year.

The radar interception officer of the marine F-4 Phantom jet parachuted to safety after the in-flight collision east of Ione.

He was the only reported survivor, but a helicopter pilot later reported sighting a parachute which he said he believed to be that of the pilot of the F-4. It was sighted near the wreck of the fighter plane.

Nine bodies were spotted from helicopters in the wreckage of the twin-engined airliner, which crashed into a deep gorge in two pieces and was still smouldering hours after the disaster.

Wreckage was spread over a mile-square, tree-studded area.

Fire officials and sheriff's deputies who flew over the wreckage before darkness fell said they were convinced no one aboard the DC-9 could have survived.

A thick-fog prevented search and rescue teams from climbing down a cliff to the airliner or reaching the fighter during the night.

The gorge is too narrow to land a helicopter, officials said.

Plane Hits Cottages

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — At least 20 persons were killed today when an Allegheny Airline Convair 580 aircraft crashed as it approached Tweed-New Haven Airport.

Spokesmen at Yale-New Haven Hospital said 20 persons were pronounced dead on arrival. The hospital said it received three survivors.

A witness said she saw the plane hit electrical cables and plunge into a row of summer cottages.

Young Britons Arrange First Cholera Relief

LONDON (AP) — Four young Britons decided more help was needed to combat the cholera epidemic raging among refugees from East Pakistan. Thanks to their efforts, a planeload of medical supplies is on the way to India.

An RAF mercy flight was leaving for Calcutta today, but Richard Lejeune, 23, and three friends decided that was not soon enough. They got to work Saturday night on the telephone and arranged through Oxfam, a British charity, and business firms for 25 tons of vaccine, syringes and other medicine.

A chartered plane left Sunday night with the supplies.

Lejeune is director of a small charity named the Kastur Fund, for a village in south India he once visited.

"I was watching television news on Saturday when the idea struck me," said Lejeune.

"Kastur had £2,000 ($7,200) in the bank. People were dying. Money was needed right away. So I decided to start moving."

He first called Oxfam to ask how the money could best be used. Oxfam told him there was a desperate need for syringes. Lejeune called the Gillette factory at Reading.

The company agreed to supply 300,000 needles and syringes worth $34,000 to Oxfam.

"We will not be pressing Oxfam for payment and have supplied the equipment at discount price," the company said.

Meanwhile Lejeune called Trade Wind Airways which told him it would cost about $22,800 to charter a plane to Calcutta. The company said this was $2,400 below the regular price.

Lejeune said his fund had only the $7,200 but another $9,600 would be coming in soon from a charity walk. The airline said he could have the plane and pay later.

"This really was a tremendous effort on the part of this young group," said a spokesman for Oxfam. "It would be great if other people reacted in the same way."

As Boats Go Sailing By

At the 43rd annual inspection of RCSCC Quinte on Sunday afternoon, there wasn't much wind but the mighty boats of the Belleville sea cadets filed past Brigadier General G. R. Coffin for a naval salute. During the day the sea cadet band held a concert under the direction of ship's commanding officer, B. T. Bevan . The large audience had difficulty hearing as the whine of power boats drowned out the entertainment.

Sea Cadets Recieve Awards

Sunday afternoon held little wind for the sailing demonstration performed by the Belleville sea cadets at their 43rd annual inspection.

While the large audience of parents, friends and interested bystanders drank gallons of cold drinks and watched the boats fighting the balmy weather, Brigadier General G. R. Coffin and the ship's officers prepared certificates, viewed the barracks and waited for the boats to return for the sailpast.

Talking was made difficult by the boat races in progress on the opposite side of the harbor. Much of the concert by the sea cadet orchestra was drowned out by the high-powered speed boats.

The afternoon's activities were highlighted by the numerous awards to be given to the ship's company.

The best cadet of the year was awarded to LC Edward Fiolan.

Awards for perfect attendance were presented to PO Frederick Keeglan, PO Richard Line, PO Gerald Rogers, LC Edward Fiolan, LC Fred Hardy and AC Stephen Goode.

The top shot of the year award was presented to PO Michael Callaghan with a score of 98 from a possible 100.

In written examinations for the AC rating, Dale Wilson was presented with recognition for a score of 100 (a perfect paper).

A tie resulted for the honors in the leading cadet class between Paul Coughlin and Kirk Kelly with identical marks of 97 per cent.

For PO second class, Alec Olaveson took the honors with 95 per cent and for PO first class, Michael Callaghan was the winner with 88 per cent.

For the best divisional attendance, Beatty was acclaimed the winner with PO second class Miles Pringle as the divisional PO.

An award for the best boat hand was given to LC Dale Jones.

The knot board is a prerequisite for further advancement.

Delayed Cheques Irritate Farmers

A change in accounting procedures at a government office in Ottawa has delayed milk subsidy cheques for nearly two months and farmers in the Bay of Quinte district are hopping mad.

Under federal policy, the government pays industrial milk producers $1.25 per hundredweight of milk sold, this payment being in addition to the rate paid by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

Normally the government subsidy payment for the previous month comes along about the 25th, but farmers haven't received any subsidy money since their February cheque and the March payment is now six weeks overdue.

"How wold a salaried worker feel if he didn't get his pay cheque on time?" asks Mrs. Fred Lang, RR 2, Shannonville.

In some instances, where farmers are running a large herd, the monthly subsidy cheque can amount anywhere up to $400 and, according to Mrs. Lang, "that isn't peanuts."

"If farmers are late in paying their income tax there is a penalty, but when it is the other way around it doesn't seem to matter.

"But that is the way farmers are treated," she said.

And what makes Mrs. Lang even angrier is that no one in Ottawa thought to notify farmers that milk subsidy cheques would be delayed and it took a telephone call to learn the reason.

"A woman in the (Ottawa) office told me they were getting hundreds of complaints," she said.

The Lang's sell their milk to a Newburgh cheese factory but the complaint about delayed subsidy cheques is general.

Harold Elliott, owner of the Foxboro cheese factory north of Belleville said his patrons were also complaining loudly.

"They haven't received any subsidy since their February cheque and they need the money to pay their bills," he said.

Actually, without the subsidy, industrial milk producers are receiving only $3.73 per hundredweight.

The rate set for industrial milk by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board is $3.90 per hundredweight, but from this is deducted 35 cents per cwt. to support cheese export.

Farmers claim they need the $1.25 per cwt. subsidy to remain in the business of milking cows but even they admit things are much better if subsidies weren't necessary.

"If we received enough money for our milk in the first place we wouldn't need the subsidy," Mrs. Lang says.

IN MEMORIAM

CARSON — In loving memory of my dear husband, Frank Carson, passed away June 7, 1965.
Not dead to us who loved him,
Not lost, but gone before,
He lives with us in memory,
And memory lives for ever.
— Sadly missed by daughter Shirley and son-in-law Walt.

BAILEY — In loving memory of Ida Bailey who passed away June 7, 1965.
This month comes with sad regret,
We miss you more than anyone knows
We wish you were not yet,
You left us without goodbye,
Your memory we'll always keep,
But you left us memories we are proud to keep.
— Sadly remembered by husband Bill, daughter Peggy, son-in-law Bill Bailey.

DENNIS, Jackie — In loving memory of my dear sister Jackie who went one year ago today.
Many a day I've thought of you,
And many an hour she is in our thoughts,
A lady and true friend was she,
She has gone from our home but not from our hearts.
Sadly missed, but never forgotten.
— Lovingly remembered by Bill and Betty.

DENNIS, Jackie — In loving memory of my dear sister Jackie who passed away June 7, 1971.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles and trials are past,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
— Loving reception by mother.

DENNIS, Jackie — In loving memory of our mother who passed away one year ago today, June 7, 1970.
Dearest Mom, I'm thinking of you today,
Thinking and true, in her heart and mind,
Memories are what she left behind.
— Always remembered by Richard, Wilma, John, Daniel, James, Terri and Mitch.

WATKINS — In loving memory of Maude Watkins who passed away June 7, 1963.
When memory makes me falling,
And we sit in quiet silence,
I'll reach out my hand to meet a hand of her.
If she could only come home,
I'd thank my God on bended knees forever.
— Sadly missed by Ruth.

When at times they see us smile,
But they little know the heartache,
Our smiles hide all the while,
Unknown in the hearts of mother and dad.

650 Graduate From Loyalist College

The Honorable John White, Minister of University Affairs in his first address to a convocation exercise, told the graduating students of Loyalist College "you will reap and enhance the profits of your age and will make Ontario a simply glorious place in which to live.

"In 1980, under the Robarts government, these colleges were made possible and this graduating class I see before me today is typical of the excellent standard set by the program," added Mr. White.

Together, Applied Arts and Business graduates, Technology graduates, Extension graduates and Retraining graduates received a total of 650 diplomas and certificates during the course of Saturday afternoon in the auditorium of Centennial Secondary School.

"When in business we can tell if we are doing well if our bank statement is in the black," said Herbert Young, president of the college. "It is not so easy to determine the worth of an educational institution."

"Craig Clayton," said one member of the platform party, "comes as close to typifying the worth of education and drive as anyone I know. Craig came to Loyalist five years ago and joined the Manpower Retraining Course beginning with grade nine. He completed grade 12 with 92 percent 18 months later and two weeks ago completed a four-year honors commerce course at Queen's University. Being a very determined and proud young man, Craig had little money and had to hitchhike to the convocation exercise today.

"This is how I would justify our school," finished the spokesman for the retraining division.

Special tribute was also paid to Judge J. C. Anderson, member of the Loyalist Board of Governors and Donald Wallace Shaver, Associate Director of the Applied Arts and Technology Branch of the Ontario Department of Education.

Both men were awarded the diplomas of Applied Arts and Technology, honoris causa, the highest diploma Loyalist College has to offer, for their efforts to further the efficiency of the school in the community.

During the afternoon, the following special awards and grants were made.

Robert Charles Moore and William Kenneth McKeown were chosen for the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, (Quinte Branch) Scholarship.

The Atkinson Foundation Grants were awarded to Allan Murray Cassalman, Campbellford, Marlene Ann Johnston Ottawa, Theresa Elizabeth Johnston, Tweed, Robert-Donaldson Tennie, Belleville and Robert Norman Yerrow of Napanee.

The Board of Governors Award was presented to Clarence Henry Goodman, Stirling, and Lawrence J. Wood of Brighton.

The Senator Fraser Memorial Scholarships were awarded to Brian Meredith Dickey of Napanee and Douglas Roger Lea, of Trenton.

The Honorable George Hees Awards went to Garry Ernest Carter of Cornwall and James Rex Duffin of Stirling.

The Rotary Club of Belleville Scholarship was awarded to Barbara Ann Scott while the Student Association Scholarships were awarded to Robert James Carter of Belleville and Geoffrey William Webster of Napanee.

The Alpha Beta Kappa Sorority Award was presented to Barbara Nancy Rempel of Brighton, and the Retraining Awards were given to Arthur Monk, James Chambers, Webster Blakely and Johanna Hoftyzer.

The Ontario Medical Secretaries Association Prize was awarded to Marlene Elaine Parks and the Parrot Trophy was presented to Gail Anna Hosking.

Mortgage Burned At Christ Church

Sunday was a "red letter day" for members of Christ Church in Belleville.

The annual confirmation service saw 62 persons received into the church as new members, while a discharged mortgage for $85,000 was burned in a mortgage burning ceremony.

During the service, Bishop J. B. Creeggan, announced the appointment of Rev. John Utley as new assistant to Canon R. B. D. Wright. Mr. Utley, who succeeds Rev. David Hawkins, will take over his new duties August 1.

In his confirmation service message, Bishop Creeggan spoke on the subject of faithfulness in fulfilling that which God expects. Parents should teach faith through their faithfulness at communion each Sunday.

White Speaks at Convocation

John White, minister of university affairs, told graduating class of Loyalist College "you will reap and enhance the profits of our age and will make Ontario a glorious place in which to live." This was the first time Mr. White addressed a gathering of this kind in his new governmental role. A total of 650 diplomas and certificates were awarded at the graduation in the Centennial Secondary School auditorium.

Man Killed Between Cars

One brother was fatally crushed between two cars and another injured Sunday night as they attempted to hook a stalled vehicle up to a second.

Floyd Rosborough, 35, of RR4, Picton, died instantly when his stalled car was struck from the rear by Ernest Bert Rushlow, 45 of 66½ Catherine Street, Belleville. His brother, Dale Rosborough, 29, of RR2, Demorestville, is listed in satisfactory condition in Belleville General Hospital this morning, suffering from a broken leg.

At 4 a.m. Sunday, the deceased's car stalled on Coleman Street. The two men were attempting to attach a chain, standing in between the two cars, when the Rushlow vehicle struck the dead man's car.

Rushed to hospital by LaSalle Ambulance, the men were attended by Dr. James Dolan and coroner Dr. William Beattie.

Rushlow has been charged with dangerous, careless and impaired driving.

No Farm Strike Planned In Quinte

Despite dissatisfaction over low prices farmers in the Bay of Quinte area so far are not talking of strike action by withholding produce from the market.

This was indicated this morning following a report from Brockville that Leeds county farmers were planning the best method of withholding their products from the market to get better prices.

Hubert Earl, Leeds county director of the National Farm Union said Friday that plans were continuing in his area for a national farmers' strike begining June 24.

However, National Farmer's Union President Roy Atkinson doubted that there would be a national strike by farmers.

Bernard Murphy, president of the Marysville local of the Quinte district farmers union, said this morning there had been no serious talk of strike action in his area.

At the same time, however, he said it was from the local membership that plans for strike action would have to initiate.

Checks with the Prince Edward county local and with Belleville area locals revealed that there had been no discussion on the subject.

Mrs. G. Williams qt Springbrook said there had been no talk of strike action in her local.

MP's Questionnaire

Quinte MPP Dr. Richard Potter has received a fair response thus far to a questionnaire seeking the views of constituents.

"People keep saying they want to get involved," said Dr.Potter, noting that he had more than a 12 per cent return from constituents so far. Hardly an indication of overwhelming involvement, but then people tend to be slow responding to such overtures and Dr. Potter is hopeful that some 50 per cent eventually will respond.

Certainly it is an opportunity for people to show they are serious when they speak of wanting to become involved in public affairs, or at least show an active interest. An opportunity, as Dr. Potter put it, "to tell me what they think."

"If I am to act realistically, he says, "and try to base my decisions on the thinking of people in the riding then I think they should do their part by filling out the forms."

This is in line with the participatory democracy that is more and more in vogue these days, and which undoubtedly is here to stay. The response Dr. Potter receives will be a measure of this riding's belief in political involvement and interest in matters which affect us all.

The Joys of Exile

That was a great idea of the Italian authorities in banishing two or three dozen Mafia chiefs to island exile. The only trouble is, they seem to have picked the wrong island, one which was inhabited and whose residents are getting out as fast as they can.

To hear the Mafia people one would almost regard them as the soul of concern for the plight of the islanders. Said one of them: "We find ourselves in a serious state of embarrassment. We are sorry that these people find themselves in this state because of us, at least indirectly. How can we live in this little place if we are totally excluded from any form of civil co-existence?"

Well that is their problem. After all, the reason for their banishment was the ruthless machine-gun slaying of Palermo's chief prosecutor, Pietro Scaglione on May 5, which police say was the work of the Mafia.

But to get back to the decision to send them to this island Filicudi. Ideally, such exile should be to some remote, preferably uninhabited island where the exiles could make themselves useful, say by farming, and harm no one but themselves. It is the sort of fate we believe is tailor-made for the FLQ in Quebec and IRA in Ireland. The only problem is the lack of suitable islands. There probably are not that many left which are not only uninhabited but could support life were they to be chosen for such choice citizens as those mentioned above. Such exile as the penal colonies of old in places like Tasmania and which the Australians at large would prefer not to talk about.

Anyway it looks as if the Mafia gentlemen are going to have Filicudi more or less to themselves, with what consequences we cannot predict. Earlier a group of 17 other Mafia bosses were shipped to the island of Lampedusa off Africa, which is one we had never heard of, and surprising for we did not realise Italy had any island possessions in that area.

Expressway Issue

A bold step which has all the hallmarks of further controversy is the Ontario government's decision to halt construction of the Spadina Expressway at Lawrence Avenue and instead encourage completion of a rapid transit line down the expressway or elsewhere.

A great deal of money has been spent on the route to-date so that it would be prudent to make the best of what work has already been done, either as a highway or as a base for additional subway transportation. There are differences of opinion on the latter, with Metro Chairman Albert Campbell for one talking of the possibility of a new subway line in the vicinity of Bathurst.

Toronto officials are naturally unhappy with the provincial government's decision, but it seems to have been made with the intention of saving the city from further inroads on environmental balance by that great sacred cow of our day — the automobile.

Pipeline and Pollution Issues for Washington Talks

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — Opposition to the Alaska oil pipeline proposal has been both loud and persistent in the United States, but it has been notably lacking in political muscle.

Informed observers believe that External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada will be trying to allay that criticism when Thursday when he meets here with State Secretary William Rogers.

The main purpose of Sharp's visit at the head of a Canadian delegation is said to be a meeting of Canadian and U.S. officials to push along a joint program for dealing with pollution in the Great Lakes.

But the Alaska pipeline controversy will figure in a separate meeting between Sharp and Rogers, a meeting requested by the Canadian minister in what is believed to be an attempt to raise the level of interest in the U.S. to the highest reaches of government.

Sharp and other Canadian cabinet ministers have been expressing public concern about the pipeline proposal for several months. They say the scheme — to carry oil from the North Slope across Alaska by pipeline and then by sea-going tanker to the U.S. mainland — threatens the British Columbia coast because of the danger of leaks, collisions or shipwrecks.

Senior civil servants from both governments met here last month to discuss Canada's concern, but there were unmistakable signs afterward that the Canadians went away disappointed.

The Canadians are said to have felt that the U.S. technical experts were not adequately briefed to discuss such details as potential damage to marine life, and to the Canadian shore.

quantities of oil likely to be moved if the pipeline is approved, and similar questions.

Shortly after that meeting, Sharp announced he would be seeking Rogers to discuss the pipeline.

Observers now believe that Ottawa felt the American side hadn't taken last month's technical meeting as seriously as the Canadians because there was little political pressure on the U.S. civil servants to treat the matter urgently.

In normal circumstances, Canada might have been able to count on powerful allies in Congress to support the Canadian view since environmental issues are politically "hot" in the U.S.

But the current business recession and high unemployment in the U.S. have combined to keep some potential allies silent.

This is particularly true for representatives and senators from Alaska and the state of Washington, where concern for the environment has been comparatively active in the past.

In Alaska, the pipeline — with its potential jobs and capital investment — has become as sacred a political cause as motherhood, and Alaska's politicians have been unanimous in pushing the proposal.

Since Washington state probably would be the main southern terminal for tankers from Alaska, no Washington spokesmen here has felt able to oppose the pipeline vigorously. With the powerful Boeing Co. laying off thousands of aircraft workers in Seattle, the state's unemployment rate now is more than 10 per cent and Seattle's is running nearly 15 per cent.

One of the few outspoken congressional critics has been Les Aspin, Democratic representative from Wisconsin, who has stressed the environmental dangers of both the pipeline and the tankers. But his attack report increasing difficulty it winning allies.

Most of the opposition to the pipeline has come from outside Congress — from conservation groups, from technical experts within the U.S. government, and from private and governmental environmental agencies.

None of these groups is believed to have the sort of influence needed to balance effectively the powerful oil lobby and its congressional supporters who have been pressing the U.S. government to approve the pipeline.

Lacking substantial support from Congress for its views, Canada is apparently hoping to persuade the state secretary to carry Canadian arguments into the cabinet-level discussions where the future of Alaska's oil will be decided.

Troop Withdrawal Issue Under Study by NATO

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In calling on Europe to negotiate mutual reductions in troops and arms, Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev appears to have seized the political initiative in a manner which has unsettled the Western alliance.

Some NATO members are reported eager to take up Brezhnev's challenge without further qualification. Others are reported to be more cautious, proposing careful exploration on the meaning of his proposal and the prospects for success before plunging into full bargaining.

Differences in Western reaction may be exactly what Brezhnev had hoped to achieve. After all, splintering the West and reducing support for United States foreign policy have long been the evident basis of Soviet strategy.

Some authorities suggest that if Brezhnev really wanted to convince the West of his sincerity, all he has to do is start reducing the Soviet naval buildup in the Mediterranean or signal some real hope to the Germans assuring the freedom and security of West Berlin.

What has emerged so far, in the various discussion forums, are little bubbles of hope—all suggesting something more impressive is just around the corner but none indicating that the Russians are about to throw their long-range strategy to the winds.

Nevertheless, many experts believe there is more to the Brezhnev approach this time than the usual political manoeuvring. Even in Communist terms, maintaining big armies in Eastern Europe is expensive and reducing them might provide the Kremlin with manpower and machinery to meet the yearning of Soviet citizens for more consumer comforts.

In any case, the argument goes, there is no harm in bargaining. Pinning the Russians to the conference table may help end their ardor for propaganda war. Even if initial proposals are nebulous, discussions might point to a pathway for development on which both sides could agree.

As for the old Western policy that there should be no European security conference without four-power progress on the future of Berlin, mutual reductions in troops and arms can safely be negotiated as a separate matter—so the experts argue.

European security would involve a lot more than the simple agreement of reducing troops and arms. It would require full co - operation on mutual surveillance, warning on troop movements, the removal of nuclear trip-wire gadgets and even the removal of nuclear armaments.

But though the experts like to talk of separation, there is little doubt that mutual forces reductions, if achieved, would be an essential part of European security. And the Russians may just be willing to bargain on that point—without giving more than an inch on Berlin.

Railroad Is Still Best Link Between Toronto and Montreal

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A research study ordered by the Canadian Transport Commission has been taking a detailed look at two ideas for rapid transit to connect Canada's two biggest cities, Toronto and Montreal. One is STOL (short takeoff and landing aircraft) and the other is TACV (tracked air-cushion vehicle).

Both systems have been much in the news as modern technological developments. The research group has been trying to work out the probable costs, revenues, benefits and upset to the environment, to determine what is most desirable, balancing all points of view.

The conclusion which has just been reported will surprise many. At least until 1980, the researchers have decided, the best way to move people between Toronto and Montreal is on good, old-fashioned railway tracks. Ten years from now STOL or TACV might begin to look preferable.

The study estimates the cost of STOL airports in the two cities at $12,000,000. It estimates the cost of a double-tracked guideway for vehicles like the Aerocar type at $500,000,000. One of the solid merits of using trains is that the tracks are already there.

A second-generation STOL aircraft now being developed by DeHavilland Aircraft of Toronto, is expected to be ready when it becomes available, the study says. It may be the answer to transport needs in the most thickly populated part of Canada.

Until then, the sensible plan is to improve the speed and quality of the trains running on the tracks that are there.

That glamorous future may be just over the horizon, but it seems the horizon is a little farther away than enthusiasts might assume.

In Praise of Pierre Trudeau

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

At a time when there seems to be a lot of unrest in government circles and considerable public dissatisfaction with government officials, I should like to express my appreciation for the type of leadership we have had in this country for the last few years.

When Mr. Trudeau first came to public attention, he was described by all the epithets which unthinking people normally attach to such strong personalities. Some saw him as a Communist, others called him a playboy, and still others looked upon him as some kind of freak. To most of us, however, whether or not we were affiliated with any political party, he appeared as a bright new star on the political horizon.

During his term of office, I think he has done more good for his country than any Prime Minister in recent years. Naturally, his critics can point to failures and mistakes of his government of which there have been many, but instead of trying to pass the blame on to someone else as lesser politicians would do, he openly accepts his full share of it. It seems to me that all governments are faced with serious problems, but the only political parties that have all the solutions are those in opposition. When a party suddenly finds itself in power, the conscience that it once possessed seems to pass on to the new opposition.

The complete honesty and unpretentious manner of Mr. Trudeau has always intrigued me. He never hesitates to "tell it like it is" and if, in the process, he offends some sanctimonious "fuddiduds" whose lives, words, and deeds have always been beyond reproach, he does not lose any sleep over it. He stands by his convictions even when they make him unpopular with the masses. As a result, he is sometimes wrongfully accused of being cold, callous and aloof — charges with which some of the rest of us are not unfamiliar.

It is true that Mr. Trudeau seems to have become more conservative lately. I rarely see a picture of him now without a collar and tie; when he talks about the monarchy now, he sounds more like a recently landed Tory British immigrant than a full-blooded Canadian; and to climax everything he has even become a husband. Strangely enough, many of his traditionalists even scorned him for this last act.

In any case, I have never been prouder to be a Canadian than I have during the last few years. I have never been served by a leader who was more representative of all Canadians than our present Prime Minister. He has been able to communicate with people right across the country whether they live in Quebec or British Columbia. For all this, I thank him.

W. VANCE,
Trenton

Gaelic-speaking Minister Named Moderator of Presbyterian Church

TORONTO (CP) — A Gaelic-speaking minister from Calgary was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Sunday night.

Rev. Murdo Nicolson, 60, was the official nominee for the highest office in the church and was unopposed at the opening of the church's 97th general assembly.

He succeeds Dr. Dillwyn T. Evans of Thornhill, Ont., who conducted the election at St. Andrew's Church in downtown Toronto.

The minister of the 1,000-member Grace Church in Calgary became the official nominee after a ballot was taken four months ago of ministers and elders in the 44 presbyteries in Canada.

Another contender could have been nominated from the floor but such an occurence would have been unusual.

The church claims 190,000 communicant members.

Dr. Nicolson was born and educated in Glasgow, where his first language was Gaelic. For nine years, he was a missionary in Peru of the Free Church of Scotland.

Just over 26 years ago he came to Canada as supply minister of the Free Church of Scotland in Vancouver. The following year he joined the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

He served as a Presbyterian pastor in Vancouver and Saskatoon before going to Calgary eight years ago.

He said he sees a return to religious moral principles by youth.

Youth is already reacting against "our undesirable ways of living," he said.

Cut in Grant Sets Back Hemophilia Research

GUELPH (CP) — A $50,000 cut in a provincial government grant has set hemophilia research at the University of Guelph back 19 years, Dr. H. G. Downie, chairman of the university's department of biomedical sciences, said Sunday.

Dr. Downie said the university can no longer afford the world's only three-factor hemophilic dog colony at the university's Ontario Veterinary College.

Some of the 176 dogs will be sold and about 100 will have to be destroyed, Dr. Downie said in a telephone interview.

Last year, the research branch of the department of health provided a $76,000 grant for maintenance of the colony. The grant was reduced to $18,500 this year.

"We will try to keep a nucleus of about 36 dogs with the money we get this year," Dr. Downie said.

Hemophilia, a disease in which blood clotting is defective, is known only in males and is transmitted from mother to son. The disease causes excessive bleeding and can be fatal.

Dr. Downie, who has been breeding a colony at the university since 1956, explained that hemophilia resulted from three major factors missing in the blood.

All three were being studied at the university and observers from many parts of the world visited Guelph to study Dr. Downie's work.

"We quibbled back and forth with the government but couldn't get any more money," said Dr. Downie. "It's all economics and I guess they felt they couldn't afford the input."

462 Applications Turned Down

Man Was in Lebanon Who's Who But Can't Get Job in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Three years ago, Youssef M'Rouch was in the Who's Who of his native Lebanon.

Today, in Canada, he is on welfare.

"In any Arab country I could get three jobs—teaching, writing in the scientific press or working in industry," Mr. M'Rouch said in a recent interview in Toronto where he lives.

Since coming to Canada March 3, 1969, with his wife and three sons, aged 12, 10 and 6, he has had only four months' employment—as a grinder in an electrical manufacturing plant.

To date, he has written 462 job applications. They have been to schools, The Atomic Energy Commission of Canada, Ontario Hydro, federal and provincial civil services, chemical laboratories, uranium mine laboratories and hospital and medical laboratories.

From 400 applications he got 348 rejections and was not answered 52 times. The largest number of rejections cited lack of Canadian experience.

He was judged overqualified for 68 jobs and underqualified for 16. Another 34 employers gave lack of Canadian citizenship as the reason for rejecting his application.

In Beirut in 1952, when he was considering emigration to Canada, Australia or South Africa, Canadian immigration officials told him a man of his qualifications should have no trouble finding a career in this country.

He is the author of six books, 15 technical reports and 17 scientific papers and lectures. He taught at the secondary school level in Middle East countries for eight years. He has worked in industrial and government laboratories in the Middle East and in Germany. He is fluent in Arabic, French, English and German.

Since coming to Canada he has taken a 48-week community college course in quality control.

Upon arrival in Canada, Mr. M'Rouch, whose specialities in the radiation and nuclear fields had qualified him as a delegate to scientific conferences in many countries, found some of his technical qualifications did not meet Canadian standards.

The Ontario department of education rated him at the level of a Grade 13 student, still short of a Canadian or equivalent university degree and Ontario teacher training. He was rated first as a chemical engineering technician, then as a senior industrial engineering technician by the Ontario Association of Certified Engineering Technicians and Technologists, but Canada has no shortage of these.

"I know engineers driving taxis to live," says Mr. M'Rouch. Mr. M'Rouch is allowing two more months to find a suitable job, and then will move on to Australia or South Africa.

Wells Will Cut Welfare If Jobs Are Turned Down

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Ontario will tighten welfare regulations to deny assistance to applicants who refuse to take available jobs, Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, said Sunday.

Mr. Wells said the current high rate of unemployment has placed the greatest strain on the province's welfare system since the depression.

He told the Ontario Municipal Officers' annual convention that the rise in employable welfare recipients increased general welfare assistance expenditures 75 per cent last year.

Under present legislation Ontario cannot force welfare recipients to work for their payments but he indicated the province will tighten its regulations.

"A single able-bodied man must be willing to take a job which he can handle even if it is in Northern Ontario and he is living in Hamilton."

If we can provide the job and the transportation to do it, then he must provide the willingness to do this work ....." Mr. Wells said.

Brezhnev Doctrine Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Sunday that any Russia—NATO agreement on European troop reductions should "make it clear that Russia is renouncing the so-called Brezhnev doctrine."

The Brezhnev doctrine was propounded "to justify the invasion of Czechoslovakia, giving Russia the right to ..... invade any Communist country in order to preserve the regime ....." Mr. Stanfield said.

Plan to Flood B.C. Valley Attacked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Liberal Leader Pat McGeer told the International Joint Commission Saturday that the 1933 agreement with Seattle City Light and Power Co. to flood the Skagit Valley was so bad that a former British Columbia forest minister refused to sign it.

Mr. McGeer was one of 14 groups and individuals presenting briefs on the final day of the two-day IJC hearings. Previous hearings were held in Bellingham, Wash. into City Light's plan to increase the height of Ross Dam by 122 feet.

The public utility district owns dam in Washington state, south of Hope, would flood an additional 5,400 acres of B.C.'s Skagit Valley, 100 miles southeast of Vancouver on the United States-Canadian border.

Mr. McGeer said former minister Robert E. Sommers would not sign the contract in 1933, because he thought it unfair to B.C.

At his Parkaville home, Mr. Sommers verified Mr. McGeer's statement and said he thought B.C. should be entitled to 30 per cent of the electricity generated from any water storage within B.C.

When City Light would not agree to the proposal, he refused to sign the agreement.

The present forest minister, Ray Williston, signed the agreement with City Light in 1967 for a $35,000 yearly rental fee.

Mr. McGeer said he estimated the potential of B.C.'s income under a 50-50 scheme at more than $830,000 yearly.

"This is about 18 times the amount signed for by the present government, he said.

Dr. Bert Brink, a natural scientist at the University of British Columbia, said that the Skagit Valley is such a rare and unique mosaic of plants and wildlife, that no price could be placed on it.

James Bay Industry To Face Strict Rules

LEBEL-SUR-QUEVILLON, Que. (CP) — Victor Goldbloom, Quebec minister responsible for the environment, said Sunday that the ecology of the James Bay basin will be protected by strict new provincial regulations.

He said that industries expected to move into the northwest sector of Quebec with the giant James Bay hydro project will have to respect a new set of pollution-control guidelines.

Mr. Goldbloom was speaking to a regional Liberal party convention in this community 400 miles northwest of Montreal.

He said the government would exercise tight control over development of the project to maintain proper ecological balance, and promised that "this virgin territory" would not be spoiled through pollution of water resources.

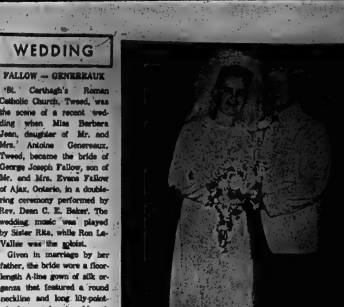
Little Sandra Genereaux, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

She was attired in a floor-length gown of yellow nylon over taffeta and carried a corsage of gardenias. The bridegroom and flower girl wore garlands of daisies in their hair.



The bridegroom was attended by Gerard Kehoe as best man, while the ushers were Kent Johnson of Sudbury, cousin of the bride, and John Fallow of Ajax, brother of the bridegroom.

Dinner for 60 guests was held at the Stoco Lake Hotel followed by an evening reception at the Elsevir Community Hall.

Guests were received by the bride's mother, who chose a two - piece ensemble of mauve nylon and lace, with yellow accessories. She carried a corsage of yellow 'mums.

The bridegroom's mother wore a two - piece double knit ensemble in turquoise with white accessories. She carried a corsage of pink 'mums.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Kingston and Watertown, the bride wore a yellow knit suit, white coat and brown accessories. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Fallow will reside at 106 Kingston Road, Pickering, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Max McCann

McCann – Crawford

Ann Nehushtai, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Crawford was united in marriage to Maxwell Harry (Max) McCann, son of Mrs. M. McCann and the late Mr. McCann at a ceremony held in the Centennial Free Methodist Church on May 22. The officiating clergyman was Rev. V. Stonehouse who was assisted by Rev. R. B. Warren. Organ music was played by Mrs. Evelyn Perry while the soloist was Lloyd Smith.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore floor length gown of lilpoda with lace decorating the round neckline, long sleeves and front panel. The skirt fell in an A-line while the detachable cathedral train flowed from the waistline. The seven tiered shoulder length veil was held in place by a headpiece composed of flowers and seed pearls. The wedding ensemble was made by the bride herself. She wore white satin slippers and carried a cascade of pink roses and carnations.

Miss Nancy Crawford, sister of the bride who was maid of honor wore a floor length dress of Swiss dotted nylon designed similarly to that of the bride but with panels at the waist and neck and short puffed sleeves. Her headdress was a veil and matching bow. She carried a nosegay of shasta daisies accented with pink tinted carnations.

The bridesmaids Susan Crawford, the bride's sister and Donna Doyn were dressed identically to the maid of honor but in blue and yellow respectively.

Miss Debra Crawford, the bride's flower girl was Elizabeth Blair's little sister who was dressed identically to the other attendants, but in green. The ring bearer little Blair Harnell carried the rings on a white heart shaped pillow edged with lace and white ribbon streamers.

The best man was David Patterson while the ushers were Robert Crawford the bride's brother, Francis Harnden, Melvin Johnson the bridegroom's cousin.

At the reception held in the lower auditorium of Westminster United Church, guests were greeted by the bride's mother whose brown lace dress with its beige pleated skirt and long full sleeves was enhanced by a wide brimmed straw hat and brown accessories. Ivory gloves and a corsage of talisman sweetheart roses completed her costume.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother wearing a blue dress and jacket ensemble of knitted fortrel with a white hat and accessories. Her corsage was of pink sweetheart roses. Rev. V. Stonehouse was the master of ceremonies at the reception and G. Bryce Ball was toastmaster.

The newly married couple left for their wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Detroit and the Northern US, the bride in a brown long-sleeved jersey dress with a matching sleeveless beige striped coat. She wore beige accessories and a corsage of orange carnations and button 'mums.

Upon return the couple will live in Kingston.

Ann Landers

Young People Query Symptoms of VD

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 16 and I depend on your column to learn many things I can't ask questions about. Recently you printed a letter about V.D. You described the symptoms of gonorrhea and syphilis.

A bunch of us kids were talking about that column and no one knew for sure if it is possible to get V.D. any other way besides sexual intercourse. Will you please tell us? — DUMB IN ARIZONA.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ARIZ: The answer is yes. It is indeed possible to get V.D. without having sexual intercourse.

First, gonorrhea: This infectious bacteria can live only on a mucous membrane. The eye is the second most vulnerable spot. Gonorrhea of the eyes can be picked up by anyone whose eyes come in contact with the bacteria. A girl can get genital gonorrhea from heavy petting if her partner is infected — and remain a virgin.

Syphilis can be picked up by anyone who has an open cut or sore if that sore comes in direct contact with the secretions of an active lesion of a syphilitic person. Doctors have gotten syphilis in this manner. If a girl with an open sore or cut on her lip kisses a boy who has an active chancre on his lip or in his mouth, she can get syphilis.

I repeat: If anyone who reads this column suspects he has V.D., go to the City or County Health Department. You will be tested and treated free of charge.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My aunt has a habit that drives me out of my mind. Whenever she begins to recount the details of an incident, she gets snagged on some unimportant detail such as, "No it wasn't Helen's birthday, it was her wedding anniversary — or was it her son's Bar Mitzvah? Come to think of it is was her birthday because I remember the cake with all the candles and everyone sang . . ." By the time she decides when it was, everyone has stopped listening.

Last night auntie started again with, "Was it Tuesday, or was it Thursday . . ." I thought I'd scream. Why do otherwise intelligent people do this? Surely they realize it doesn't make an iota of difference to the listener, and it ruins the story. Please tell me what's wrong with them. — U. OF CHICAGO.

DEAR U.: Self-interrupters are compulsive about getting the details straight for their own peace of mind. They become annoyed with themselves for not remembering — exactly — and are determined to figure it out, even though it ruins the story. Occasionally these people are saved from themselves by someone who says, "Get on with the story. It doesn't matter what day it was."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I do not drink alcoholic beverages nor do we serve alcohol in our home. Our religion forbids it. It was never a problem when we lived in a community where many others in our social circle adhered to the same practice.

My husband was transferred to Toledo recently. His colleagues have been wonderful and soon we must reciprocate their hospitality. While they are aware that we do not drink, my husband says they might consider us peculiar if we don't serve cocktails when they are our guests. I don't want to alienate him from his business associates, but I would feel guilty if I broke this tradition. Please advise. — LDS.

DEAR LDS: Anyone who considers you "peculiar" because you are faithful to a religious belief prohibiting alcohol is not worth having in the house: Stick with your convictions.

Salmon Coquilles Are Good for Luncheon

By MARY MOORE

Half of the charm of the dish I am giving you today is the individual shells in which it is baked and served. These are called coquilles and can be bought for a "dime a dozen" in Florida. In Canada, when you can find them, the price is much higher.

If you have individual shells use them for this splendid dish. If you do not have shells use individual ramekins or a large baking dish.

SALMON COQUILLES
(Serves 6)

1½ lb. (2 cups when coarsely flaked and packed) fresh cooked or drained canned salmon
1 tsp. instant or raw minced onion
1-18 tsp. pepper (or one or two twists from pepper grinder)
1 tsp. salt
1½ tbps. sugar
½ cup sliced mushrooms (or canned stems and pieces drained)
1 lge. peeled tomato cut into ¾" pieces
¼ cup butter
2 tbsps. flour
½ cup liquid (may be water or canned salmon or mushroom liquid or combination)
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 tbsps. sherry (optional but recommended)
1 tbsp. cream or milk or evaporated milk
1 cup fine soft bread crumbs
2 tbsps. melted butter (second amount)

Measure salmon into bowl and add minced onion, pepper, salt, sugar and mushrooms. Gently mix and combine in the ¼-cup butter for 2 min. Skim out and add to salmon mixture. To butter in pan add flour and blend. Stir in liquid of your choice, lemon juice, sherry and cream or milk until thick. Add to salmon mixture. Spoon into six unbuttered individual "shells". Mix crumbs with melted butter and sprinkle evenly over top.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 15 — 20 min. or until bubbly around edges. Serve on hot plates but protect your fine china with folded tissue under each shell. Ideal for a ladies' luncheon if you can dig up enough shells.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By MARY BRYSON

When your preschoolers are driving you up the wall with their antics, consider the pacifying influence of water. Pop them into the tub with bubble bath, while you sit nearby and do your nails; let them frolic in a plastic pool or play with the hose turned to a gentle spray; give them a little bucket of water on the patio and let them bathe their dolls. Then rub them dry, zip them into sunsuits and they're ready for naps, lunch, or Daddy's homecoming.

Some Points For Mothers

By DORIS CLARK

Blessed is the mother who is never shocked: she shall receive confidences.

Blessed is the mother who teaches respect; she shall be respected.

Blessed is the mother who commends the good; she shall enjoy her child.

Blessed is the mother who gives simple answers to startling questions; she shall always be trusted. — Extract from "A Mother's Beatitudes"

* * *

Dear Doris: Unless I get help soon, my marriage is going right down the drain. Every day my husband and I start out politely enough, but it doesn't take long for us to start saying harsh things to each other.

We've only been married two years and now there's a baby coming. I hate to bring any child into this and I'd like to talk to somebody like you who would tell me what to do about it. — Disillusioned

Dear Disillusioned: So many break-ups are the result of misunderstandings. A social worker could help you see just what are the deep underlying dissatisfactions which make you and your husband bark at each other.

Mind you, this will take some work on your part. You can't just lay your problem on a counselor's desk and say, "Give me a hand for it". But you can be helped to air your problems, get understanding and some moral support in opening up the right kind of communication with your husband. Nobody ever said that staying in love — for a lifetime — was easy. But holding a good marriage is worth anything you can do.

In Belleville the agency where such counselling is done by trained social workers is Services of Hastings County, 311 Front Street.

* * *

Dear Doris: Our fellowship group (ages 12 to 14) is having difficulty in planning activities for the summer months. — God Bless You

Dear God Bless: What would you think of a Pollution Probe? This could mean collecting pop bottles (returnable types) and tin for possible re - cycling. Your town clerk can tell you about re-cycling facilities where you are.

There could be a Pollution Probe picnic, complete with hamburgers and all the trimmings, fire to be kindled from clean-up you do on roadsides, in stream beds, parks and public areas.

Jogging is good too, and your still can't beat a swimming party for good clean fun (especially if you take along the soap).

To L.K., A Reader, Mrs. J.B., E.M., and others: Readers will bless you for sending in the song: "May I Sleep in Your Barn Tonight, Mister?" It is a real oldie, and well remembered by some of our grandparents.

What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris is the first step towards solving your problem.

Residents To Mark Special Week

It was noted at the recent meeting of the Hastings Manor auxiliary that since the Mayor Dr. Russell Scott had proclaimed June 6 to 26 senior citizen's week, the auxiliary will mark that week at the Home.

Earlier, the president Mrs. Dorothy MacLean opened the meeting with a poem. All the sports were read and approved. The treasurer reported on cards sent to the sick, the coffee shop, tuck shop and birthday cards and flower bowls sent to patients in hospital. It was reported that 16 church organizations serve coffee, tea and sandwiches every afternoon and this is much appreciated by the residents.

Residents who had a birthday in June were treated to lunch in the dining room. Mrs. Alice Belnap, 94 and Mrs. Bedore, 100 years old, cut the cake. Tea was poured by Mrs. Kilpatrick and Mrs. E. Nickleson. The next meeting will be on June 14.

City Lawyer, R. Temple Addresses IODE Chapter

MARMORA — On May 27 in Delora commenced hall, the Maymora Chapter IODE hosted a gathering of members and a number of interested people from Delora and Marmora.

Guest for the evening was Mr. Robert Temple, introduced by Mrs. Grenville Mellon. Mr. Temple is the senior partner of the law firm Temple and Russell, Belleville.

During 1970 Mr. Temple met the sports committee in the Soviet Union in Moscow; following which he travelled extensively through Europe, including Siberia. It was during this trip that he took colored slides which he showed to the group and narrated on each one as he went along.

During an informal period following the show, he was asked many questions about the countries throughout which he and Mr. Russell toured.

Lunch was provided by the committee of Mrs. H. Mayoss, Mrs. J. Reynolds and Mrs. M. Wright, assisted by the IODE members from Delora village.

Regent Mrs. D. Ayler presided for the short business portion which followed. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Sid Demorest. In the absence of Mrs. H. Borland, the report on service was given by Mrs. H. Bleeker who also reported that she and Mrs. Park had packed a bale for the needy. Mrs. Bleeker read a letter that she had received regarding Provincial Services.

The education committee report was given by Mrs Gordon Bennest, noting a request which she had received from the PTA of Sacred Heart School.

Mrs. Ayler reported that she and Mrs. W. Regan had attended an area dinner at Miss Rose Spry's in Stirling. Plans for the forthcoming convention were made at this meeting.

St. John Ambulance Has Tips For Those Going on Vacation

TORONTO (CP) — Nobody goes to a cottage to sit around being alarmed at things that might go wrong. But summer and summer activities do sometimes involve people in situations where there is no medical help immediately available, and someone should know something useful to do fast.

The St. John Ambulance has tips available. And sources to back them up in many cases.

They have a free two-hour class in artificial respiration to teach techniques to use if someone has stopped breathing because of immersion in water, choking, shock, exposure or smoke inhalation.

They recommend starting this immediately without looking for help, without moving the victim unless it's necessary to protect him from more harm. Then, they add:

Put him on his back, put padding under his shoulders if there is a towel or coat available. Be sure his access to air is not obstructed. Pinch his nostrils and put your own mouth on his to form a tight seal. Blow into his mouth so his chest rises. Turn your head and watch his chest fall.

Take another breath and repeat every three to five seconds for an adult, a little more frequently for a child.

If the victim is a small child or an infant, only small puffs of air should be sent into his mouth to avoid damage to his lungs.

Casual meals and hot weather can combine with poor refrigeration and food handling to create food poisoning.

It usually shows in a few hours in nausea, abdominal pains or diarrhea. If the food was not clean, symptoms may start with a chill and develop into a fever.

The victim should be given simple hot liquids such as tea.

If the suspected source of food poisoning came from a store or restaurant, it should be reported to health officials who can take action.

If abdominal pains are severe, they might indicate some other medical problem that should be referred to a doctor.

You should be careful with water, also. If you are not positive it is safe for drinking, boil it. Ice cubes should be made from boiled water.

Someone who has drunk contaminated water likely develops ill suddenly, has a high fever and cannot keep solid foods down. He should be put to bed, given clear fluids and examined by a doctor as soon as possible.

Tanning should start gently with a 20-minute session, gradually increased. Late afternoon and early morning sun is kindest because ultra-violet rays are filtered through a greater depth of atmosphere.

Cold cream, olive oil, petroleum jelly or cool wet compresses ease the pain of sunburn. If it is severe, see your doctor.

Someone who has sunstroke may suddenly develop headache, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, cramps. He may collapse. His face is pale and sweaty and his pulse weak.

Get him into a cool place. If he is conscious, give him cool salted water to drink—half a teaspoon of salt to a pint of water. If he is cold, keep him comfortably warm and watch him for heat stroke.

Heat stroke is a dangerous condition that may come suddenly or develop from sunstroke. The body temperature may rise rapidly and it is imperative to lower it. Put the victim in the coolest place possible, remove his clothes, sprinkle him with cool water or wrap him in a wet sheet and fan him.

When his temperature drops, put him in a dry sheet and continue to fan. When he recovers, treat him as you would a sunstroke victim and keep him under observation.

An insect sting can be serious. If a child has an unsuspected allergy, the first warning may be a swelling and discoloration of a bite.

When an allergy is known or suspected, or for any stings or bites in the mouth, it is advisable to see a doctor.

If a stinger is visible, it can be removed by indenting the surrounding skin and scraping across it with a sterile instrument.

For an irritating insect sting, apply a paste of baking soda and a clean, dry dressing.

Church Groups

TABERNACLE UNITED HI-C GROUP

Tabernacle United Hi-C's did their own thing on Sunday as they prepared and presented a worship service with an appreciative congregation. They welcomed the Metro Folk Singers who sang in the modern tempo and led the congregation in the Service of Praise.

Bill MacKay, member of the Hi-C Group, gave the address, calling for closer communication and co-operation between all age groups within the church. He emphasized the need for a strong sense of responsibility within the thinking of young people especially as they formulate and present their contributions in the life of the church and society.

Other members of Hi-C taking part in the service were: Thom Stenson, Heather Grant, Barbara Goodfellow and Penny Twigg.

Bank of Montreal
The First Canadian Bank

At the Bank of Montreal, we try to look at things from your point of view. And everybody's different. That's why we try to be flexible about loans. Our managers consider every application on its merits.

Granted, you'll probably be asked a few stock questions about income or collateral. But your loan will be granted on the basis of what you yourself are like — not how many references you can give. This way, your branch manager gets to know you and is therefore in a better position to give advice, answer your questions, and perhaps set up a budget system for you.

Read how our managers handled certain loan applications. Your own situation may be similar. Or it may be different. In any case, when you talk to your Bank of Montreal manager, you can be sure you'll get the best advice there is. We want you to get your money's worth.

Three of our managers: What are their views on loans?

Bill Smoutar.
"I talked with a plumber who had been offered a partnership in a plumbing business. It was an excellent chance but he didn't think he could afford the necessary loan. We talked it over and decided that an increased mortgage on his home, plus a loan, would provide the capital he needed. He's now happily running his own business and doing very well indeed."

Ross Holmes.
"Having made 16 moves in 23 years myself, I understood when an engineer talked to me about his moving problems. For coping with the confusion of transferring his family, I issued a promissory note for $3,000 over 60 days. He bought furniture and paid all his bills. In 60 days, after he had settled in, he came back and we negotiated an easy repayment plan."

André Hétu.
"I enjoy helping young couples get started. They usually don't have much collateral but I think they're nearly always a good risk. Only yesterday, I talked to a young couple just setting up house. They wanted to borrow nearly twice as much as they needed. They could have landed in a lot of trouble. I'm glad I was around to show them what they actually required."

Railbirds Back

With Saturday night's first Belleville harness racing card of the 1971 season, chart-followers like Picton's Harry Ferguson were out in full force at the Fairgrounds. Some 1,100 spectators turned out to watch the Quinte Exhibition Raceway's seasonal debut.

Adams Has Latta Cold

Garnie Adams continued his one - man campaign to stamp out Latta scoring with a 9-0 blanking of the South Hastings League baseball team Saturday night.

The Plane's Concrete hurler, who threw a no-hitter against the same team in the league opener May 22, served only two hits this time, walking one batter and striking out ten.

Terry McTaggart started on the Latta mound, allowing two hits and four walks before giving way to Bob Smith in the third. The relief hurler was touched for four hits while striking out two batters.

Larry Lewis homered for Plane's, while Larry Adams had two singles and Ken Abrams, Bob Luffman and Garnie Adams one each. Keith Dickie with a double and Wayne Harrison with a single were the only players to hit safely for Latta.

Latta did some blanking of their own. Sunday with a 4-0 shutout win over the Reserve.

John Hill pitched a five-hitter for Latta, striking out ten batters and walking three. George Hill gave up only five hits and struck out 19 batters in a losing cause. The Reserve hurler walked three men.

Harrison singled twice for the winners with Mike Mulcloe, Duane Horton and Damon Richardson getting the other hits. Bowden had a pair of safeties for the Reserve.

Belleville hydroplane driver Tom Boulter got halfway to his goal in Sunday's Victoria Park powerboat race program before meeting a damp fate. Boulter won the first heat of B Stock racing, then dumped his leading boat and ruined a brand new motor in the second.

Gun-jumping Chops One in Four

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Sportswriter

Jumping the gun is frowned on in most sports. In powerboat racing it's not even tolerated.

About one of every four of the 65 boats entered in Sunday's fourth annual Harbor Hydroplane races met the traditional fate for hitting the starting line before the gun. They were "chopped" — immediately disqualified from further competition.

"That's one of the biggest challenges in boat racing — to hit that line at the precise moment," the Quinte Hydroplane Racing Club's Bill Boulter explained.

The strict starting regulation was most obvious in the first heat of C Stock competition when all seven entries — including Belleville's John Royle — were wiped out for crossing the starting line before the gun.

On the other hand, one local entry benefited from the rulebook. Rosemore's Denny Hogue was running fifth in his second heat, about the same as he had in the first, when all boats ahead of him were disqualified for over-eager starts.

Hogue's purple - decked 29 was declared heat winner, and the win gave the Rosemore mechanic enough points for an overall first - place finish.

Meanwhile B Stock driver Tom Boulter continued to have hard luck before hometown fans. Boulter, last year's top driver in his class in Canadian Boating Federation standings, handily won his first heat, but dumped on the first turn of the final.

The Bridge St. driver would probably have wrapped up the B Stock silver tray with a third place finish, but was going all out in front of the pack on the first turn when he went over.

As it turned out, Boulter's mishap went for nought. He was one of four drivers who were chopped for an illegal start.

"The block is cracked, and I just got—that engine two weeks ago," said a dejected Boulter, who has only managed one second - place finish in the four years hydroplane racing has been held off Victoria Park.

Veteran driver Doug Thompson of Bloomfield didn't have a worry in the world. He drove Bill Channell's Wellington B 'Alky" unit to a pair of easy front-running finishes hitting straightaway speeds approaching 100 miles ah hour on the calm mile - and - two - thirds oval harbor course.

Big Payoff on Opening Harness Card

Charlie Higgs Missed Best Bet

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

If only Charlie Higgs could bet!

As a driver in Saturday's second heat of the Quinte Exhibition Raceway's opening 1971 harness racing meet, Charlie was not allowed the privilege of making a pari-mutuel wager.

The Gananoque owner-driver reined Vickie's Bay Boy out at 20-1 and the six-year-old brown mare proceeded to head a field of seven to the wire and form half a $147.80 quinella payoff.

Belleville owner - driver George Stratton brought 24-1 longshot True Laird home second to form the other half of the healthy payoff, on which only six pari-mutuel tickets were sold.

"I wish I could bet," Charlie Higgs sighed when asked about his contribution to the lucky bettors' bankroll. "I could bet on my own horse, of course, if I was just an owner, and not a driver. But I got my licence a month ago.

The second heat win, in 2.17.3, was Higgs' ninth drive, but Vickie's Bay Boy has had her share of luck on the Belleville Fairgrounds track.

"She likes this track," said Higgs. "She ran four straight seconds for Doug Stacey here last year and won her fifth time out." The Belleville outings were among the best in the mare's 44-9 record in 60 starts last season.

The winning time was well off Vickie's 2.13 best set last year at Kingston, "but she's just working herself into shape," Higgs added.

Except for the six lucky quinella holders, the second race didn't hold as much excitement in store as several other heats on the 18 - race, opening card.

Pat Herrington reined George Thomas' Flying John home in the night's quickest pace, the 2.13 fifth, but was placed seventh and last for interference just before the ½ pole. Second - place finisher Mary Bing, owned and driven by Jim Cochrane of Colborne, was awarded her first win of the 1971 season.

Al Vance, one of the perennial leading drivers at the Belleville track, shoved his stable has another winner in the making by bringing four-year-old Beverly's June home in front of the night's first heat a 'maiden's' purse.

Tih 1,182 who turned out were treated to well handicapped heats, with photos asked for by the judges in four races. Opening night bettors pushed $22,145 through the pari-mutuels.

Three drivers in the tenth and final race escaped serious injury in a first-turn pileup involving Jan's Boy, Northwood Velvet, and Tripper's Boy.

Andy Bennji and Clark Newton received first aid treatment, while Walter Demille of Picton, driving his own Tripper's Boy, received out-patient attention at Belleville General Hospital. None of the horses involved was injured.

Mott Paid Price

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Allan Mott got a rude reprimand for a breach of golfing etiquette in Sunday's Opening Men's Field Day at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, but he gladly accepted the consequences.

The former club junior champion, impatient with a lagging foursome ahead on the short, par-four sixteenth hole, belted his approach shot over the group's heads.

Arriving on the scene, Mott found his ball jammed into the apron, apparently lately placed thusly by someone's heel.

Unrattled by the predicament Mott rimmed the cup with his chip shot for a sure par, one of 76 strokes that made him the eventual winner.

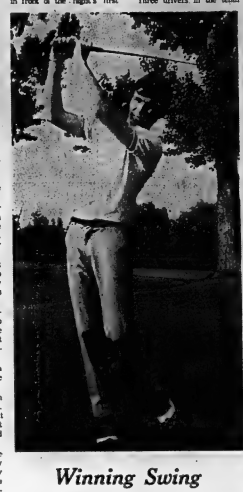
Another key shot came on the 220 - yard par - three closing hole.

"When I was coming down 18 I figured 75 would win it. It usually does. So that's what I was aiming for. But I hit the trap on the left," said Mott.

He blasted out short on the fringe. Then another nifty chip shot ("I always use my wedge") left Mott a mere three - footer to win his first-ever senior men's club event.

That yard - long shot was also the margin of victory. Mott's 36-40-76, five over par on the lengthy par 71 layout, was one stroke better than runner - up Bill Strachan.

The winner got off to a disappointing start, carding three straight bogeys as he began play in the 120-entry event. Birdies on two of the last three holes of the front nine and his later chipping accuracy preserved his one - shot edge.



Mott will lead his club's nine - man contingent, competing in the Traditional Quinte Cup matches with Napanee, Picton, and Trenton. Sunday's play was also a qualifying round for the Graham Cup, with the top 64 handicapped scorers eligible.

Winning Swing

This fine golfing form won Allan Mott top honors in Sunday's opening Men's Field Day at the Bay of Quinte Country Club. Mott's five-over-par 76 was the best score carded by any of the field of 120.

Lounge Sold Out

Judging from Saturday's first Quinte Exhibition Raceway meet of the season, harness racing fans like to mix business with pleasure.

A new licensed lounge area was a resounding success, with every last one of a stock of 192 pints of beer sold, and the liquor stock well depleted.

But the advertised lounge convenience of closed-circuit television ran into last-minute snags, and race organizers could not predict when it would be ready for regulars at the weekly Saturday night Fairgrounds race cards.

Fair Board director John R. Bush said a public address system permitting lounge customers to hear what was going on out on the track was vetoed because it might prove distracting to nearby mutuel ticket sellers.

Since the Belleville harness meets are now under the auspices of the non-profit Agricultural Society, any proceeds from the new lounge venture will be converted into facility improvements, $25,000 worth of which had been effected before Saturday's opening night of racing.

Trenton Gets Jump on Field

TORONTO (Special) — Things were really jumping over Trenton High School athletes at the all-Ontario high school track meet held at Toronto's CNE stadium.

Dennis Bowman added Trenton's second OFSAA gold medal Saturday by winning the junior triple jump with a leap of 45 feet, five inches. On Friday night senior long jumper Glen Milligan had captured his event to give Trenton their first gold.

Bowman, a 17-year old grade 12 student recorded a mark of 44' 2" to qualify for the finals of the triple jump, where he made his winning jump. He missed the finals of the long jump by only two inches with a leap of 20' 4" and finished third in his heat of the 110-metre hurdles, but failed to qualify for the semi-finals in that event.

"It's the first time that our area has ever won two events at OFSAA, I believe," related a happy Trenton coach, Peter Howe. "We don't stress winning performances at OFSAA because it's a pretty tough feat to accomplish, so when something like this happens it makes all the work worthwhile."

Another successful performance for Trenton was turned in by Grant Martin in the 3000 metre steeplechase. The first year junior placed fourth in the open event with a clocking of 10:44.4.

BCI middle distance runner Dave Simonds also recorded a fourth with a 1:56 effort in the finals of the senior 800 metres. Simonds was a victim of the draw in the 400 metres heats, running the third fastest time of all competitors, but failing to advance because both runners who bettered his mark had been placed in his heat. Only the first and second place finishers from each heat were able to advance.

Former Centennial Secondary School student Frank Johnston, now residing in the Toronto area, finished third in the senior 400-metres with a timing of 48.1 seconds.

Prince Edward Collegiate distance runner Paul Cory finished eighth in the 1500 metres with a clocking of 4:31 in the metric mile, but slipped to 13th in the 3000 metres.

Betsy Clifford Irons Out Differences with Ski Team

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Canada's best hope for a gold medal in the 1972 Olympics in Japan, Betsy Clifford, will lead a field of 60 aspirants seeking a place on the national Alpine ski team when training begins at Whistler Mountain in British Columbia this summer.

The 17-year-old ski star, who was inducted into the Canadian Sports Hall of Fame after she became the first 15-year-old ever to win a world championship in Alpine skiing, was suspended from the team in March for violating curfews.

Al Raine, Alpine program director who suspended Miss Clifford, said at the Canadian Ski Association's annual meeting over the weekend that differences of opinion between Miss Clifford and the CSA have been sorted out. The suspension had been for the remainder of the ski season.

Also joining the summer training team will be Judy Crawford of Toronto.

"We're still a couple of years away from winning any medals in the men's events, but our girl's team has so much depth any one of three or four could capture an Olympic medal," Raine said.

To give the men advanced training in international competition, the CSA decided to send two of its best Alpine skiers, Reto Barrington and Jen Hunter of Calgary, to train with the French national team in France at the end of the summer.

The CSA and the United States Ski Association announced at the meeting Saturday that a new series of competitions in the two countries will begin this year.

The new program, for Nordic skiing, will be called the Trans-Am series and will involve Canada, the U.S. and Japan. Ski officials hope to develop North American talent in the Nordic events, jumping and cross country, to strengthen their international representation.

Ron Richards, chairman of the CSA jumping committee, announced that a four-man Nordic demonstration team will travel across Canada beginning this year to give ski clinics in elementary and secondary schools.

The CSA also adopted new specifications for advertising and trademarks on equipment that will reduce by about one third the size of commercial lettering permitted on skis, boots, bindings and poles.

As well, no visible commercial identifications are to be permitted on the exterior of clothes, uniforms, helmets, gloves or goggles.

Theodor Bay lawyer Gavin Young was elected president of the CSA, replacing Scott Fennell of Toronto.

Fregosi Not Too Crippled To Kill Red Sox

Jim Fregosi, California Angels' veteran shortstop hobbled by a foot injury most of the season, was a key man in Sunday's 5-3 victory over Boston that extended the Red Sox skid lastly in California's 3-2 triumph Saturday, socked his third homer Sunday and later singled and scored the Angels' to seven defeats in nine games and left them 1½ games behind Baltimore Orioles in the American League-East Division.

JIM FREGOSI

Fregosi, who fielded brilliantly in the second game of a doubleheader with Boston, connected with two on and two out in the fifth inning off loser Ray Jarvis, 2-3, to break a 3-3 tie. Fregosi's homer was his first since May 16.

Rick Reichardt opened the fifth with a single and Jarvis walked Alex Johnson before Fregosi connected for his fifth homer.

Jarvis had pitched shutout ball for four innings before Fregosi's blow.

Jarvis, who had a 3-0 record against the Angels this season, was relieved by Sparky Lyle after Fregosi's homer.

Lyle, who pitched 3 2/3 innings of hitless relief, was the winner in relief of Clyde Wright, 5-5, who went the first five innings.

Boston scored all its runs in the first inning off Wright on Reggie Smith's two-run homer.

Fregosi's fourth-inning single scored Leon Gilbert with the Angels' first run.

Fregosi's homer was the first of the season for the Angels' veteran shortstop who had been hobbled by a foot injury most of the season.

Metros Win First

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Metros inflicted grave humiliation on Atlanta Chiefs in reaping the benefits of their first North American Soccer League victory Sunday while in Montreal the fans imbibed in some nasty official baiting as the Olympics played a 3-3 tie with St. Louis Stars.

In the only other NASL action Sunday, Rochester Lancers and Washington Darts played to a 3-3 standoff.

Saturday night, Dallas Tornados blanked New York 2-0.

The Metros, playing in their first NASL season, were trailing 1-0 going into the final 10 minutes of play when they exploded before 9,114 fans.

Brian Talbot, the 17-year-old sensation, counted twice and Neil Rioch added the other to more than offset Chiefs' Barry Lynch who tallied a penalty shot.

Toronto's record includes four losses and three ties.

Montrealers took exception to a penalty call by referee Tom Bell in the dying moments at the Autostade. St. Louis capitalized on Bell made a hasty retreat with the help of players from both teams.

Olympics dominated first-half play and carried a 2-0 lead on goals by Sergio Settin and Joel de Oliveria. The Montrealers enjoyed several good scoring opportunities in the second half, but lacked polish around the St. Louis goal.

St. Louis finally hit the scoreboard with a 2-1 lead over New Drago Popovic heading the ball past Olympics' goalie Kieron Baker to set the stage for Fuls' late heroics.

At Dallas, Tom Youlden and Kirk Apostolidis were the marksmen.

Pass Catcher leads the field to the finish line followed by Jim French in the running of the Belmont Stakes Saturday at Belmont Park, Canonero II at this point is running third with Bold Reason making his bid. # Pass Catcher Passed By

NEW YORK (AP) — Pass Catcher is the Belmont Stakes winner but the talk of the thoroughbred racing world still is Canonero II, and the talking that counts is that of lawyers and accountants.

The Kentucky-bred pride of Venezuela, whose Triple Crown bid ended with a fourth-place finish in Saturday's Belmont, will almost certainly be sold-in fact, there have been reports he has been sold but they have been denied by owner Pedro Baptista.

An associate said Baptista would call a news conference when a deal is made and would not have any statements before that.

The other topic of conversation concerning Canonero II, besides his imminent sale, continued to be his fitness.

Trainer Juan Arias revealed Sunday that a week before the Belmont he had considered not running the colt because of a skin rash and an infection in his right hind foot. But Arias said Canonero II responded to treatment and was healthy for the gruelling 1½-mile race.

However, the trainer did feel that the rash and infection affected Canonero II in that it caused the colt to miss two days training a week before the race.

Perhaps the most notable thing about Pass Catcher's victory, except for the impressive way it was accomplished, was the lack of attention it brought the winner, trained by Eddie Yowell and owned by Peter Kissel.

Pass Catcher won the Belmont by three-quarters of a length over Jim French, with Bold Reason third, a neck ahead of Canonero II who was bidding to become the ninth Triple Crown winner and first since Citation in 1948.

The son of All Hands-La Grue, who never had won a stakes, ruined the fiesta atmosphere created by the supporters of Canonero II in the New York racing record crowd of 81,035.

He took the lead from Canonero II just before the turn for home. The bay colt then shot into a five-length lead and withstood the surge by Jim French to win in 2:30 2-5 for the 1½ miles.

He also withstood a foal claim to earn $97,710 from the richest Belmont purse of $162,850 and return a whopping winning mutuel of $71.

A late entry, Sense a Fear, owned by Steve Stavro of Toronto, finished last in the 13-horse field. Good Behaving, with Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., in the saddle, was 11th.

Following Canonero II under the wire in their order of finish were: Epic Journey, Purse Finder, Salem, Twixt the Axe, Highbinder, Royal J. D. Good Behaving, Adobe Ed and Sense a Fear.

There was a $275.60 exacta payoff on the 4-1 combination of Pass Catcher and Jim French, a $1,555.20 handle, including exacta betting, on the Belmont for a world record for a single race without advance betting. One bettor dropped $10,000 on the favorite in betting with New York's Off-Track Betting Corp.

NHL Owners Debate Change in Playoffs

MONTREAL (CP) — A new format for the Stanley Cup playoffs is expected to be a major topic at this week's National Hockey League's annual meetings.

The four-day annual meetings wind up Thursday.

Last season, the NHL adopted a system where the East and West Division semi-finalists crossed over, thus paving the way for an all-East or all-West division playoff.

Prior to the 1970-71 season there was no cross-over, therefore a then-weaker West Division contested the final series aginst a member of the East Division.

It now is proposed that while the current cross-over formula remain, divisional pairings for the playoffs be changed.

Under the present setup, the first and third teams and the second and fourth in each division play each other in the quarter-final round.

The proposal would match the first and fourth and second and third teams in each division in quarter-final matches, with the inter-divisional cross-over remaining for the semi-finals.

Also to be discussed by the governors is whether to increase the remuneration given annually for the Stanley Cup playoffs, final standings, trophy winners and selection to the league's all-star teams.

Individuals on winning teams in the Stanley Cup quarter-finals and semi-finals get $1,250 for each round with the losers in these rounds getting $1,500. Individuals on Stanley Cup winning clubs get $3,000 each with the losers each getting $1,500.

Each player on the team finishing first in regular-season NHL competition in its own division gets $2,500. Second is worth $1,250, third $750 and fourth $500.

The board of governors will also have to decide whether or not to back NHL presidents Clarence Campbell in enforcing the powers they gave him to fine clubs whose players leave their benches to engage in mass onice fistic outbreaks.

Campbell slapped a $1,000 fine on Boston Bruins for their part in a late-season melee and tagged Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers with the maximum $5,000 sentence for a bench-clearing affair during their quarter-final playoff.

Both the Leafs and Bruins

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

have balked at paying the fines and according to the meeting agenda, the governors have been asked to hear and consider the appeals of the two clubs.

The regular drafting sessions will be held, starting with today's inter-league draft. In this draft, the NHL teams draw players from their Western and American Hockey League counterparts at a cost of $30,000 per player.

Following this session, the 14 NHL teams will file their protected lists for Tuesday's inter-league draft when the NHL teams pick left-over talent from each other at $40,000 a head.

Each team is allowed to protect 18 players and two goaltenders. The teams draft in reverse order of finish in the 1970-71 standings, which means that California's Golden Seals will have the No. 1 pick.

The most important and most interesting draft will probably be the universal draft of amateur players and Montreal Canadiens, by virtue of a trade with California, have the No. 1 choice. It is likely that Canadiens will pick right winger Guy Lafleur of Quebec Remparts, this season's Memorial Cup junior A champions.

Lafleur scored 130 goals and 79 assists for the Remparts in Quebec Junior A Hockey League play in the 1970-71 season.

We Stick To Hockey, Guns

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian hockey officials Friday rejected an invitation to return to international hockey on a limited basis.

Joseph Krycska, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said a decision against returning to international competition was made because "Canada still can't use its best players in world tournaments."

Krycska and Charles Hay, president of Hockey Canada, made the announcement after a meeting with John (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

Ahearne, president of the International-sanctioned plan which would permit a Canadian team, which could include professionals, to play a series of fall exhibition games against European teams, and enter a team of amateur and reinstated professionals in the B pool of the world championship tournament next spring.

Hay said Canada's counter-proposal was for a round-robin tournament a g a i n s t Russia, Czechoslovakia and Sweden in Canada this fall. Canada would have used pros, but Ahearne turned the proposal down.

The Ahearne plan called for a visit by Swedish and Russian teams to Canada in September, with the Canadian team going to Sweden, Russia and Czechoslovakia in December.

For the series in Canada and the return games in Sweden and Czechoslovakia, Canada would have been permitted to use professionals for the Russian tour.

Canada would have had to win the B pool of the world championships in 1971 to advance to the A pool and competition against Russia, Sweden and Czechoslovakia in 1972.

Baseball Minors Clean Up

Belleville Minor Baseball Representatives spent the weekend making their eastern Ontario baseball loop painfully aware of the city's presence as they swept all six games played.

The CNR Yardmen midgets had the toughest time, winning a 5-4 decision over Whitby Sunday.

Dale Bamber fired a three-hitter for Belleville, blowing down 18 on strikes and walking five batters. Bob Moore paced the Belleville attack with a pair of singles, while Danny Lupenette's double was the only extra base hit in the game.

The Legion 90 bantams produced some potent hitting in their contests downing Port Hope 15-10 Friday and coming back with a 25-11 win over Whitby Sunday following day.

Big batting guns in the win over Port Hope were the Mike McLelland with three singles and Brian Turner and Greg Cronkright with two singles each.

The Conductors and Brakemen peewees took a pair of 10-3 wins hailing Cobourg Saturday and then coming back to down Lindsay by an identical count the following day.

Clyde Routley spun a three-hitter in the victory over Cobourg, setting ten batters down on strikes and walking six.

The Towers tykes got fourhit hurling from Dale McTaggart to stop Bowmanville 13-3. McTaggart whiffed ten batters and walked four in pitching the win. He was backed by Ken Revoy with a double and two singles and Paul Richardson and Bruce Hall each with a pair of hits.

In the only house league contest, Golden Arrow Pharmacy stymied their League 90 counterparts 15-7.

Soule Not Quite Perfect

Tim Soule wasn't perfect Saturday, but don't try and tell that to the O'Neil Stationery squires.

The Belleville Minor Softball Association hurler walked one batter to narrowly miss a perfect game as his Ernie Tuck Appliance teammates took a 20-0 decision to beck his no-hit effort.

Soule set 12 batters down on strikes, while also getting for his only free pass of the game.

In minor softball action Sunday, Woodland Dry Cleaners pewwees smashed Wm. Belch and Son 20-3.

Bill McQuaid had a grand slam homer and a two-run triple for Woodland, while Mark Wilson accounted for all his team's scoring with a three-run homer.

UIC Snips Morch String

One run decisions were the order of the day in Industrial Softball action this week-end, but the Unemployment Insurance Commission squad wasn't taking orders from anyone.

UIC came up with a big 10-3 win over the previously unbeaten Morch Mariners to remain undefeated themselves in Industrial action this season.

Bernie Coughlan went the route for the winners giving up seven hits and three walks, while fanning four Morch batsmen. Wilson Bulpit started for the Mariners lasting four innings before giving way to Glen Barberstock. The pair served up 11 safeties and three walks, while striking out seven batters.

Bill Healy cracked a double and triple for UIC, while Ty Collins had a single and triple and Kaye McQuaid three singles.

Card Construction came up with two runs in the final inning to edge the firemen 7-6.

Paul Sharpe threw a five-hitter to get the win walking six and whiffing four, while Perry Sole was tagged with four hits giving eight hits and fanning two batters, while not walking a man.

Union Carbide conceded their fourth consecutive win by scoring four runs in the final inning to stop Brooke Bond 19-7.

Ken Osborne gave up 12 hits, but only one walk for Union Carbide, striking out nine batters. Losing burler Bob Chambers served up 16 safeties, while walking one batter and fanning two.

Cliff Hinsperger socked three singles for the losers with Wayne Brown Sr., McKenzie and Wilson getting a pair getting two hits each.

Walsh had three hits and Bilham two for the losing Brooke Bond squad.

A five - run explosion in the bottom of the seventh carried The Intelligencer to an 11-10 win over Dobrey Steel-lite.

Dave Feeney fired six-hit ball for the winners, striking out four batters and walking five. Horwood took the loss, giving up 14 hits and three walks.

Bill Hoard hammered a homer and three singles to pace the Intell attack, while George Phillips collected a double among his four safeties.

Automatic Transmission Fluid Can Deteriorate Due to Heat

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"I drive a 1968 8-cylinder compact with about 70,000 miles on it. Not long ago I was driving back from a trip with my three children when, about 400 miles from home, my car started acting peculiar when pulling away.

"The engine would race up considerably before the car moved, and when it did take hold, there was a clanking noise. I drove to the nearest garage and they said it would need a transmission overhaul.

"My regular garage had checked the car before I made the trip and found everything in order. When I asked the out-of-town mechanic what could have caused the trouble, he told me the automatic transmission fluid had never been changed. I had no choice but let them go ahead with the overhaul, which cost me $340.

"When I got home, my regular garageman, who I trust and have known better with for years, told me that changing the automatic transmission fluid is not necessary. He said that, rather than a complete overhaul, replacement of a few parts worth only a few dollars, plus some minor adjustments, was likely all that was needed. Now I wonder which of them was right and would appreciate your comments." — Mrs. B. R., Peterborough

While many owner's manuals state that it is not necessary to change the automatic transmission fluid, this of course is providing the car is driven under normal driving conditions. But even at low mileage, if when stuck in mud or snow the engine is revved up and the transmission is savagely switched from low to reverse and back — a desperate attempt to get mobile, the fluid can quickly deteriorate, necessitating its replacement.

Idling the engine with the transmission in the "drive" position when bogged down in traffic for long periods, or holding the car when stopped on an incline by keeping the automatic transmission in "drive" and racing the engine can also raise the temperature of the fluid to a dangerous level, (Instead, use the brake to hold the car on a hill and place the transmission in neutral when stopped in traffic for long periods.) —

Even when you are reasonably sure the automatic transmission has not been abused, to be on the safe side I'm a firm believer in changing the fluid at least every 50,000 miles. Since your vehicle traveled 70,000 miles without a fluid change (and perhaps without the transmission being adjusted as recommended by the manufacturer), it could be that the transmission had reached the point where a major overhaul was needed. Of course this is something that no one could be sure about now that the repair work has been done.

However, the most likely cause of the engine revving erratically and rough gear changing or thumping noises as the transmission shifts up or down is low fluid level in the automatic transmission.

Many automatic transmissions are equipped with a vacuum - operated control known as the modulator valve. While this valve is worth only a few dollars, it's failure can result in the engine's vacuum drawing the fluid out of the transmission. Your regular garageman may have had this valve in mind when he said that probably all that was needed was replacement of a few parts worth only a few dollars.

Disabling Illness Is Test of Pluck

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I get these headaches about once every three months. They knock me out for a day and almost drive me out of my mind. Sometimes I get so dejected I wonder what's the use of living. I hate to keep on taking aspirin for these attacks. — Mr. M.

• • •

COMMENT: Perhaps reading the following man's profile will work better than aspirin. I admire courage wherever I find it. Physical courage, yes. Courage of the spirit, even more. I have been privileged to observe a man who has both.

He is 43-year-old Harry Deal. He speaks softly, smiles easily and reveals a powerful set of shoulders and back muscles. Apparently helpless in a wheelchair, his cheerful disposition, ready conversation and vigor of spirit neutralize any feeling of pity one might have for him.

you agree, Mr. M.? Thinking about how the disabled bear up so courageously makes one

I say "apparently helpless" because he refuses to submit and surrender to his disability. He plays regular basketball, bowls with an average of 145 and collects tickets at the University of Miami Hurricane's baseball field.

Born in Philadelphia and in the Air Force for two years, he got out without a scratch — until disaster struck him down at the age of 28.

While working as a tree surgeon he fell from a tree and broke his back. He remained in Boston City Hospital for almost two years. For a livelihood he sells mail order shoes to support a family of wife and six children. (He now has eight grandchildren and three boys out of the service.)

• • •

I have never heard him utter one word of complaint. Nothing about "tough luck" or self-denigration. "I can't complain about anything," he says. "Everyone treats me well. I've always done everything I ever wanted to do since I've been paralyzed. I have been all over the country. I've met more people since I've been hurt than I could have if I'd still been doing tree work."

When disabling illness strikes there is no greater test of one's mettle and pluck. Occasional headaches more bearable.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've just finished reading your column in which "Mrs. S." wrote about her little 3 year-old daughter having to go to hospital for cystic fibrosis treatment. Mrs. S. wanted to go with her, but the hospital refused.

Your advice that she find another hospital that permits parents to stay with a young child were certainly sound. We, too, had a daughter with cystic fibrosis. Even though she had a private nurse our doctor insisted I stay with her.

Emotional problems play a big part in a child's life during illness. When the mother is there to give comfort, the child can face discouragement and pain more bravely. I would never have forgiven myself if I hadn't insisted on staying with her. — Mrs. B.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our 19 - year - old son doesn't want to consult a physician. He says that every few weeks his arm, hand and shoulder become numb. His vision becomes impaired and he gets a severe headache. These feelings last from 15 to 30 minutes. What kind of doctor would you recommend? — Mrs. R.

COMMENT: First an internist. Later on your doctor may advise that he see a neurologist.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 8

Your birthday today: This year is a vigorous period of trial and error, change and growth of spirit, sometimes restless searches for elusive perfection, and experiences. Much that you had thought settled and done with comes alive with little or no encouragement.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Stay with well - proved methods, at least during the morning; then develop a creative thought. Caution and courtesy in travel are more essential than ever.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Past experience proves very helpful now, as your sense of obligation comes under test. Conservative approaches work out better than expected, but may take some time to show results.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Questions put to you may sound silly, but underneath there really is a great need to know, including something more than just facts and figures.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): If you are apt to lose your temper, today's incidents are most likely to set you off. Hold on, so you can more effectively counter whoever annoys you.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Go it alone, at least in spirit, for this tangled day. It is as good a time as any for weaning overly dependent associates. In financial matters you may have to you in good stead in a probable clash of personalities and programs. There's less point than usual for getting personal, more reason than ever for taking definite action where you are sure of what you want to do.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): What you do and say changes the image people hold for you. Where you are sure of your facts, press vigorously for your goals. Exert your persuasive effort in calm candor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Expect progress in your work and the chance to make a critical connection that makes all the difference in quite a range of projects — but no thanks for doing it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Creative projects require special decision. Be thorough and try not to show impatience. Going along with what comes naturally brings you merriment and, a little further on, a peak of romantic interest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Depend on nothing mechanical or automatic where you are involved. Concentrate on matters which do not require close collaboration, or can be done singlehanded.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your plans and decisions run collision courses with those of others. Patience and forbearance are needed if you are to prevail within a reasonable period.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Recent experience stands

Commons Begins Morning Sessions to Clean Up Work Backlog

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons, in a sitting beginning three hours earlier than usual, resumes study today of a bill to establish the Canada Development Corp.

The sitting at 11 a.m. EDT instead of the usual 2 p.m. is part of an all-party agreement last week to extend sittings on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays this week and next to clean up work before the two-month summer adjournment expected Wednesday, June 30.

Most of the legislation to be studied before the summer break will be dealt with in the next two weeks.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson has announced that he will bring down his budget shortly after 8 p.m. Friday, June 18.

After the budget is presented, the Commons is scheduled to spend most of the remaining sitting days on the budget debate which, under House rules, is limited to six days. The House does not sit on June 24, St. Jean Baptiste Day.

Mr. Benson, has said he will be presenting government's tax-change proposals at the same time as the budget. The legislation, however, would be presented for first reading only which would give MPs and the public the summer to study the proposals before they go deeper in the legislative mill.

The Commons is expected to resume Tuesday, Sept. 7, the day after Labor Day.

Part of Tuesday this week will be used to debate a New Democrat motion of non-confidence in the government.

The motion will take place under rules that from time to time allow the opposition parties to choose the subject for debate, normally the prerogative of the government.

The Canada Development Corp. bill is at the report stage, the step before third and final reading. Although the measure has been mostly opposition, particularly from the New Democrats, it is expected to pass this week because of the government majority and be sent to the Senate.

The Senate, meanwhile, is adjourned until Tuesday night. It has before it the legislation passed by the Commons last week to increase the salaries and tax-free expenses of MPs and senators.

It also will be breaking for a summer recess at the end of June and if the usual practice is followed the vacation will be a few weeks longer than the recess planned by the Commons.

Other legislation before the Commons includes several farm bills, an unemployment insurance bill and a measure to increase the salaries of federally appointed judges. Some of these measures could also come before the House later this week.

Also expected any day now is a government policy paper on defence.

Adept House of Windsor Treads Gingerly Through Bad Patch in Its Public Relations

With controversy boiling in Britain about the Queen's request to Parliament for more money, Kenneth L. Davis, veteran Associated Press correspondent who has been in London since 1960, takes an American's-eye view of the monarchy.

By KENNETH L. DAVIS

LONDON (AP) — The late ex-king Farouk of Egypt once quipped: "In 10 years there will be only five kings—the king of England and four others in a deck of playing cards."

Britain still has a queen and a few other monarchs are left but Farouk had a point: Monarchs in the 20th century are in a precarious position.

Today's monarch must keep busy lest his country find it can get along without regal protocol and yet he has to guise how conspicuously he can consume without sparking envy.

The House of Windsor is adept at the game of public image. At present, however, it is treading gingerly through a bad patch as a result of a request by the Queen of Parliament for more money. Anti-monarchists would like to think the throne is in slight jeopardy, as a result, but any bookmaker would give you odds that that assessment is not correct.

Britons who care enough to choose up sides mirror the public division in letters to newspapers.

"Let those who worship the Royal Family subscribe toward the Queen's rise in allowance," said F. Webster of County Durham.

"The Queen should have a pay rise," said Mrs. Dawson of Leeds. "I wouldn't swap places for all her money. I bet she would love to be free like me and go to the club and play bingo."

"If we can't afford free milk for our kiddies we can't afford any increase to a very wealthy family," said F. Donovan of Manchester.

"I live in poor circumstances, can afford only one hot meal a week," said Mrs. A. Eustace of London. "If you wish to reward me for still being British send the money to the Queen to help her maintain the traditions of this country."

Passed down, many Britons would be hard-pressed to express its benefits. But royal contributions seem to be at least cash and color. The pomp and pageantry surrounding the court lure tourists. The royal personalities are rated good at selling British goods abroad, by indirection.

The stately processions and protocol brought down from ancient years doubtless lend color to the lives of he people tied to factory or flat.

As a tradition, the monarchy lends a sense of continuity, of an anchor that doesn't drag with each ill wind.

The monarchy costs Britain a minimum of about $6.5 million a year. Even without a monarchy much of this money would have to be spent on such protocol items as the exchange of state visits. Somebody else would have to be chief of state if the Queen wasn't.

The government annually since 1952, when she became Queen, has provided Elizabeth with £475,000, or about $1.14 million.

The royal yacht Britannia costs $1.2 million a year, and the Queen's flight of airplanes and helicopters needs $1.44 million.

The post office spends $120,000 for telephones and $14,400 for postage.

The Queen Mother, Prince Philip, Princess Margaret and the Duke of Gloucester together receive $452,000 a year. The rest of the royal relatives receive allowances from the Queen or they live on their own resources.

The Queen is perhaps the third wealthiest woman in the world after Queen Juliana of The Netherlands and dowager Begum Aga Khan. Estimates of her personal fortune range widely. Only the Queen and Coutts, her banker, know the truth, but something around $144 million appears to be reasonable.

Aside from this fortune there are hereditary revenues from the Duchy of Lancaster, 52,000 acres of land from industrial Lancashire and Yorkshire to property on London's Carnaby Street. This brings an income of around $376,000 a year, tax free.

The royal art collection is estimated to be worth almost $300 million. There are also the Queen's personal jewels, 200 litres of precious stones. The royal stamp collection, 980 album pages of stamps, is reputed to be worth more than $1 million, $2,400,000.

The Prince of Wales gets the revenue, tax free, from the Duchy of Cornwall—more than $500,000 a year. Prince Charles takes only half that income, voluntarily giving the rest to the government.

The Queen pays taxes only on her private fortune. Her family doesn't pay inheritance taxes, so her personal wealth passes intact.

British Inflation Rate Third High

LONDON (CP) — For the second year running, Britain shows the highest increase in the cost of living of any industrial country except Japan and The Netherlands, says a survey of executive salaries and living costs in Britain, Canada and six other countries.

The increase of nine per cent calculated by Associated Industrial Consultants in their eighth annual study is closely in line with the 8.8-per-cent rise noted for Britain by the International Monetary Fund.

The IMF study, published in Washington last week, put Canada at the lower end of the inflation scale with only a 1.9-per-cent rise in consumer prices for the year ended March 31. The British survey assessed Canada's increase in the cost of living at three per cent.

The British management consultants, surveying 30,000 executives in 16 job classifications from accountant to company general manager, found the average British executive improved his earnings by 10 to 12 per cent in 1970-71.

Canadian executives showed only a 5.5-per-cent increase, but on a straight-salary comparison the report notes that British and other European businessmen have a long way to go to catch up with their North American counterparts.

The report examines salaries, fringe benefits, taxation and cost of living in Britain, Canada, the United States, France, West Germany, Spain, Australia and South Africa.

About 100 Canadian companies were studied, nearly all of them in Toronto and Montreal. Toronto, incidentally, is raked third most-expensive city after New York and Los Angeles in a table covering major centres in the countries of the survey, with the addition of cities in Belgium, Denmark, Italy and Australia, London ranks sixth and Paris seventh.

CMA Seeks Incentives

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Manufacturers' Association is devoting its 100th annual meeting to defining the proper relationship of Canadian business with government, communities, employees and foreign business.

The two days of discussion began today. Speakers include Prime Minister Trudeau, Donald S. Macdonald, minister of national defense, Buckminster Fuller, engineer and poet, and several top executives from major Canadian corporations.

A conference background paper from the 8,200-member organization says: "Three hundred years ago a London alderwoman said of his job: 'I'm helping Sir Christopher Wren to build a cathedral.' During the 1970 General Motors strike an autoworker said of his job: 'I fix seven bolts. Day in and day out, seven bolts.'

"There is growing acceptance of the concept that man's work should not be organized as though the creation of wealth were an appropriate end in itself."

A better paycheque may provide no incentive to individuals whose basic needs have been met.

"If lack of commitment to the company and its goals is a serious problem today, lack of commitment to our open competitive society with its free law and its goals is no less evident and certainly no less serious."

The paper says the roles of industry and government are changing.

"Will the economy of the future be literally a joint economy —a coalition of government and business? If private economic power becomes meshed with public political power, what about the traditional checks and balances of our democratic system?"

Mobutu Solves Student Riots

KINSHASA (AP) — President Joseph Mobutu of The Congo has ordered the closing of Lovanium University and the induction of all its 3,000 students into the army for a period of two years following a battle on the campus between student's and soldiers.

Radio Kinshasa said Sunday that five students were injured in the fighting last week. The incidents occurred after a group of students seized the university dean, Magr. Tharcisse Tshibangu, and buried an empty coffin draped in a Congolese flag in memory of students killed in a riot here June 4, 1969.

Picton Lockup Action Taken

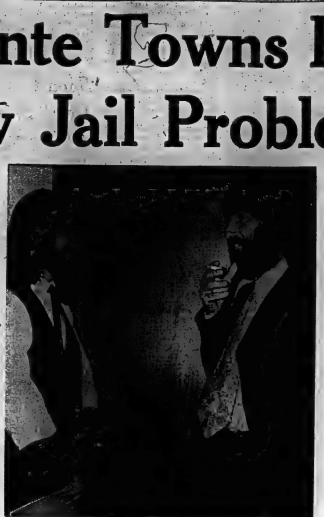
By Margaret Haylock
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Town councillors last night voted 7-2 against rescinding plans for construction of a $51,500 addition to the Picton Fire Hall, to provide a lock-up and town office facilities. Councillors thus rejected the pleas of a citizens' delegation that council take another look at the possibility of providing these facilities through renovations to the former Mary Street school.

"It's a decent choice is all I can say," muttered one taxpayer as he stalked from the council chambers.



Among the delegates to council were vice - president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce Merle Pearsell and Ronald Scott, a chamber member representing president, Bernard Bayburn.

Members of the chamber of commerce agreed at a luncheon meeting yesterday to send a two - member delegation to request council to seek a cost estimate for renovation of Mary Street School.

Picton reeve Albert Piroth said last night he has opposed the addition to the fire hall "from the onset" and insisted it was "a little bit ludicrous that council should suddenly throw Mary Street school out the door without knowing the basis of the cost estimate."

Councillors also voted down a motion to acknowledge an

Five Protest Groups Will Picket Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will be confronted by five groups of protesters during a visit to Toronto and Hamilton tonight and Wednesday.

Mr. Trudeau will be in Toronto to address the 100th annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association tonight and to officiate at the opening of the special Olympics for the mentally retarded Wednesday morning at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Two organizations, the Young Socialists and the League for Socialist Action, plan to picket his hotel to demand that the federal government open up universities during the summer for travelling young people.

They also want the government to provide funds for a model free university session for radical youth which they say is planned for the University of Waterloo Aug. 20-25.

A third group, the Vietnam Mobilization Committee, will also be outside the hotel to protest what is calls Canada's "complicity" in the Vietnam conflict.

In Hamilton Wednesday night, members of a local labor committee and a Young Socialists group plan to picket the hotel where Mr. Trudeau will attend the city's 125th anniversary ball.

Joint Paddy Wagon Okayed

By Roy Peacock
Staff Reporter

The city of Belleville and the town of Trenton will co-operate in a joint proposal for the transportation of prisoners to and from the new regional detention centre at Napanee, which opens tomorrow.

This was revealed yesterday at city council by Mayor J. Russell Scott when he said the police commissains of the two municipalities had agreed to lease a "paddy wagon" to be used jointly by the two centres.

The "paddy wagon" will be manned by Belleville police personnel with two additional constables and a driver to be hired for the purpose.

Costs will be shared between the two municipalities.

The "paddy wagon" to be leased for a two-year period will be sent to Toronto for renovations and will not be available for about eight weeks.

In the meantime Belleville Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie said prisoners would be transported to and from Napanee in one of the regular police cruisers.

Radio communication details between the vehicle and the two police departments have already been worked out, according to Police Chief Crosbie.

Moscow Proposes Pact To Keep Peace on Moon

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government announced today it is proposing a treaty governing exploration and use of the moon and has submitted a draft of the pact to the United Nations.

Tass news agency said Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko had asked Secretary-General U Thant to include the proposal on the agenda of the General Assembly meeting in the fall.

The draft, Tass reported, bars from the moon the "use of force or any other hostile act" and forbids the establishment of military bases, structures and fortifications, the testing of any types of weapons and the holding of military exercises are banned."

The draft also provides that exploration and use of the moon shall be carried out by means "ensuring the prevention of an unfavorable change in and pollution of the lunar environment."

It adds that states signing the treaty will do all possible to preserve "the life and health of man on the moon."

The treaty also rules out all territorial claims to the moon, saying the surface and the interior of the moon "cannot be the property of states, international inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations, national organizations, juridical or physical persons."

The draft calls for the signers to co-operate "on questions related to activities on the moon" and not to "create obstacles to the activity of other states on the moon."

"The signatory states must grant the right to persons in distress, who are on the moon and belong to the personnel of another signatory state, to take shelter in their stations, in their apparatuses, structures or equipment," the draft says.

HALIFAX (CP) — The general council of the Canadian Medical Association voted overwhelmingly today in favor of removal from the Criminal Code of any requirement that therapeutic abortion must be approved by a hospital abortion committee.

In effect the action, if carried out by Parliament, would leave it up to the patient, her doctor and the normal hospital rules and bylaws to govern termination of a pregnancy.

Removal of the Criminal Code requirement was moved by Dr. Bette Stephenson of Toronto, past president of the Ontario Medical Association as the general council continued debate on the abortion issue.

Refugees Bring Cholera to Outskirts of Fearful Calcutta

CALCUTTA (CP) — The menace of deadly, Asiatic cholera threatening this crowded port city of 7,500,000 deepened today with the news that 100 East Pakistani refugees now are infected in a temporary camp on the outskirts of Calcutta.

Twelve new cases of cholera were reported Monday and there have been 33 deaths—mainly infants and old men. How many succumbed to the gastro-intestinal disease itself is not known since many of the 40,000 refugees there are also suffering from exhaustion and malnutrition.

Cholera is still reported raging in epidemic proportions in other camps housing 4.5 million refugees in West Bengal and neighboring states.

Work is expected to begin today on a new camp for the refugees near Dum Dum airport. It is expected to house up to 20,000 men, women and children who now sleep beneath trees and bushes along the roads leading to the city.

Rumors spread daily that Pakistani agents from across the border 20 miles away are emptying bottles of cholera germs into the local water supplies to make the epidemic spread faster.

A crowd of 500 persons beat a Moslem to death Monday at the Krishnagar railway station after a report that he had emptied a small bottle into a roadside well.

D. K. Ghosh, the district magistrate of Krishnagar, said the rivers are being polluted but by the bodies of cholera victims thrown in by relatives for quick burial.

He said that so many police were now deployed to guard the rivers against this that there is a shortage of police to enforce law and order.

Most of the cholera victims have been Hindus, who normally are cremated. But a shortage of firewood and fuel makes the traditional rituals impossible.

The district magistrate said he had ordered mass burial for at least 1,000 persons. Hindus and Moslems have been buried together in three mass graves in the Nadia district.

Ghosh estimated that by last Sunday, 1,078 persons had died of cholera in hospitals in the Nadia district and an equal number died along the roads and in villages.

About 75 new victims are admitted to hospitals each day, but with 4,800 cholera patients already under treatment, there is a shortage of hospital space.

There also is a shortage of saline water—cholera cases need at least eight quarts a day for three days—and of cholera vaccine.

Ghosh said he needs more medical personnel as well, that about 1,000 government employees are caring for approximately 500,000 refugees in the district.

The inoculation drive got a boost Monday with the arrival of two jet inoculation guns sent from London by the Outboard Group. Each can give 700 inoculations an hour.

Health Minister Dikshit told Parliament the response of United Nations agencies, such as the World Health Organization and the Children's Fund, was still not adequate. But there were signs of increasing awareness.

In Toronto, the Canadian-born Oxfam field director for East India described the cholera outbreak as "the worst disaster in history" and one that could have been avoided if the world had responded more quickly, with aid.

Raymond Cournoyer, a native of Quebec, said at a news conference Monday it is estimated that 10 million anti-cholera injections are needed, "more than the available world supply."

"If there is cholera, it is because the world has been too slow in providing aid. At this moment, very little money is coming into India."

Enough anti-cholera vaccine for 20,000 injections left Toronto Monday night on the first leg of an Oxfam of Canada flight. It is the entire supply available in Eastern Canada and due to reach India Wednesday.

Oxfam of Canada is launching a public appeal for $500,000 in Canada and hopes to raise the other half of the budget for the next 90 days in England.

The Canadian government has granted $2 million in aid to be channelled through the UN and the World Health Organization.

Mercy Flight on Way to India

LONDON (Reuter) — Thousands of tons of medical and relief supplies have started leaving Britain for cholera-suffering East Pakistan refugees who swarmed over the border into India.

British charities, which joined forces to speed up aid, began the massive task of airlifting cholera vaccines, saline solutions, food and shelter to Calcutta.

The first of five RAF flights to transport 75,000 pounds of supplies to Calcutta left late Monday night after Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home indicated that Britain is prepared to give an almost open-ended commitment for aid to the disaster area.

Five charities, Oxfam, Christian Aid, War on Want, the Red Cross and the Save the Children Fund also will launch a national appeal today on radio and television for funds to help Indian and Pakistan cholera victims.

The British government agreed to supply free vaccine and medical equipment to the charities organizing relief operations in India. This was to be over and above the immediate contribution of $2.4 million already made to the United Nations appeal fund and the $1.8 million in aid announced Sunday.

Town Not Obliged To Pay for Road

PICTON (Staff) — The town of Picton is under no legal obligation to compensate the McFarland Construction Company for building a paved road leading from Seymour Street to the Proctor-Lewyt plant.

Town solicitor Jack Ward last night told councillors a motion carried in February, 1952, stated the right - of - way should be purchased at a cost of $21,700. He added, this motion, in his opinion, represented only an expression of intent and no bylaw for acquisition or appropriation of the right - of - way was ever placed before council.

Council sought Mr. Ward's advice after receiving a letter from the McFarland Construction Company seeking "possible compensation" for the road leading to the Proctor - Lewyt plant.

The town solicitor reminded council the department of highways refused to make a subsidy payment for construction of the road because the town had not sought its approval in advance. He said there was no indication that work on the street was ordered by the town from a legal point of view. "Even so, the town would have no right to say that work done on private property," observed the lawyer.

The town's public works department has assumed the cost of snow removal on the road but it is located on private property. Mr. Ward stressed some steps should be taken soon to acquire the right of way by purchase, expropriation or assumption since it spans the balance of the property and the adjoining land on the northwest side of Hallowell township.

Mr. Ward said there had been meetings between committees of council and representatives of the construction company in 1961 and in 1963 and the town's possible participation in certain of the work discussed." Whether there is any moral obligation for compensation after these discussions is a matter for council to consider," observed the solicitor.

Little Help From Friends

Sidney Township tax officer Hugh Lyons helped Greek - Canadian Orthodox Community of Belleville and District Inc. members Peter Zegouras, right, and vice-president George Poulas draft a submission to Sidney Township Council. Mr. Zegouras and Mr. Poulas approached council last night to receive assurances their site for a proposed $100,000 church on Harder Drive was within zoning bylaws.

Goal of City's Greeks Is Nearing Reality

If all goes well, the Greek-Canadian Orthodox Community of Belleville and District Inc., could start construction on their church this year.

"I won't be a bit surprised if we get it started this year as soon as possible," Peter Zegouras told The Intelligencer at Sidney Township municipal offices last night.

Together with vice - president George Poulas, Mr. Zegouras appeared at council to receive assurances their site for a proposed $100,000 church at the corner of Harder Drive and Avondale Road was within zoning bylaws.

Council informed the two Greek community representatives that "there doesn't prohibit the construction of a church in that area" and no land spills are required because the total land parcel is being purchased.

Of major concern to the Greek representatives is the lack of water and sewer facilities to the site. Sidney Township agreed to forward a letter to Belleville city council making application for such services.

Costs for the church, which Mr. Zegouras hopes will include a high dome, will be "up to $100,000 by the time it is completed."

"We've been working on this since 1962," he said, "and we are about half way" to paying for the church.

The Greek community purchased a site on Dundas Street four years ago but did not have sufficient frontage to allow for construction of their facility and the land had to be disposed of, a new site had to be sought.

"Through the efforts of various Greek - raising drives, the families have slowly built up funds for their own place of worship. For several years, they have used the facilities of St. Thomas' Anglican Church for their special services such as those during the Greek Easter season.

But their own special place of worship has been a goal which may be realized in the near future. Mr. Zegouras told council negotiations for this deal could be concluded by the end of June.

Furthering fund - raising plans, on June 27, a special presentation of Greek culture will be presented in the Oddfellows Hall on 111 Bay Drive.

Dressed in ethnic costume, 20 professional Greek dancers from Toronto will perform 28 different dances to the accompaniment of a five - piece Greek band. Special pastries and food will be available at the new Oddfellows Hall for $6 per person. Seating capacity numbers 400 and tickets are rapidly being sold at this time.

Joint Meeting

Ontario Housing Corporation officials are meeting with local builders at, city hall tonight to consider builders' proposals for the construction of 74 additional family housing units for Belleville.

Mayor J. Russell Scott told council yesterday that the OHC has come to replies to advertisements seeking rental accommodation for occupancy until the additional rental units were constructed.

"Now they (the OHC) know that there is a definite shortage of rental housing in the city" commented Mayor Scott.

"Also at yesterday's meeting, council approved of an OHC resolution under which the Ontario Housing Corporation agrees to construct an additional 40 one-bedroom, geared-to-income rental units for senior citizens.

Festival Injunction Decision Tomorrow

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The fate of the Madoc township rock' festival slated for early next month is still undecided after a two-hour hearing in Supreme Court of Ontario this morning on an interim injunction sought by township council to stop the event.

Mr. Justice A. H. Lieff will hand down his decision at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Leon Quinlan, 27, acted in defence of LEJ Enterprises, the family company composed of himself, his brother James Jr. and his father, James Quinlan, sponsors of the festival on the Quinlan farm near Queensboro.

Madoc township council was represented by solicitor Bernard Hurley, Q.C., who told the court "none of the provisions of the bylaw (to regulate festivals) have been complied with".

The bylaw, passed April 21, two months after reports of the festival leaked out, was the basis on which the injunction was sought.

But, said Mr. Hurley, "disastrous results will ensue if the festival is held in such a small rural township with a population of 1,500.

"Irreparable damage would result if the festival proceeds," he said, and added the township was totally unable to control a crowd of this nature and criminal offenses would occur.

He mentioned the "fear of a small rural community" and this immediately" and said council anticipated the arrival of 30,000 rock fans July 2-5, a figure based on statements made by the Quinlans.

The bylaw to regulate public entertainments, festivals, and parades lasting longer than 24 hours, calls for payment of a $500 licence fee, a deposit of $125,000 cash to cover the cost of extra police protection in Madoc township, proof of liability insurance of $200,000 with the township as beneficiary, deposit of $5,000 cash, the amount estimated by the township as sufficient to restore building and grounds to their original state after the festival, and deposit of a written statement from the medical officer of health confirming that adequate provision has been made for public health of residents and festival fans.

The $125,000 required for extra police was estimated by Superintendent David E. Wellesley of the Ontario Provincial Police's district 9 with headquarters in Belleville.

Called to testify by the township solicitor, Superintendent Wellesley said his estimate was based on the cost of policing the Rock Hill Festival last year that drew 20,000 people. At that event, 300 police were in attendance and the actual cost was $106,000.

Because the Quinlan brothers had no lawyer, the judge compiled with their request to call witnesses, adding he noted that hearing of evidence in injunctions is "quite unusual but not irregular".

Leon Quinlan disputed the cost of police protection, saying that his family has no intention of paying the sum in advance. He estimated cost of extra police at $18,440 for 45 extra officers and said his company would be willing to pay for sum of about $20,000 after the festival.

He and his brother, he indicated, would be willing at any time to pay the $500 licence fee.

He presented a receipt for a $600 down payment on a public liability insurance policy and said he would pay the remaining $4,000 on the premises if the injunction was not granted. However, he could not present the policy in court.

Mr. Quinlan said the $5,000 cash deposit to cover the cost of repairing damage to public buildings and grounds was unnecessary because the cost of such restoration was already covered by the liability insurance.

He said he will take out a contract to provide 125 portable toilets and questioned the MOH's requirement that 400 be provided.

Mr. Quinlan charged the township with discrimination in seeking the injunction and said it was "stopping free enterprise".

The township, he said, "has gone beyond rules in discriminating against young people today.

"If this were an event to attract older people to the countryside for three days, it would not be trouble at all," he added. "This bylaw was passed to ban festival and for that reason only."

Mr. Quinlan said that if the injunction is granted, up to 10,000 kids will show up in Madoc anyway, and could incite a riot July 3".

If the injunction is granted, there will be no insurance to cover the township in case of damage, he said and no sanitary provision for the crowds he expects.

Mr. Quinlan told the judge that 5,000 tickets at $18 a piece had been sold between Montreal and London, Ont. Hotels, and the event sold them still retain the money, His family, he indicated, now has $2,000 invested in the enterprise and has borrowed $10,000 to pay for further preliminary expenses.

The Quinlans called witnesses to outline provisions they had made for the festival. The Rev. Donald McKeown, pastor of two churches in the Madoc district said ministers call the "Jesus People" said this group would put up young workers in the grounds to "give a Christian influence to the festival, and provide food, some medical personnel and counselling". The counsellors would be stationed at gate-ole on drugs, he indicated.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hurley on whether he anticipated people on drugs at the festival, Mr. McKeown replied "I anticipate this wherever I find young people gathered."

A representative of the Odessa Youth Centre said it's group has offered to bring in a group of young counsellors who have had experience with handling youths at such events.

Leon Quinlan told the court he intends to hire 30 security officers from a private firm to police the grounds during the festival.

OPP Superintendent Norman McComb of Toronto examined photographs of the rolling grounds of the Quinlan farm and said he had no idea how emergency vehicles could reach the area from the grounds.

There is only a single - lane road into the property, he said, and "it's a terrible experience at the Mosport festival in August, 1970, where the OPP assisted in the festival on the grounds. Questioned by the judge, he said the OPP can't assist in the festival in Madoc "because we don't have sufficient people and we couldn't leave and make an arrest and get people out because the crowds are hostile to police."

He described seeing 400 to 500 made people at the festival, "many of them openly marijuana and hashish for sale. "considerable alcoholic beverage and a number of people on bad trips.

"This is the only type of entertainment that gets a hospital on the grounds," the superintendent said.

Mr. Justice Lieff said that if an injunction were granted there would have to be an undertaking by the municipality to compensate the defendants for any ensuing damage.

Domtar Has Anti-pollution Plan

TRENTON (Staff) — Announcement is expected today of comprehensive plans by the Domtar Paper Company to curb pollution from its east Trenton plant.

Representatives of the company met with town council and Ontario Water Resources staff privately in the municipal offices last night prior to the regular committee of the whole session.

Council was briefed on the details of the Domtar plan and their comments will be forwarded to OWRC as part of a report on the proposed pollution abatement scheme.

Domtar researchers have been working for several months with the technical branch of the commission to find adequate solutions to the effluent problem.

"It is a very difficult effluent to treat," one Domtar spokesman indicates.

He said the primary purpose of last night's gathering was "to acquaint the local municipality" with the mechanics of the plan.

Domtar officials have declined to release details of the program until this afternoon but company management has a press conference slated for 2:30 p.m., when a full disclosure is anticipated.

Mayor Urges Co-operation

PICTON (Staff) — Mayor Margaret Ackerman last night told councillors the Quinte region apparently is not under consideration in the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council's over-all plan. "Some will feel this is a undesirable situation to be in. I don't. We are on the fringe and you know the old saying, 'buy on the fringe and wait!'"

Mayor Ackerman said Prince Edward County ties half-way between Montreal and Toronto with "one of the best harbors on Lake Ontario." She remarked, "Let's stop being parochial and unite as a county. Now is the time to look, representing the town of Picton, should sit down and plan with Hallowell township for future development."

Mayor Ackerman said she has been told Hallowell has received applications for two subdivisions in the township and suggested they could be planned on approaches to Picton where water services could be supplied.

Speakers Don't Show

A panel discussion on rock festivals at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc was cancelled yesterday morning when only one of the invited speakers turned up.

Aim of the discussion was to prepare the 1,300 students at the school, and the community for the festival planned at Queensboro July 3-5.

"We are the only school to do this," said principal C. M. McWhirter. "We were seeking solid information from people who had participated rather than play in former festivals. If we don't learn from experience, the rest will we learn!"

But speakers from the Ontario health services, county health unit, and other organizations didn't show. Reeves of the two municipalities and members of the Quinlan family, and a representative of the Addiction Research Foundation were on hand, but the principal cancelled the event because the people present did not represent a complete cross-section of all those involved in festivals.

Federal Loan Would Aid with Beach Plan

Belleville city council will apply for an $80,000 federal loan under the Federal-Provincial-Municipal special development loans program to start development this year of newly acquired park property in north Belleville.

The proposed development would be on the west side of the Moira River opposite Fry Park and running north from the seasonal dam.

Alderman Donald Soutter chairman of the city recreation-arena committee said plans would be to develop 900 feet of the river frontage as a swimming area park.

Application for the loan must be in by June 15. Clearings, excavation, road construction and sand requirements for the beach were estimated to cost approximately $80,000.

The $80,000 loan would be repayable over a period of 25 years.

Alderman Soutter said it was hoped the work could be done in time for use of the beach during the summer of next year.

The swimming beach park area would be eligible for a matching grant from the province of Ontario, it was stated.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said he had been concerned that the city had not taken advantage of the loan offered by the federal government.

He said it was important that application be made, for the loan. The project would create "limited employment."

City manager J. R. Hay-points said the $80,000 would not affect the city's 1971 capital works program quota.

The west river bank project is part of a total of 78 acres purchased over the past year through the Moira River Conservation Authority on which the province of Ontario is paying 75 per cent grant. The city pays 25 per cent of the balance with the authority picking up the remainder.

Tenders For Sewer Job To Be Called This Week

Tenders for the construction of the long - talked - about trunk sewer up the Moira River will be called by the Ontario Water Resources Commission later this week.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said today he had received word from the OWRC that tender advertisements for the riverbed sanitary sewer would appear Friday and Saturday.

The project calls for installation of a 42 - inch sewer from the Front Street pumping station at Dundas Street to College Street, with the line to be extended from there to Adam Street with a 33 - inch main.

Cost of the installation has been estimated in the area of $900.00.

The riverbed trunk sanitary sewer is being undertaken by the OWRC as an area project with the aim to serve the city's Hillcrest and northeast industrial park areas and ultimately part of Thurlow township.

Residents of the area will be charged for the sewer on a use basis.

Next year, a construction start will be made on a local sewer installation to serve Hillcrest area streets.

Council yesterday agreed that the installation should be commenced on the "back" end working back as money and time permitted.

Local Businesses To Be Revalued

A re-assessment of all commercial enterprises in Belleville will be commenced soon by regional assessment officials from Trenton, owners of Belleville city council were informed yesterday.

Leighton Thompson, - assessment commissioner for the Hastings - Prince Edward regional office at Trenton, and Robert Craig, area assessment director in Belleville, spelled out the program which Mr. Craig said was expected to be completed in 1974.

Mr. Craig said the re-assessment would involve a complete analysis of the market with full consideration being given to all factors — negative and positive — relating to value.

To a question from Alderman Jack Ireland, Mr. Craig said the possible effects of new Quinte Mall shopping plans on the downtown business district would be taken into consideration.

He asked for the co-operation of merchants in the re-assessment program, indicating that it would be necessary to enter into all premises, take measurements and collect information regarding rents and other factors.

Dumping Now Free

As of June 1, Quinte area residents bringing garbage in automobiles or station wagons were able to use the new Sidney township sanitary land fill disposal dump without charge.

Originally when the Sidney township site was opened by Commercial Refuse Services, it was stated in a contract only with the city of Belleville and the policy was to charge 50 cents for dumping from automobiles.

Since then, however, Sidney township and the town of Trenton have entered into contract with the disposal site owners and the 50 cent fee for autos has been dropped.

Residents are informed of the change in policy at yesterday's meeting.

Council Discusses Unsightly Areas

The continuing campaign against littering and for a tidier Belleville came in for another shot in the arm at city council yesterday as alderman complained about two more untidy areas.

One was the burned-out debris of the former Moira furniture store on upper Front Street, while the other was a littered area at the base of the Great St. James Street escarpment.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey referred to the Great St. James Street area as a "dump" and asked that something be done to clean it up.

She said one area was filled with debris from a demolished house — pushed over the escarpment by one of the city's reputable builders.

The matter of the burned-out furniture store on Front Street was referred to the city solicitor for report at the next council meeting.

THOMAS M. GLEESON, son of Mrs. Michael J. O'Connor, Belleville, and the late Michael J. Gleeson, received his bachelor of science (honors), microbiology, Guelph University, May 27, 1971. Tom attended Queen's University, Nicholson College and Quinte Secondary School and has accepted a position with the Department of National Health and Welfare (Food and Drug Directorate) Ottawa.

Dr. Potter Restates Health Care Beliefs

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Richard Potter, minister without portfolio, said Monday Ontario health insurance should have a "total" approach including drug and dental coverage and a "provision of mechanical appliances for crippled limbs."

Speaking to the Ontario Pharmacists Association, Dr. Potter said such an encompassing health care system would cost millions of dollars "and there is no way it could be launched at one fell swoop."

He said there must be "arrangements made for financing, perhaps by means of a five - year plan, and the various phases of the program instituted on a priority basis."

In an interview, Dr. Potter said a utilization charge in nursing home patients of $2.50 a day is justified when the Ontario government expands its health insurance scheme to cover the homes.

If the nursing home patient can afford the $3.33 a day, Dr. Potter said, "then why should the taxpayer be expected to support his full costs just so he can leave all his money to his son or daughter?"

If the patient is a pensioner, the daily charge can easily be paid from an old age assistance cheque and still leave the patient with about $20 a month for pocket money, he said. Only the patient with no income at all need be excused from the full daily charge.

In his speech he told the pharmacists:

"There is a great demand by the opposition parties in our Ontario government on the department of health to institute bulk purchasing of drugs and pass the savings on to the general public.

"In other words, they want the government to get into the retail pharmacy business. How long will it take us to awaken to the fact that we are progressing step by step down the garden path toward a completely state dominated society?".

No Inquest In Fire Death

A spokesman for the Picton detachment for the Ontario Provincial Police said today there will be no inquest in connection with the death of Milton Richard Reid who perished Saturday night in a Wellington warehouse fire.

The 64-year-old night watchman burned to death in his ground floor apartment located in the warehouse owned by Bloomfield wrecking contractor Murney Howe.

His body was discovered by police in the ruins of the building at approximately 3 a.m. last Sunday.

Picton Rejects Use of Old School

investment company's offer to provide a cost estimate for renovation to Mary St. School. The motion stipulated this estimate must be provided free of charge.

Councillor Corey Walraven and Reeve Piroth were the sole supporters of both motions concerning an addition to the fire hall.

Mayor Margaret Ackerman said the firm of consulting engineers of Totten, Simms and Hubicki had forwarded a rough estimate of $75,000, for renovation of the partially demolished school building. She added a firm estimate of $51,500, has been made for a new addition to the fire hall while the $75,000, estimate for repair to Mary Street School is "very conservative." She observed it would represent an increase of more than $23,000 to taxpayers if renovations were started at the school site. Renovation of the school would have necessitated the maintenance of two plants, the fire hall and the present town offices.

Councillors rejected a proposal forwarded by George Crowe, a representative of Blackbird Investments, to make a detailed study of Mary Street School for possible renovations if given two weeks deferral of further action. Mr. Crowe said the present renovation estimate of $30 per square foot seemed "too pessimistic" and suggested his firm could reduce this figure to possibly as little as $10, per square foot.

Mayor Ackerman countered it would take approximately nine months to a year before the investment company could complete renovations. A lock up is required by the town as soon as possible since prisoners will be transferred to Napanee Regional Jail at a charge of $40. Permission has been obtained for the town to continue using cells at the county jail until next fall, however.

Reeve Piroth fought to win a detailed cost estimate comparison between a new addition to the fire hall and renovation of the old school. He warned that lock up facilities at the fire hall cannot be expanded and there will be room for only three cells. Mr. Piroth also stated he has learned "unofficially" that the department of public works plans to have its own fire department at Prince Edward Heights, eliminating the need for another fire truck bay in the addition. Deputy - reeve James Bird emphasized the importance of a final decision in a matter council has discussed for more than two years.

"All the time we have deferred it and nothing has been done. If we defer any further we won't have a lock-up," he cautioned.

Councillor William Lane remarked last night's delegation of ratepayers had perhaps come too late to influence council's decision. "It's the first time ratepayers have shown enough interest to come here about this matter. We've made a decision so it may be too late," he said.

Delegates included Mrs. Robert Walmsley, Colin Carter, Ronald Scott and Merle Pearsoll. Mrs. Walmsley spoke of the fire hall as "a fine Georgian building" and one of Picton's tourist attractions that should be preserved. Mr. Carter, a Picton merchant, said that Mary Street school is strategically sound and added an addition to the fire hall will detract from the original building. Seven needed parking stalls will be sacrificed to make the planned addition, he said.

Ronald Scott, speaking for the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce reported telephone calls from concerned taxpayers questioning council's decision to support the $51,500, addition. He said he had personnaly toured Mary Street School and was convinced it had "great possibility". It could offer double the area, at the same cost," he suggested. He asked council to re-open the discussion of its renovation, as urged by Reeve Piroth. When councillors voted against rescinding their earlier decision to build an addition to the fire hall, councillor William Lane summarized: "The discussion is out of date."

Reeve Piroth informed council he is convinced 75 to 80 per cent of Picton's taxpayers are opposed to the fire hall addition.

He said a referendum would prove this point during the 1972 municipal election.

Deputy Reeve James Bird considered it imperative for council to make a final decision last night and observed if the electorate disapproved as they could remember councillors who made it at the next election. This remark prompted murmurs, "too late," from a group of ratepayers seated in the spectators' gallery.

Plans Made For Joint Jail 'Bus'

The Hastings county jail at Belleville is being phased out of operation on Wednesday, June 9 and prisoners will be transferred to the new Napanee detention centre.

The new "paddy wagon" service will transport prisoners to the new regional centre and when necessary back to their respective municipalities for court appearances.

Provincial police will escort prisoners from the rural centres.

The expected high costs of transporting prisoners to and from the Napanee detention centre has been a source of concern for officials of area municipalities for some months.

Initially the proposed policy was for urban municipalities to pay their own transportation costs but investigation revealed this would amount to considerable money.

The cost for Belleville was estimated at more than $30,000 per year.

Municipal officials from Belleville, Kingston, Trenton, and Napanee presented their case to the justice department and were promised that some financial assistance toward prisoner transportation would be given.

Yesterday Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott said the details of the financial assistance were still to be made known.

Today Quinte riding member Dr. R. T. Potter said the Belleville and Trenton police commissions had been in contact with him and he promised to plead the urgency of the situation with the minister.

He said municipalities had been assured some time ago there would be assistance forthcoming from the province but hoped to be able to spell it out in detail in the very near future.

The joint proposal of Belleville and Trenton seems to be a realistic one and is one which I will support in my talks with the department," Dr. Potter said.

Yesterday the Belleville mayor said the Belleville and Trenton proposal to jointly transort prisoners was something new in Ontario.

He said the proposal was a further example of regionalization of facilities.

Quinte Plan

Official plans are elusive creations, almost as unsubstantial as the communities they envisage years hence, and beyond the lifetimes of most of us. Yet here we are being informed that an official plan for the Quinte Area Planning Board could be tabled within two and a half years.

The board is a new establishment and the projection of two and a half years has been made by a Burlington firm which will be working on the plan.

Board chairman Jack Bush has done well to urge the public to get interested in the plan and what it will involve for the nine participating municipalities. These are Belleville, Trenton, Brighton, Frankford, Stirling and Brighton, Murray, Sidney and Thurlow townships.

Mr. Bush, himself reeve of Sidney township, anticipates there will be assistance through government grants, but warned that the balance would be met by area citizens covering a total population of some 75,000.

Involvement is the watchword in any such plan, for it affects the lives of all of us.

Courtesy Needed

There is room for more courtesy in everyday life, between people as well as between the public and officialdom at all levels, which also is people to people.

An article elsewhere on this page speaks of frayed nerves among the "protective staff" on Parliament Hill. These would include the officials involved in recent well-publicized incidents in which one or two individuals were refused admission to the Commons because their garb was shall we say "classified." The matter was even raised in Parliament and apparently is being reviewed so that members of the public may be spared further embarrassment.

Security people are human like anyone else, but there is a tendency among some to behave like little Caesars at the expense of the public. They could take a lesson from the London "bobbies" in this regard.

Similarly, in restaurants and stores the public deserve to be treated courteously, just as they should have consideration for the staffs who serve them. It should be a co-operative effort. Life could be very much more pleasant as a result.

Irish Images

There have been more explosions in Belfast, but it is still not the end of the world over there, as some may tend to believe.

Here are one or two other impressions of life in Belfast and the country as a whole: for one thing we note that the annual Circuit of Ireland motor rally was held as usual at Easter. No politics or border hassles involved in this.

Spring in Ireland is a thing of beauty and we hear that the weather, often variable at this time, has been good in Belfast, we have been "looking its best with all the trees fresh and green and masses of cherry blossom in the gardens." The countryside at large is also lush, with primroses and bluebells everywhere.

As for those Canadian entertainment hit that Lynn Anderson sings so sweetly, it could almost have been written by someone who had seen the Samuel McCredy firm's rose spread just off the highway between Belfast and Lisburn — roses from a firm that enjoys an international reputation.

You do not see such growth — of trees, flowers or shrubs — in the crowded tenement areas of the city where most of the current trouble is centered. Things could be different, could improve all round, we suspect, if one day those areas are updated and instead of ghettos there are single dwellings, with gardens, and the parks and recreation facilities like those found in the more prosperous areas of the city.

Border Capers

Manitoba, having lowered the drinking age to 18, is now be said to be contributing to the delinquency of young Americans. A CBC news report the other night said that growing numbers of youngsters from Minnesota and North Dakota were being picked up for liquor violations on returning from cross-border jaunts into Manitoba. Maybe after a while the novelty will wear off, as it may have to some extent for yong Canadians entering New York for the same reason. It is one of the sad facts of life though that many kids have nothing better to do than pass the time in the beer parlor with consequences which, since they drive cars, can be fatal to themselves as well as to others.

Demonstrations Likely

Security Would Need to Be Heavy If Kosygin Visits

By GREG CONNOLLEY

OTTAWA — There is concern among Canadian officials about hostile reaction when Soviet Premier Kosygin visits this country. The concern is twofold: that there is a call for attempts to harm the Soviet leader and that the impression could be created that Canadians detest the Soviet Union.

Prime Minister Trudeau may have the answer to the second problem — demonstrations against Kosygin, protest parades, anti-Russian banners and the like. Trudeau suggests that before Kosygin starts off on his tour of Canada, that the premier be shown Parliament Hill and the picketing and protesting being carried out, often daily, against the Canadian government.

If Mr. Kosygin can see that the people treat their own government so aggressively, he may find similar treatment for himself more acceptable.

As far as protection for the premier against the extremists who might want to throw something at him, this of course will be the concern of the police and particularly the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The RCMP ironically will have to work closely with representatives of Soviet security forces who will accompany Kosygin on his trip to Canada. The Mounties are more accustomed to carrying out surveillance on Russians and getting their spies ejected from the country. They will have to adjust to the new duties of protecting Mr. Kosygin and his official party.

The security around Kosygin will have to be stringent. It would be unthinkable that one of the two Soviet leaders should suffer any serious trouble while a guest in Canada.

Yet there are many groups in this country which are very hostile to the Soviet. There are large numbers of refugees from European countries who fled from communism. There are new Canadians whose families are forced to remain in the Soviet Union. There are strong nationalist societies here which stand for the freeing of their homelands from Russian sovereignty.

And while the authorities in Canada can stiffen protection measures for Kosygin, they cannot take the sweeping measures of crowd control which are used in the Soviet Union itself.

The last Soviet visitor here of any consequence was Foreign Secretary Andrei Gromyko. He was not exactly permitted to walk around the streets — he was closely guarded and moved about in a cavalcade of big limousines and police guards.

The only disturbance caused during the Gromyko visit was by Maoist sympathizers. They would gather along routes where the foreign envoy was going — to Parliament Hill, the airport, etc. — and shout insults and obscenities and wave Mao's little red book.

The security problem for Premier Kosygin will be to determine where he will travel in Canada. Prime Minister Trudeau thus far has proposed that the Soviet boss visit the Arctic and some farmlands in the West.

One supposes he will also visit Ottawa and the Parliament Buildings — this would provide an occasion for anti-Trudeau and anti - Kosygin persons to join forces, likely a very mixed bag.

A tour of some industrial enterprises would probably be in order as would the traditional outing at Niagara Falls. Mr. Kosygin should see some hydro-electric projects, possibly the Churchill Falls development in Labrador. He should also be given the opportunity to travel widely in Canada so that he can get an idea of the immensity of this country.

Wherever he goes, he will have the RCMP with him — an interesting combination.

No date has been set for the Kosygin visit. Trudeau invited him and he accepted. Such are the vagaries of politics though that it is conceivable one or both of these men might be out of office in the months ahead and the visit would be off.

If this happens there will be a great sigh of relief by Canadian security officials.

"Sorry, but I only know Nelson Eddy songs!"

Two citizens crossing the lower bridge last night intended to do a public service, but they mussed things up a bit. The gas lamp on the south side of the bridge was not burning and one of the citizens got up on the railing to light it.

A break occurred and the lamp fell into the river; the standard remained upon the walk. The police reported the matter to the police and this morning Manager Harden of the Gas Co. and some helpers flished the damaged lamp from the river.

Trenton's Lament

The Trentonian

For years Trenton has helped to elect members to both Ottawa and Queen's Park. They have invariably come from Belleville, and they have invariably fattened that area at our expense. Employment stores and declining population, with agencies in Belleville, have helped to put nails in this towns economic coffin.

We can still salvage things, but not if Queen's Park and Ottawa are going to tie us to Belleville's apron strings. We still think Trenton should be the hub of its own area, leaning toward the west instead of the east.

Kitchener Has Nostalgic Thoughts of Its 1966 Mall

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Toronto's experiment with a downtown mall, which has residents of the metropolis raving over the change in what for the most part is an oppressive asphalt and concrete jungle, should have some effect in Kitchener.

It should stir memories of a time when Kitchener also had a downtown mall, and when a section of the main downtown artery was blocked off and pedestrians left to enjoy almost exclusive use.

That was a time, local residents must recall, when King Street was not just a combination of heavy traffic and traffic street, when during the summer months it was almost a pleasant spot, with shrubs and flowers, some attempts at outdoor eating places and opportunities for relaxation and conversation.

It didn't last long, just two full summers after the short experiment began, but this was long enough to show it was attractive and welcome.

Its main hazard may have been that it was just a bit ahead of its time. There was also a struggle to flesh out the skeleton with enough attractions to disguise the fact it was King Street, with the trolley buses still making their scheduled runs down the otherwise traffic-less street.

The mall, which began as an experiment in connection with the downtown renewal scheme, finally died from uncertain support and lack of funds, but the memory lingers on.

Three years later, Toronto is demonstrating that the idea has, if anything, greater appeal and is proving as well the need for more attractions in a smaller area.

In Toronto, fortunately, there are no trolley or streetcar lines in the middle. With Kitchener's trolleys to be phased out within the next few year, this hazard eventually will be removed.

Rent Down For Lucky Tenants!

Kingston Whig - Standard

When Lino Toffoloni gets a break from his tax collecting he passes on the saving to his tenants.

Mr. Toffoloni, owner of a 12-unit apartment at 211 Queen Mary road, has reduced by $6 the monthly rental for each unit.

A letter received last week by Mr. Toffoloni's tenants said simply that the rents would be reduced, effective June 1. No reason was given, but rejoicing was reported to be rampant.

The benevolent landlord explained that he had been given a reduction in land taxes this year and was merely passing on some of the saving to his tenants.

Protective Staff A Little Zealous

Public, MPs Too, Get the Runaround on the Hill

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Is Parliament Hill becoming too aseptic and formal for the ordinary visitor?

There are long line-ups to get into the Centre Block of the Parliament Buildings.

There are some arbitrary restrictions on dress.

There is no place to obtain a soft drink and a sandwich. There are few benches on the lawns.

Toilets are scarce and far between and the two main ones intended for use by tourists are not even in the Centre Block. They are in the West Block, from which visitors are barred, and have to be approached from outside the building.

The big crowds and attendant security problems tend to fray the tempers of some of the protective staff so that the latter are sometimes abrupt in their dealings with the public.

But despite the cramped conditions, the visitors keep coming—in droves.

Probably one million tourists or more will rubberneck through the Centre Block this summer.

Once Parliament adjourns, probably June 30, there will be more room for tourist movement and the worst of the crush will be finished.

Officials say they would like to do more—a lot more—for the visitor. But the problem is space.

They would like, for instance, to show the tourist some films about Parliament Hill while he waits to take the Centre Block guided tour. But there is no room for this.

MPs are becoming more and more annoyed, in fact, that the government can find money for huge, spanking new buildings for the civil servants of the external affairs, defence, transport and other departments but not a cent for a new building on Parliament Hill for offices, parking and a dining room.

Instead, some MPs are going to be shoved, many against their will, into a still-to-be-renovated Confederation Building next door to Parliament Hill.

Many of Parliament's rules of procedure leave some tourists agape with boredom.

Most tourists flock to the Hill for the daily question period which normally comes soon after the 2 p.m. Commons opening.

But instead of the expected snappy repartee, the tourist may be treated to a well-worked debate on a point of order or a laborious exchange on some obscure government announcement.

Some rules have been streamlined to everyone's relief. But MPs say even more do.

On a possibly more exciting level, the Commons protective staff must be seen before proceedings can ever be televised.

The staff is decidedly cool toward hot pants and other articles of clothing it deems not to be in good taste.

In the last month at least two young ladies were escorted from the public galleries for wearing shorts which came to about the same thigh level as miniskirts and seemed no more risque.

Miniskirts were judged in good taste after they became fashionable a few years ago. Pants suits won instant approval from the guards.

But hot pants are accepted sometimes and rejected other times.

One guard recently told a visitor to remove his sports coat because it was made of leather and not cloth.

Federal Commission Inquiry Laid Down Its Own Rules

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Ian Scott, counsel for the federal commission of inquiry into the April riot at Kingston Penitentiary, said today it was the commission itself which decided to hold sessions in camera.

He said in an interview that Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, anointed the board and it "laid the ground rules."

Mr. Goyer has been criticized because the hearings into the causes of the four-day revolt that resulted in the deaths of two prisoners are closed to the public.

"We will consider as we go along whether there is any evidence that would not offend the rules laid down," said Mr. Scott. If this occurs in the course of the hearing, he said, the commission would open sessions to the public.

He said the three-man commission sat for six hours during its first session Monday at the Royal Military College but he would not disclose who testified.

The board of inquiry is unique because it is the first independent inquiry into penitentiary disorders. Usually such incidents are handled internally by the wardens of the institutions and regional administrators.

Chairman of the commission is lawyer William Swackhamer, also of Toronto, working with H. E. Popp, director of security in the penitentiary service and W. T. McGrath, executive secretary of the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association.

The latter is an independent organization of individuals interested in prison affairs and penal reform.

Mr. Scott said he has no idea if the convicts and prison guards called to testify will retain legal counsel, but noted that "anyone seeking counsel" will be given appropriate time to obtain it. Witnesses also may testify under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

The commission, expected to hear testimony for most of the summer, sits here until Thursday, recesses for a week, then goes to Toronto before returning to Kingston.

About 500 convicts were involved in the mid-April disturbances that wrecked the penitentiary's main cell block. Eighteen prisoners, charged with kidnapping of prison guards and the murder of two convicts, appear in court today.

Eleven Millhaven penitentiary guards, charged with assaulting prisoners involved in the Kingston riot, are due to appear in court in nearby Napanee July 19.

Attorney-General Lawrence Says No Conflict Exists

TORONTO (CP) — There is no conflict between a federal investigation into the April riot at Kingston penitentiary and the fact that charges have been laid against 11 guards and 18 prisoners, Attorney-General Allan Lawrence said Monday.

He was replying in the Ontario legislature to James Trotter (L—Toronto Parkdale) who suggested evidence from the federal inquiry might prevent the 34 accused from receiving a fair trial.

Mr. Lawrence said the province has been co-operating with the federal inquiry.

"There has been no lack of co-operation and, as far as I know, no conflict between what we are doing and that they are doing."

Mr. Trotter said the inquiry was in public and there was a danger the cases against the accused would be heard before they come to trial.

Mr. Lawrence said, "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it." It was his understanding that the federal inquiry was in closed session.

He said that since the matter had been brought to his attention, "I will certainly take cognizance of it and watch it very carefully."

Bridges Reopened

NEW YORK (AP)—Supervisors worked through the night and reopened seven of 25 drawbridges into Manhattan, easing massive traffic tieups today. But the city faced a new crisis as 1,500 sewage treatment workers walked off the job in an expanded strike action by municipal employees.

Another 300 employees at city incinerators were reported out on strike, a move that city officials said could lead to a critical problem of disposal of garbage.

Mayor John V. Lindsay toured the city by helicopter during the morning rush hour and reported that traffic conditions were "much better than yesterday," when striking municipal employees left 25 drawbridges locked in an open position.

Newest Canadians Begin School

Retiring principal H. R. Frink climaxed his 42 years of teaching by welcoming 11 Tibetans to his school Monday to start English language instruction. With public health nurse Mrs. Lois Hughes, he made the acquaintance of Karma Laha, 7, and Tundup Matho, 6. Mayor J. Russell Scott was on hand Monday morning to greet the eight adults, two boys and one baby who will be attending Queen Elisabeth School under the instruction of their teacher, Miss Susan Caplan. Hastings county board of education provided the room at the school, the province provided the teacher and the federal government, through Manpower here, is overseeing the project.

Coe Hill Couple Wed for 50 Years

Recently, family and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ingram of Coe Hill met to honor them on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram were married May 17, 1921 on the lawn of the farmhouse presently owned by Charles Vader. The farm was then owned by the bride's father, the late Scott Yeo. Their attendants were the groom's sister, Clara, (Mrs. Marshall MacCauley) and the bride's brother, Charles Vader. Both bridesmaid and groomsman were present to help celebrate the anniversary of the wedding.

The bride of 50 years was in a mauve dress with black accessories. Her corsage was of gold sweetheart roses. The groom of 50 years wore a brown suit with a white carnation. Boutonniere sprayed with gold.

During the afternoon and evening many friends and relatives came to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Ingram. The focal point of the reception room was a long table bearing a three tiered wedding cake baked by Mrs. Amos Whitmore, their eldest daughter. This beautiful white and gold centerpiece was flanked by bouquets of appropriate flowers and golden candles. At each end of the table were silver vase services.

Friends and relatives were invited to pour tea at intervals during the day. In the afternoon Mrs. W. R. Ogilvie, Mrs. Nelson Vandlef, Mrs. Mary Tinney, and Mrs. Mark-land Barker were chosen; while in the evening Mrs. Charles Vader, Mrs. Russell Mindle, Mrs. Ernest Landon, and Miss Maureen Thompson officiated. The granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ingram, Miss Deborah Ingram, Miss Brenda Landon, Miss Arlene Landon, Miss Nancy Ingram, and Miss Judy Ingram assisted by Miss Elaine Taylor served the guests.

The guests were greeted at the door and were invited to sign the guest book by Mrs. Robert Ogilvie, Mrs. Vaughn Landon, Mrs. Dane Campbell and Mrs. Amos Whitmore all daughters.

The fancy sandwiches and parties enjoyed by everyone were prepared by Mrs. Aileen Ingram, Mrs. Roy Ingram, Mrs. Edwin Ingram, Mrs. Gerald Ingram, Mrs. Marjory Ingram, and Mrs. Carl Ingram all daughters - in - law of the honored couple. They were assisted by Mrs. Amos Whitmore, Mrs. Robert Ogilvie, Mrs. Vaughn Landon and Mrs. Dane Campbell their daughters.

A highlight of the day occurred when Mrs. Carol T. Rollins acting for her husband Clark T. Rollins, M.L.A., presented Mr. and Mrs. Ingram with a plaque from the Government of Ontario commemorating their golden wedding anniversary. A letter of congratulations from the Hon. William Davis, Premier of Ontario, was read. Later a similar letter came from Mr. Lee Grills MP and from the Hon. Robert Stanfield, leader of the Opposition. Many other messages of congratulations were received.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingram lived most of their life in the Township of Wollaston where they engaged in farming and lumbering. Mr. Ingram was Post Master at Faraday, a position held by his father before him, until rural mail delivery replaced the small post offices of the area. For the past nine years they have enjoyed semi-retirement after having sold the farm and moved to Coe Hill.

They raised ten children: six sons and four daughters, all of whom are married. To 24 of the third generation they are Grandpa and Grandma; to two of the fourth generation they are Great-grandpa and Great-grandma. The happy time that all had together at their Golden Wedding celebration is a testimony of the esteem and good wishes felt for them by their family, their neighbors and their friends.

The grey and pink home of Mr. and Mrs. Noble Brown, 45 Highland Avenue were a festive air on Monday, June 7 with colorful floral arrangements adorning the living room and hallway. The occasion was the 60th wedding anniversary of the Browns and a large number of visitors kept streaming in to extend their greetings.

The dining table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake decorated with pink roses, silver leaves and white swans. A pair of white doves with silver rings in their mouths nestled on the top tier beneath a large white bell.

Lunch was provided by the members of the Holloway Street UCW and served by the nieces of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Dorothy Gilhooley, Ila Baker, Velma Slafford, Doris Joan, Dorothy, Emma and Edna Bradshaw, Dorothy Ward, Lois Brown and Gerry Lussier.

A large number of gifts, bouquets and well over 100 cards were received by the Browns, also letters of congratulations from Mayor Russell Scott, Robert Stanfield, William Davis and Lee Grills MP.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble Brown (nee Eva Pearl MacDonald) were married on June 7, 1911 in Thurlow, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. MacDonald by Rev. W. T. Wickett. Long-time residents of the Belleville area, they moved to their present home seven years ago when Mr. Brown retired from Canada Cement plant, Point Anne, where he worked for 38 years.

Mr. Brown is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Brown and was born on 2nd Thurlow. He and his wife are deeply interested in young people and have entertained young people from Guyana, Peru, Jamaica, Barbados and other lands at their home.

Both are also active in church work. Mrs. Brown, or Eva, as she prefers to be called, joined the Front Road Church when she was a child of eight and during her years there and at Point Anne taught Sunday School for 42 years.

On moving to Belleville they became members of Holloway Street United Church. Mr. Brown served on the Boards at Point Anne and Holloway Street United Church. Mrs. Brown is a member of the Albert College Guild and a charter member of the Quinte WI.

The day before the anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Noble Brown entertained their daughter Helen and her husband Rev. Harry Atkinson, to a family dinner.

Ann Landers

Applicants' Word Should Be Taken

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am all for human rights, equality and all that fast, but the modern set is taking over the world and I resent it. This is what happened to my sister last week:

Wilma and her fiance went to the Court House to take out a marriage licence yesterday. The County Clerk looked at her in a very odd way. She couldn't understand what was wrong. Finally he said, "Are you sure you're a female?" My sister almost fell over dead. Her fiance was ready to invite the guy outside. She replied, "What in the world is that driving at?" The clerk said, "Last week we had two gay couples in here trying to get a marriage licence. Lord knows how many of them others have fooled us."

ANN LANDERS

Wilma got so mad she was ready to take off her clothes right then and there. Finally the clerk said, "O.K., but I hope you see my problem." My sister and her fiance got their licence but it sure ruined their day. What do you think about this, Ann Landers? How can decent people be protected against such insults? — ANOTHER CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE.

DEAR QUAKE: Government is already doing too much prying. The County Clerks should take the marriage applicants' word for it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son is 29 years old and lives with me. His father died ten years ago and I rented the room and board money, but I'm beginning to wonder if it's worth it.

Nickey makes $132 a week take-home pay. He gives me $80 a month. He gets good breakfasts and big dinners. I do his laundry (shirts by hand) and I keep his suits pressed. He uses the telephone, plenty of hot water, gas, lights, and has a TV in his own room. Nearly every day he asks me to buy him shaving cream, or blades, mouthwash, toothpaste, a bottle of aspirin, adhesive tape, hair cream or after-shave — it's always something. He expects me to pay for his gifts, too.

When he has company I am supposed to prepare the refreshments and serve them as if I was a maid. Sometimes he doesn't even introduce me.

When Nick gets mad he doesn't talk for three days at a time. I'd like your advice on whether I should ask him to leave. The heartache isn't worth the extra dollars. — NEW JERSEY TROUBLES.

DEAR N.J.: Your advice is in the last sentence. I couldn't have said it better myself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Call my letter "The Confession of A Foolish Mother" — but please print it for other mothers who don't know any better.

Our 17-year-old daughter became pregnant by a 19-year-old boy. Elsie was crazy over Ray and I can believe she got pregnant on purpose. Ray didn't want to get married but I practically put a gun to his head. It is one year later and they are both miserable. Ray is never home and Elsie is a nervous wreck. He is a rotten husband and has no interest in their little girl. Eventually, Ray will leave for good and I'm beginning to think the sooner the better. I hold myself responsible for this mess. Please tell mothers everywhere that a forced marriage is always a mistake. — WISH I HADN'T.

DEAR WISH: A word from someone who has been there is worth heeding. Thanks for writing.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

BY MARY BRYSON

You'll be surprised at the way your baby will swallow fruit with glee, yet spit out the strained meat or vegetables offered before they touch his tongue. This is the time to use a bit of camouflage. Put the meat (or vegetable) on first, then coat it with fruit or pudding. Gradually decrease the amount of the coating (cod and hopefully, baby will never know the difference.

This Dating Centre Produces Good Marriages

By DORIS CLARK

In the past eight years Toronto's Scientific Introduction Centre has brought together many hundreds of unattached men and women. And to show that this is to fly-by-night dating service, well over 300 member couples have married. The Centre follows up, since research and careful analysis are the name of the game. It is known that a very large percentage of these marriages is successful — 97 per cent to be exact.

The reason for the high rate of success is personal, individual care. Things are learned about an applicant's temperament, his (or her) goals and ambitions; his likes and dislikes; the kinds of things he does in his spare time.

And it is not left to a computer to sort these things out. Computers make mistakes when it comes to human attributes and foibles!

Not only through initial interviews, but through personal counselling of couples once they have become acquainted, a weather eye is kept on the progress of each romance and the interested couple are helped to assess themselves as marriage mates.

Counsellors are drawn from an impressive board of advisers including psychologists, psychiatrists, masters of social work, lawyers and researchers in the area of the social sciences. There are workshops offered to help people to understand themselves and one another. There are up-to-date books in an extensive loan library on psychological, social and family life topics.

Details on request.

Dear Doris: I suppose I'm like any other ordinary girl, wanting and needing to be wanted. I'm 18 years old, and ever since I can remember, every guy I have ever liked has never liked me. But now it's even harder to take because I'm older and I see all my other friends going out and getting the guys they like.

I've been crying too much and feeling down in the dumps lately. What can I do? I can't concentrate on anything anymore, especially school because everything bothers me. Please help me. — Desperate. "Unwanted and Lonely"

Dear Desperate, Unwanted and Lonely: Franklin once said, "To be loved, you must love and be lovable." It's so true! See if you can concentrate on developing an open, affectionate nature.

Work on your appearance. Learn the art of conversation. When the other fellow is down in the dumps, help him up. Then being loved will come automatically!

* * *

Dear Doris: The 53-year-old lady signed "Lonely" might be interested in FISH. More than a hundred people have joined the organization called FISH.

This club is in Moncton, New Brunswick. Volunteers provide companionship for shut-ins, will read to the blind, will give assistance in all kinds of emergencies and help with transportation, housework, meals, and general counselling.

When professional help is needed we act as a referral agency to the proper authority. The FISH symbol goes back to the days of Roman persecution. The sign of the fish was the way early Christians identified each other. The FISH is faith in action. — The Fish

Dear Fish: Good neighbors are greatly needed in cities where so many live in isolation in the midst of the crowd! Volunteer efforts like these are an inspiration.

Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for her reply.

Tomatoes Have High Vitamin Content

By MARY MOORE

When I heard on the radio market report that, canned tomatoes were selling for 2 for $1 I hustled to buy some and use them for our dinner. Because of their high durable vitamin content I did not serve a salad with this meal for we were having fresh fruit for dessert.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES
(Serves 6 generously)

½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup margarine
3 tbsps. flour
Two 19-oz. cans Canadian tomatoes
1 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. oregano (or more)
2 cups fine bread crumbs
2 tbsps. melted margarine

Saute onion and celery in first amount of margarine until limp but not brown. Stir in flour, then tomatoes, sugar and seasonings until thick. Tip half into large baking dish. Cover with half of the crumbs which have been mixed with melted margarine. Repeat, finishing with crumbs. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 30-35 min.

The best tomato soup is homemade so give your family a treat by making this economical dish and serving it from your best soup tureen as a rare treat — for it is.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP
(Serves 6)

2 tbsps. margarine (or butter or chicken fat)
2 tbsps. flour
1 tsp. salt
2 cups milk
2 cups canned tomatoes (or fresh in season or canned juice)
¼ tsp. soda
1 tsp. sugar
¼ tsp. onion salt

TUESDAY

Dinner Menus

Quick Pan-Fried Liver; Baked Butternut Squash; Creamed Onions; Shredded Cabbage and Carrot Salad with Homemade Salad Dressing; Blueberry Pie; Coffee.

¼ tsp. MSG (Accent)
¼ tsp. curry powder (optional)

In large pot make a thin white sauce first by blending margarine (or other fat), flour and salt, then stirring in milk until thick. Heat the tomatoes with the soda. When tomatoes and sauce are same temperature add the tomatoes to the sauce all at once. Stir in seasonings. NOTE: Do NOT add the white sauce to the tomatoes. Easy to add tomatoes into the white sauce to reduce curdling hazard. The soda helps reduce the risk too. Serve at once.

NDP Seeks Changes In Development Corp.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons is to vote tonight on a series of New Democrat attempts to change radically the objectives and operating principles of the proposed Canada Development Corp.

Several NDP spokesmen, partially supported by Conservative Jack Horner (Crowfoot), mounted a comprehensive attack Monday against the government's bill to establish the CDC.

Speakers charged that the bill would discriminate against small businesses and give an undeserved windfall to the small minority of Canadians with spare cash to invest.

The CDC bill would provide the corporation with $250 million in government investment in the first three years. At first the federal government would be the largest shareholder, but shares later would be sold to Canadian citizens and residents.

The bill states that the corporation shall seek to make profitable investments in the interests of the shareholders.

The CDC's first investment would be to take over government interest in Panarctic Oils Ltd., Polymer Corp. Ltdr, Eldorado Nuclear Ltd., and Northern Transportation Ltd.

The NDP amendments, to be voted on tonight would direct the CDC to operate in the public interest rather than the shareholders' interest and delete the clause permitting the government to sell the four Crown corporations to the CDC.

The NDP also would remove the restriction that the CDC is to invest only in firms that have or are likely to have more than $1 million in assets and require the CDC board of directors to represent various areas of society, including labor and consumers.

Canadian Route Preferred

New System Ends 'Hot Oil' Threat To Arctic Muskeg

WASHINGTON (CP) — A persistent congressional critic of proposals to build an oil pipeline across Alaska said today a newly developed system could make a Canadian pipeline route "superior in virtually every respect" to the trans-Alaska route.

Les Aspin, Democratic congressman from Wisconsin, was referring to a pipeline system developed by Dow Chemical Co. which uses a series of liquid-filled plastic "sleeves" around the pipeline to neutralize the heat given off by oil passing through the line.

The hot oil has been described by conservationists as a major threat to the northern ecology because it would normally melt the permafrost near the pipeline, disrupting the delicate balance of the northern environment.

Aspin said in a news release — the gist of which he planned to repeat today in Congress— that if the Dow pipeline proves to be workable, "it would appear that a Canadian pipeline route would be free of major ecological problems, while the proposed trans-Alaska route would still be subject to the two most worrisome ecological risks: the earthquakes and the tankers."

The U.S. interior department is currently considering a controversial proposal to allow oil from the north slope of Alaska to be shipped by pipeline across Alaska, through an area frequently hit by earthquakes, and by tanker along the West Coast to the U.S. mainland.

Canada has expressed concern about the danger of pollution to the British Columbia coast from spills or tanker accidents, and has suggested consideration of an alternative pipeline route down the Mackenzie Valley to the U.S. Midwest.

Aspin said the National Environmental Policy Act requires the interior department to study the Dow pipeline.

He quoted a Dow representative as saying the cost of the company's pipeline would be "roughly comparable" to the proposed Alaska line and that the system should be tested in arctic conditions for about one year.

The Dow system would allow the entire pipeline from Alaska to be buried underground through the permafrost regions, Aspin said, eliminating objections to an above-ground line that it would affect migratory habits of arctic animals and be open to sabotage.

Old Age Pensions Change Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal and provincial governments are considering constitutional changes dealing with old age pensions, but Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Monday that his government holds to the view that Ottawa must maintain jurisdiction over income security.

He said the proposed constitutional amendment, advanced by a province which he did not identify, is being considered prior to next week's federal-provincial constitutional conference in Victoria. It is under study by the other nine provinces and Ottawa.

But under repeated questioning in the Commons, the prime minister said his government has not changed its position—as outlined in last December's white paper on income security.

It is the federal government's view, he said, that if jurisdiction for income security is transferred to the provinces they "will not be able to follow national standards and we will have the richer provinces helping their people to a greater degree than the poorer provinces will be able to do."

Under questioning from Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat Leader David Lewis, Mr. Trudeau refused to indicate the substance of the proposed amendment. It was agreed that the working papers for the Victoria conference would be confidential.

Bribery Said Good Way To Build Towing Firm

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Bribing police continues to be a recognized effective system to develop an automobile towing business, a brief by the autobody insurance liaison committee of the National Automotive Trades Association of Canada says.

Presented Monday to the Ontario committee on insurance claims, the brief said police bribing "always has occurred and still does even though police participants usually deny this."

"Towing people admit it though in private," the brief says. The government committee was in Windsor as part of a cross-province tour gathering information on insurance claims settlements.

The association brief also blasted "pirate tow trucks" which monitor police radios and frequently get to the scene of an accident before the truck summoned by police.

The brief said "unscrupulous operators" will tow a car away and then charge one of two prices for the service: A high price with storage extra if they are not awarded the repair job, or a realistic price if the firm is awarded the towing job with no storage charges.

The association also denied its industry was the main reason behind rising car insurance rates. The brief said the autobody industry feels three powerful forces outside its business are to blame: The rising cost of labor and of parts, three or four large unscrupulous insurance companies and a demanding public.

Area's Pioneer Periodical Distributor Has Been Sold to U.S.-owned Company

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Over a period spanning the past 3½ decades, beginning on Nov. 15, 1937, distribution of close to 90 per cent of periodical and paperback reading material in an area between Napanee and Oshawa, Peterborough and Picton, including Belleville, has been handled by Upper Canada News Agency.

At that time, Ernie Colebourne, a driver for the old Imperial News Company in Toronto, then bought out by the Simcoe News Agency, arrived in this city with a ½-ton truck, a desk and experience in the news periodical handling business.

From early beginnings at a small office located at 17 Bridge Street East, to a constructed warehouse now housing the Elk's Hall on Moira Street West, the company expanded into present quarters on Oak Street, with a total staff of 40 and a fleet of 10 trucks and two cars.

As of June 1, the distribution of such reading material has been taken over by Metro Toronto News, a Canadian subsidiary of the parent firm in St. Louis, Missouri.

With termination of Belleville operations on June 15, only seven of the 40 employees will be kept on by the purchasing firm, with this reduced staff handling deliveries and service to Belleville, Peterborough and area.

"It's quite disgusting for me, that they aren't going to be operating out of Belleville," said Mr. Colebourne of the sale.

"It's the same old story . . . it's the money that counts."

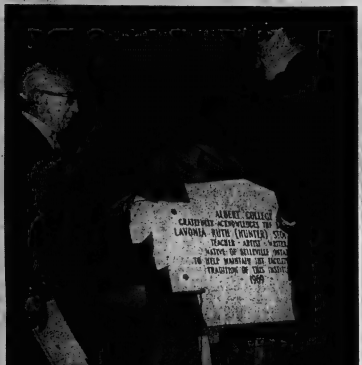
He also expressed regret that more of his workers couldn't be taken in under the new deal, but he will keep the Reading and Greeting shops in Belleville and Peterborough and "I hope to open more stores in the area . . . Kingston and Trenton possibly."

The revamped operation under the new owners, will take over the 500 retailers built up by Mr. Colebourne and his staff over the years, but all deliveries will come by way of Toronto.

The agency owner said it was the pressure of maintaining this service business that forced him to sell out to Metro.

"This is a service business . . . if you don't have outlets, you don't have volume.

"Years ago, the rule was you worked hard . . . you got the franchises from the publishers. Now it depends a great deal on how much money you have."



When Mr. Colebourne began his business in Belleville, there were four agencies in the city, two in Trenton and three out of Oshawa. Gradually, by offering improved service, the franchises went to Upper Canada News.

Defunct periodicals and newspapers such as Radio Guide (which later became the present TV Guide), the Montreal Standard, Philadelphia Inquirer, Detroit Times, Chicago Tribune, Sunday Mirror and Sunday News and the Saturday Evening Post, which Mr. Colebourne says outsold all other magazine's of its type, were distributed.

In fact, to promote the sale of certain reading material, special shows were organized. In 1948, to promote the sale of the Montreal Standard (which later became Weekend Magazine) famed columnist Gregory Clark, personality Barry Woods and Doug Whalen, first morning show man on the Ridgeling CJBQ highlighted a special promotion show at the old McCarthy Theatre.

Several employees will help with cleanup work at the Oak Street warehouse. Tons of pocket novels are being destroyed, the front pages being set aside for credit with the publishers, comic book and newspaper banner lines are being clipped and sorted for similar credit and accounts are being tidied up to make complete turnover as easy as possible.

Under the control of Metro Toronto, there won't even be an office in the city . . . distribution by employees will be handled on a package delivery basis, with orders accepted over the telephone.

Plaque of Thanks Unveiled

Dr. Gerald A. Morton, (right), assisted by J. W. Deacon, governor of Albert College, unveiled a plaque commemorating a large grant left to the school in the name of Mrs. L. R. Stockelback. Because of the grant, the administration of the school was able to afford new science facilities and various renovations within the school. The approximate $80,000 was left in the care of Dr. Morton to donate as he saw fit.

College Beauty For Graduation

Gathered on the lawn of Albert College, the students of the graduating class talk over memories they will have of the school with parents and friends. This was close to being their final day on the grounds of the grand old building for the grade thirteen students who were told later in the day by the guest speaker, Rev. John McMurray, "search and make the greatest efforts to find your Camelot and your dream."

Packing Up Shop

Ernie Colebourne, right, owner of Upper Canada News Agency, joins 28-year veteran employee Mac Anderson in packing books preparatory to closing of the Oak Street warehouse. On June 1, the 34-year business began operations under Metro News from Toronto.

Margaret Ackerman:

County Attractions Should Be Promoted

PICTON (Staff) — Mayor Margaret Ackerman last night criticized the Quinte Isle Tourist Association for failure to advertise "natural phenoms" with trillium signs available through the department of tourism.

"I cannot understand why the QITA has not been more aggressive," she commented. Mayor Ackerman referred to the Sandbanks and Lake On The Mountain as special tourist attractions which deserve extra billing through highway signs at all approaches to Prince Edward from Highway 401. She said signs advertising the Serpent Mounds near Peterborough and the Stratford Festival typify the advertisement local attractions should receive.

"Perhaps it is incumbent of the town of Picton to request these signs," she added. The mayor observed the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce the tourist association and local merchants could promote an annual County Corn Festival featuring street dancing and other entertainment. This could compare with Muskoka's Cavalcade of Color or the Ottawa Tulip Festival in emphasizing the natural attractions of the county.

Albert College Graduation Sees 59 Diplomas Presented

Convocation exercises for Albert College were held in the quiet majesty of the chapel with Rev. John McMurray, MA, a former student and valedictorian of the college, as the guest speaker.

With Camelot as his theme, Rev. McMurray cautioned the graduating class, "all must have a Camelot or a dream that should be sought and then pursued."

Twenty-four students were awarded secondary school graduation diplomas and 35 were awarded secondary school honor graduation diplomas.

A great portion of the afternoon was set aside for the presentation of 70 awards, trophies, certificates and scholarships made available by members of the faculty, past students and the board of governors.

Highlighting these presentations was the awarding of three Ontario Scholarships to Suryo Ngaserin, Indonesia; Desmond Stuckbury, Labrador, Nfld., and Boon Siang Tan of Malaysia.

Another coveted award, presented by the headmaster, was the Albert College Gold Medal, given to Lori Ewan of grade nine, David Wight of grade ten, Joanne Willmont of grade eleven, Anne Murdock of grade twelve and Suryo Ngaserin of grade thirteen. This medal is presented to the honor of highest standing in the class and for highest general proficiency in grade thirteen.

The alumni Award (a $100 scholarship) was presented to Pat Gorazdowska of Belleville and the Governor General's Medal was presented to a grade thirteen student for general proficiency, Desmond Stuckbury.

The most outstanding girl athlete was awarded to Pat Gorazdowska and the most outstanding male athlete was presented to Garikai Mutswaire.

The Albert College Women's Guild Medal, for the girl with the highest standing in scholarship and school life was presented to Anne Murdock of Iroquois Falls, Ontario.

The Howard Award for the finest representative lady student was presented to Mary Jean McDowell of De Perrot, Quebec, and the Marsh Award was presented for the finest representative of a male student to Allan Trew, Somerset, Bermuda.

All-around Student

Bradley Silk was given the honor at the Albert College graduation of being the valedictorian of his class. Mr. Silk spoke of the teachers who had made his school career an unforgettable time and how he would always remember his acquaintances from his school life. During his address to the gathering he spoofed his teachers and used humor to lighten the mood of the occasion.

Board Looking At Trenton Office

In the quest for a permanent office, the Quinte Area Planning Board is considering ground floor facilities at Trenton's Ontario House.

Although only being considered at the present time, the Division Street office building, which houses the Regional Assessment office and the Provincial Court, is considered an ideal location, especially by more easterly representatives of the Quinte Planning Board.

A central location between Thurlow and Murray Townships, eastern and western boundaries of the QAPB, the Trenton building is also equipped with a public cafeteria catering to staff and nearby workers.

Survey to Find Leisure Interests

Hastings County Board of Education is sponsoring a survey to discover people's leisure time interests, Dave Smith, co-ordinator of the program using local schools, told fellow Rotarians yesterday.

The survey is also aimed at seeking potential leaders of recreation programs which Mr. Smith emphasized were aimed at creating community interest in a society which tended to be compartmentalized into separate interest groups.

Susan Boardman, a Grade 13 student at Quinte Secondary School also addressed the meeting. She described her visit to Ottawa under the Adventure in Citizenship program, along with 275 students from across Canada.

Bucyk Most Deadly

MONTREAL (CP) — John Bucyk, a 31-goal man with Boston Bruins, was the most accurate shooter in the 1970-71 National Hockey League season.

Statistics released Monday by the NHL show that Bucyk scored his 31 goals on 225 shots for a shooting percentage of 22.8.

Four other players joined Bucyk with a shooting percentage of 20 or better among those who scored 15 or more goals.

Gary Dornhoefer of Philadelphia Flyers had 20 goals on 96 shots for a percentage of 20.8 to finish second.

John McKenzie of Boston was third with 31 goals on 151 shots for 20.5 per cent. Fourth was Dave Balon of New York Rangers, 26 goals on 128 shots for 20.4 per cent followed by Chico Maki of Chicago Black Hawks with 119 shots, 22 goals and 20 per cent.

In team statistics, the Bruins, the NHL's East Division champions, had the top shooting percentage of 12.5 with 396 goals on 3,157 shots.

The Bruins collected 1,096 scoring points during the 78-game regular schedule. Chicago had a team point total of 1,039 and Montreal Canadiens were next with 746.

In the plus-minus rating, which shows how many goals have been scored by a player's own team and the opponents while he was on the ice, Bobby Orr, the 22-year-old Boston defenceman, set a record with plus 124. Dallas Smith, Orr's defence partner had plus 94, followed by Ken Hodge and Phil Esposito of the Bruins, plus 71 each.

MacNeil Still Coach

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Al MacNeil and general manager Sam Pollock said Monday night no decision has been made yet whether the rookie coach who won the Stanley Cup last season will return to Montreal Canadiens this fall.

"I'm still coaching Montreal Canadiens unless I get fired in the next five minutes," said MacNeil.

During the Stanley Cup finals against Chicago, MacNeil temporarily benched Henri Richard and the veteran centre called him "the worst coach I ever played for."

After the series ended, with Richard scoring the winning goal, he apologized and said he hoped MacNeil would be back as coach.

Balding's 74 Golf Week Target

TORONTO (CP) — Al Balding and Gail Harvey Moore, both of Toronto, set the standards Monday which Canadian golfers will shoot for during National Golf Week, June 12-20, to beat the champ.

Balding, Canadian Professional Golfers's Association champion, and Mrs. Moore, the Canadian women's champion, toured the Bayview Country Club layout with amateur Gary Cowan of Kitchener and Marlene Stewart Streit of Fonthill, Ont.

Balding and Cowan both shot 74, one over par, while Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Streit had identical 77s, two over women's par.

Last year the Royal Canadian Golf Association raised $53,000 for junior golf development during the week. The system calls for a golfer to ante up $1 for a crack at the champ's score by subtracting his handicap from his gross score.

This year tournament organizer, Ed Moir of St. Catharines, added a new twist—a best-ball score.

A best-ball score is when two players team up and use their best score on each hole.

Balding and Cowan teamed for a six-under-par 67 while the Moore-Streit combination carded a 72.

Nicklaus Already Past 1970 Earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Nicklaus maintained his lead in money winnings on the pro golf tour with his second place finish in Sunday's Atlanta Classic.

Nicklaus, losing a playoff to Gardiner Dickinson in Atlanta, won $14,300 as runner-up to increase his earnings thus far to $146,213, surpassing his total of $142,149 for all of last year.

Lee Trevino, who tied for third at Atlanta and collected $7,350, is second with $123,135. Dickinson, with the $25,000 first prize, jumped from 33rd to 21st and a $47,11 total.

Nicklaus also leads in the point standings with 144.970.5, with Trevino again second with 130.920.8.

Money Leaders: Nicklaus $146,213; Trevino $123,135; Arnold Palmer $106,798; Gary Player $105,937; Miller Barber $100,289; Tom Shaw $85,901; Gene Littler $83,605; Frank Beard $75,873; George Archer $70,653; Billy Casper $68,814.

Point Leaders: Nicklaus 144,907.5; Trevino 130,920.8; Player 104,900.2; Barber 83,795.8; Littler 81,468.5; Beard 73,367.6; Archer 65,243.6; J. C. Snead 60,960.6; Palmer 60,852.34; Hubert Green 60,621.3.

Coody Among 72 Open Qualifiers

Don Bies, a touring pro from Seattle, Wash., fired a nine-under-par 68-67—135 and Master champion Charles Coody was not too far behind at 140 as 72 professionals and amateurs qualified Monday for the U.S. open golf championship.

Another 384 will battle today in Washington, St. Louis, New York, Pinehurst, N.C., and Pittsburgh for the remaining 43 berths in the tournament July 17-20 at the Merion Golf Club, Ardmore, Pa.

Familiar NHL Faces Up for Grabs Today

MONTREAL (CP) — A few well-known players will be available today when the 14 National Hockey League teams participate in the intra-league draft.

Each team was allowed to protect 18 players and two goalkeepers on their lists which were released Monday night and which contained a few surprise omissions.

Boston Bruins, first-place finishers in the NHL's East Division, failed to protect left winger Wayne Carleton.

New York Rangers left two veterans—Pat Stewart, a 35-year-old right winger, and Tim Horton, a 41-year-old defenceman—off their protected lists.

Minnesota North Stars dropped 40-year-old netminder Gump Worsley from their list; Pittsburgh Penguins dropped goalie Al Smith and right winger Andy Hebenton; veteran goaltender Charlie Hodge was not protected by Vancouver Canucks; and Chicago Black Hawks dropped veteran forwards Eric Nesterenko and Lou Angotti.

Punch Imlach, Buffalo Sabres coach and general manager left veteran forwards Don Marshall, Reg Fleming, Skip Krake and Dick Duff off his protected list while Los Angeles Kings dropped forwards Doug Robinson and Larry Mickey, defenceman Matt Ravlich and goalie Wayne Rutledge and Jack Norris from theirs.

All of which should make for a livelier session than Monday's inter-league draft which saw four players drafted by NHL teams from their Western and American Hockey League counterparts at a price of $30,000 a player. The draft price for a player chosen in the intra-league draft is $40,000.

The biggest news in the inter-league draft meetings was Pittsburgh Penguins' acquisition of goaltender Roy Edwards from Detroit Red Wings. The Wings tried unsuccessfully to waive Edwards out of the league, but the Penguins grabbed him for the $30,000 waiver price.

Edwards suffered a skull fracture last December and only last week announced he was retiring from hockey because of recurring headaches and dizziness.

But Pittsburgh executive director Jack Riley said he figures the retirement story was a smokescreen put out by the Wings so no other NHL club would claim the 24-year-old goalie in today's intra-league session.

Other activity saw California Golden Seals claim goalie Gary Kurt from Cleveland Barons of the AHL. To make room for Kurt, the Golden Seals transferred netminder Bob Sneddon to Cleveland.

TIM HORTON

Detroit claimed goalie Andy Brown from Baltimore Clippers of the AHL to replace Edwards, while the Canucks took forward Ivy Spencer from the AHL's Tidewater Wings and St. Louis Blues grabbed goaltender Jim McLeod from Portland Buckaroos of the WHL.

Veteran goalie Glenn Hall was placed on waivers by the Blues during the session, but no one picked him up.

Earlier in the day, NHL referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison announced that the league's rules committee approved legislation aimed at strengthening league efforts to stop bench-clearing by players.

The legislation will contain the rule that the first player to leave the players' bench or the penalty box to join a fight on the ice at the time of the infraction will receive a game misconduct penalty.

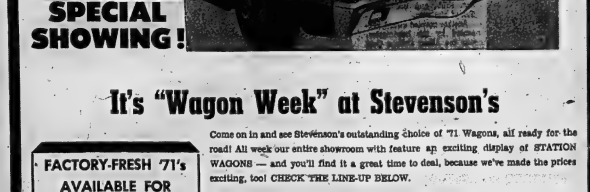
From now on, however, the first identifiable player to leave his bench or the penalty box to join an altercation will receive a game misconduct as well as costing his team a bench minor.

Any other players who follow the leader over the boards and incur a minor, major or misconduct penalty for subsequent actions on the ice will receive a game misconduct penalty.

A game misconduct carries an automatic $100 fine, with the automatic sentence subject to review by league president Clarence Campbell, who may take further disciplinary action.

The rules committee also agreed that in future, all penalties incurred by goalkeepers must be served by a player on the ice at the time of the infraction. Previously, a fringe player could be sent down from the player's bench to sit out the goalie's penalty.

The duties of the linesmen were also enlarged. They now are empowered to report to the referee the circumstances of a player deliberately displacing the net to prevent a goal from being scored. The infraction carries a minor penalty.



A goalie who knocks the net from its anchors on a breakaway will face the shooter anyway. The committee has decided that a penalty shot will be awarded to the advancing player under these circumstances.

Juniors Lose Grip

Rollins Construction were down at times, but in the end it was the Ellis Juniors who were counted out, in their Commercial Softball League contest last night.

The Juniors jumped on Rollins' hurler Wayne McConnell for a pair of runs in the second inning on singles by John Campbell and Peter Stalikovich and a two-RBI double by opposing pitcher Ron Rodgers.

The Juniors added another tally in the top of the third before Rollins was able to get untracked vajak a four-run outburst in the bottom of the inning.

Wayne McTaggart capped the inning with a two-run homer for Rollins after a single, a fielder's choice and two errors had plated a pair of runs for the Construction men.

They picked up a pair of insurance markers in the fifth when Cliff Soak opened with a triple that chased Rodgers and brought on Ted Waite in relief. McTaggart continued his clutch hitting with an RBI-single and later scored on a sacrifice fly.

Rodgers gave up six hits, while striking out two and not walking a batter in the four innings that he worked. Waite allowed a pair of safeties, while fanning one and showing flawless control in his relief stint.

McConnell fired five-hit ball to pick up the win striking out ten batters and also failing to issue a free pass.

McTaggart slugged a homer and single for Rollins, while Carl Boomhower picked up a pair of singles. Other hits went to Scott, McConnell, Ralph Plane and Jerry Hill.

John Campbell singled twice for the Juniors, with Rodgers, Stalikovich and John Sutherland getting the other hits.

For Openers

Tyendinaga Township Reeve Carman Gibson took his first fling at golf at Monday's official opening of the Belleville Golf and Country Club. Some 100 guests attended the official opening of the RR 1 Marysville course, which has been open to the golfing public since May 15.

Now It's Official!

The Belleville Golf and Country Club was opened Monday, two weeks and 1,990 green fees after divots were first taken from its fairways.

About 100 invited guests acted a reception in the RR 1 Marysville clubhouse and were welcomed by hosts Mr. and Mrs. Earl Johnson.

Manager Brian Rosch said the club, which was opened to the golfing public May 15, only six months after ground was first broken on the site, already has 128 members and is averaging about 50 green fee players daily.

Buffalo Sabres Protect Mavety

It's not been unusual for Bellevillians to closely follow the fortunes of the National Hockey League's Chicago Black Hawks, what with Point Anne's illustrious Hull family.

Now Larry Mavety has given local hockey buffs cause to keep an eye on Buffalo Sabres.

The Belleville junior hockey product, purchased by Punch Imlach's new NHL entry in February, was one of 20 players named Monday on the Sabres' protected list for today's intra - league draft proceedings in Montreal.

The Sabres purchased the rugged defenceman from Denver, but he played out the season for the Spurs, leading the Western League club with 63 assists, and finishing second in team scoring with 83 points.

Mavety, who turned 29 last month, was also named to the Western Hockey League's second all - star team for the second straight season.

The 1970-71 campaign was Mavety's fourth in the WHL, the last three with Denver after breaking in with the old Vancouver Canucks.

Shy Coaches

The Belleville Kinsmen Track Club was looking for adult support, which it got, and experiepced coaching, which it didn't get, at its organizational meeting last week.

The track team received word from the local Kinsmen club that they would sponsor the venture for the third consecutive year, and a number of people volunteered to help in executive capacities.

However experienced coaches are still required to head up the program. Anyone who is well - acquainted with track and field, and who would be willing to help with the coaching duties, is asked to attend a meeting this Wednesday night at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street. It will get under way at 7.30 p.m.

Rose Thorn In Losers' Side

Danny Rose proved to be a thorn in the side of the Harbor Marine tykes last night as he pitched the Kinsmen Bobcats to a 16-11 Minor Softball Association win.

The Kinsmen pitcher hurled a strong game fanning a total of 10 batters. He received excellent support from catcher Peter Frisbee who played a strong defensive game.

In other the book, Steve Paquet notched 13 strikouts to lead the Kinsman Hawks to an 8-4 win over Gib Wake Trailer Sales, while A and W Drive In came up with a 20-16 decision against Malcolm Brothers.

Brian Doornbos cracked a double and two singles to provide backup for Ron Begley's 16 strikeout barring effort as the Stephen License squirts stopped Wray's Furniture 10-2.

Belleville Came Back

Belleville's entry in the Quinte Junior Lacrosse League contained to slips in the last period, pumping in four goals to stop Cobourg 5 - 4 Monday.

Goals by Jim Lennox, Greg Scarlett and defencemen Tom Helm and John Whalen broke open a tight defensive game which saw the visiting Cobourg team carry a 2-1 lead into the final frame.

Joe Weymark scored the first goal for Belleville, who drew 10 of the game's 17 penalties.

Cobourg scorers were Paul Smith, Paul Turkington, Vince Condie and Tom MacDonald.

McHugh Accepted Dare, Raced Cycles Ever Since

It seems somehow fitting that one of the most daring competitors in the field of motorcycle racing began his career on a dare.

In 1947 a youthful Don McHugh answered the taunts of his Georgetown friends by entering a motorcycle race, and he's been racing vere since.

The veteran competitor, who is reported to have claimed that "I couldn't tighten a spark plug" has always had the necessary skill and daring to warrant a factory sponsorship, which frees him from the duties of mechanical repairs.

McHugh, who has won four national dirt track championships since 1949, will be one of the featured performers at the benefit races to be held at the Quinte Exhibition track Sunday.

The races which are sponsored jointly by the Belleville Fire Department and the Picton Pushers Motorcycle club to help fight muscular dystrophy will begin at 1.30 p.m., with competition in Junior 250 and 500 cc as well as the 250 and 750 expert classes.

Datsun 1200: A little beauty goes a long way.

Depending on how you drive, Datsun 1200 goes about twice as far on a gallon of gas as a standard domestic car. Impressive.

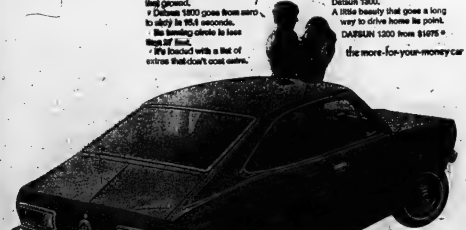
But there's a good deal more to an economy car than great gas mileage. Where's important is how the car behaves while it's covering all that ground.

Datsun 1200 goes from zero to sixty in 15.4 seconds.

Its turning circle is less than 31 feet.

It's stocked with a list of extras that don't cost extra.

And it comes in a choice of Sedan (The Fastback costs a little more, but then, it looks a little sharper.)



Datsun 1200. It's pretty, it's powerful, it's fun ... and it's economical.

Test-drive it at your nearby Datsun dealer today.

Losing Pitcher Claims Umps 0-for-4

ATLANTA (CP) — Ted Simmons got what he considered an undeserved chance to drive in the winning run Monday night in St. Louis Cardinals' 7-6 win over Atlanta Braves.

In the only other National League game, Willie Stargell's 18th home run sparked Pittsburgh Pirates to an 11-6 victory over Chicago Cubs.

There were no American league games scheduled.

The Cardinal victory enabled them to maintain their half game lead in the NL's East Division.

"The umpires were 0-for-4," said losing pitcher Bob Priddy of Atlanta.

The Cardinals, who tied the game with a four-run ninth, tallied the winning run on Simmons' 10th inning single after his busted pop fly was ruled foul by umpire Mel Steiner, who said Priddy had not touched the ball before it squirted into foul territory.

WILLIE STARGELL

Priddy said after the game he had, indeed, got his glove on the ball, Simmons agreed.

Priddy disputed Steiner's first call of the inning that Matty Alou had been hit by a pitch.

"That ball bounced before it hit him," Priddy charged.

Alou stole second after the bunt attempt and then scored when Simmons laced a single past first.

Priddy claimed that Alou was out at second on the stolen base and that Jose Cardenal was out later in the inning on what was ruled an infield single.

The latter play brought a heated argument from Atlanta first baseman Orlando Cepeda who was ejected by umpire Bob Engel.

The Braves, using four hits each by Hank Aaron, Ralph Garr and Zoilo Versailles, coasted into the ninth with a 6-2 lead. Right-hander Ron Reed, who had held the Cards to five, hits, was touched for four before Priddy replaced him.

Ted Simmons knocked Reed out of the game with a two-run double after two were out. Jerry McMorrow greeted Priddy with a two-run double on an 0-2 pitch to tie it.

Former Grid Great Prime Candidate for Baseball Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Varney of Harvard, best remembered for a catch he made on the football field, is considered one of the best catches available in the major league baseball draft which began a two-day run today.

Varney has proved particularly elusive, having been drafted six times in the last five years but stubbornly refused to sign while he finished his schooling at the Ivy League university.

Now, however, Varney is ready for baseball.

Varney could be a dream for the club that drafts him. Although he is best remembered for the two-point conversion he caught in 1968 to give Harvard a 29-29 tie with Yale, his talents are best suited for baseball.

A 6-foot-3, 220-pounder, Varney is a catcher—a top-priority item in any draft—and a heavy hitter who batted .391 with 27 runs batted in while leading Harvard to 24 victories this season.

Boston's 'Yaz' Biggest Favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, Boston Red Sox' brilliant left fielder, is the top vote-getter in the early American League balloting for starting berths in the July 13 all-star game and other established veterans lead the way at every position.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI

First returns in the country-wide poll of baseball fans, released Monday by commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office, show Yastrzemski leading all candidates with 31,645 votes.

He is followed in the outfield voting by Tony Oliva of Minnesota Twins, the current AL batting and home-run pace-setter, and Baltimore Orioles' Frank Robinson.

Behind Yastrzemski in the over-all balloting are two Orioles, first baseman Boog Powell with 28,458 votes and third baseman Brooks Robinson, with 27,814.

Other leaders, by position, are second baseman Rod Carew of Minnesota, shortstop Luis Aparicio of Boston and catcher Bill Freehan of Detroit Tigers.

Reds Don't Run For Gary Nolan

CINCINNATI (AP) — The way Gary Nolan's luck has been running, he will probably have to pitch a shutout against the Astros in Houston tonight to win the game.

GARY NOLAN

"If that's what it takes to win, I guess that's what a pitcher is going to have to do," said the Cincinnati Reds right-hander.

Nolan has been tagged with losses in the last three games although he has yielded only four earned runs and 12 hits in 23 innings in the contests. Meanwhile, the Reds produced one run in each of two of the games and were victims of a 1-0 no-hitter by Ken Holtzman of Chicago Cubs in the most recent outing.

"That's part of baseball," said the 23-year-old Nolan.

"These things happen. I just hope to pitch well and keep us in the game."

Bad luck is really nothing new to Nolan because in 1967, his first year in the majors, he was involved in four 1-0 games and came out on the short end three times. Despite that, he finished his rookie year with a 14-8 mark and a 2.58 earned-run average.

The next year, Nolan's luck turned worse and arm problems sidelined him before the Reds sent him back to their Indianapolis Triple A farm club. He wound up 1968 with a 8-4 mark and 2.40 ERA but in 1969, he also spent part of the year with the farm team because of arm trouble again.

In 1970, he won 18 and lost 7 and his ERA was 3.26. But this year he now stands 3-6. The Reds have produced only 14 runs in 11 games he has started.

UIC Doesn't Waste Opportunity

Union Carbide didn't slip far, but any slip at all was enough to cost them a share of the Industrial Softball League lead as the Unemployment Insurance Commission continued their winning ways Monday night.

The defending champion Union Carbide squad was forced to stage a two-run rally in the bottom of the seventh to earn a 4-3 13 split with CNR. The linksmen appeared to take command with a nine - run explosion in the fourth that gave them a 10-5 lead, but the Bakelite batters kept chipping away at the CN lead.

Brian Plumbe hurled ten-hit ball for CNR, walking nine and striking out three batters. Jimmy Day started for Union Carbide before giving way to Ken Osbourne in the top of the sixth inning. Between them they served up nine safeties and two free passes while striking out six batters.

Don Anderson struck the key blow for Union Carbide with a pinch double in the seventh inning that drove in the tying runs. Jack Hughes rapped a pair of doubles, while Day and Marshall had two hits each.

Rob McMurter and Ron Conlon each collected a pair of safeties for CNR. UIC had little trouble disposing of their VL Card opponents scoring seven times in the first two innings and then coasting to a 12-4 win.

Hamilton hurled the win although nine hits and four walks, while striking out two batters. Snell gave up 12 safeties and three free passes for Card Construction.

The Intelligencer, stayed within range of the leaders

Terry Hiddleston cracked a homer and single for the Intelligencer, while Culloden added a round tripper. Holoway clubbed a homer and single for Meads with Wayne Sterma also hitting a circuit clout.

AODO staged a come-from-behind 13-10 win over Delora Stellite to move past the idle Morch Mariners into fourth place. The American Optical squad scored eight times in the sixth frame to gain the win.

Dennis Cheeseraux survived 17 hits to gain the win, while Gary Matier allowed 13 for the losers.

Paul Nobes' smashed two doubles and a single for AODO with Ron McCoy, Feliz Sagoff and Alber Vanclief socking two hits each.

Kingston Win Far from Popular

Kingston's senior baseball entry in the Lakeshore Intermediate League failed to endear themselves to Belleville umpires, fans or pitcher as they hammered out a convincing, if somewhat lengthy 16-3 win over the Kinsmen Juniors.

The Kingston visitors pounded a quartet of Belleville hurlers for 11 hits in the contest played at the fairgrounds to leave little doubt about he outcome of the issue. In the course of their victory, three Kingston players were ejected from the game, which took three hours to complete because of numerous delays.

Starter Terry McTaggart ran into trouble in the second inning for the Kinsmen as six hits and a single sandwiched around Dave Gilhooley's bases-clearing double produced four runs.

Garnie Adams came on to strike out the next two batters and get himself out of the one-out jam, but was forced to retire from the game the next inning because of arm troubles.

The home team's only serious scoring threat occurred in the bottom of the second when Steve Bedard led off the inning with a right field. After a walk to Paul Hall, Hall attempted to score when pitcher Lyle Murphy's pick-off attempt at first went wide at second.

Hall advanced to third on a single by Barry Culkin and scored on a sacrifice fly.

It was the last serious threat of the night for the Kinsmen, however, as Murphy scattered five hits over the nine-inning route. The Kingston hurler walked three batters and fired third strikes past 14.

Ted Shaw took over from Adams and gave a respectable performance after a three-year pitching absence, giving up seven runs in the four innings that he worked. Stan Brooks took over in the seventh frame and was touched for the final five runs.

Three To Tango

The Cablevue tadpole pitching staff was 10 feet tall last night. Of course that would be the combined height of the three hurlers who combined to fire a one-hit shutout in Belleville Minor Baseball Association action last night.

Mike Leger, Lorne Andrews and Louis Crawford pulled off the pitching masterpiece against Cablevue in the eight leading their team to a 13-0 victory.

Bob's Sports doubled up Motor and Chrysler 8-4 in the other tadpole bout with Kevin Jones and Bob Hopkins combining 10 strikeouts between them. Tim Turner, David Malkawa and Chris Clayton recorded 17 whiffs despite being tagged with the loss.

In bantam action CJBQ Expos spread the hitting honors around as they edged Trenton Lions 10-8. Gordon Male doubled for the only extra base hit for the Expos who had nine different players with a single each.

Devereaux came up with an 8 win over Vader's Datsun with a triple and two singles, by Wagar showing the way.

Clyde Rogers and Allan Young managed 15 strikeouts between them as they helped Farrell Motors preevees to a 9-6 victory over Legon 99.

Flyers High

The Flyers peewees got the biggest "kick" out of the opening of the Minor Soccer Association earlier this year as the receiving end of an 11-0 trouncing by the Golden Mile Peterbilts.

McCullan booted three goals for the Olympics with Thiffault and Tupper getting a pair and single markers going to Edwards, Marta, Marineau and McSherry.

In the other peewee bout, Bob's Auto Olympics downed Penguin Olympics 3-0. Kolton once for the winners.

CP Head Suggests Canada Be Reorganized Regionally

TORONTO (CP) — A suggestion that Canada have fewer but more powerful provinces and lower tariffs to reduce regional conflict was made Monday at the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

N. R. Crump, chairman of Canadian Pacific Ltd., said Canadians should review the country's East-West economic development "and ask ourselves whether we are now strong enough as a nation to gradually seek a re-orientation of our economic policy."

Mr. Crump, in his speech, proposed three specific changes:

—"Allowing Quebec and Ontario to move fully integrate their economies into the heartland of North America, so reducing their dependence on western and Maritime markets;

—"Increasing the attractiveness of imported manufactured goods in Western Canada at the Maritimes;

—"Permitting Canada, and particularly Western Canada, to more fully integrate with the Pacific rim countries, which are more and more becoming their natural trading partners."

"... While high tariffs on manufactured goods were appropriate and necessary in the forging of a nation, they are contributing to the economic pressures that threaten to split it."

Mr. Crump said he has become convinced "that we will have to look seriously at further political and economic decentralization of the government function if we are to overcome our present difficulties."

He said there should be a willingness to contemplate a further strengthening in the relative power of the provinces as compared with the federal government.

Serious attention should be given to recasting Canadian political organization into a smaller number of larger more viable units.

"For a country of less than 21 million people to have 11 parliaments and two territorial governments plus a myriad of local governments and authorities verges on the ludicrous."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Much Can Be Done For Arthritic Folk

Remember when most people thought, "What's the use of going to the doctor to have heart trouble treated? There's nothing anyone can do for a bad heart. And when people said, "Cancer? There's no chance of getting well. Why get up for nothing?"

Medical education has at last conquered practically everybody that there's much that can be done to save heart and cancer patients. However, another misconception still prevails: that little or nothing can be done for arthritis. Why bother seeing the doctor? Taking aspirin is easier.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am only in my 30s and have a severe case of arthritis in my hands and now beginning in my knees, too. I have a girl friend who says my symptoms are like a case of rheumatoid arthritis she has seen in a member of her own family. She says I ought to see an arthritis specialist.

But I've been taking aspirin every day, which helps control the pain. Is there anything a doctor can do for arthritis except prescribe aspirin or some other drug? — Mrs. O.

COMMENT: As there are at least 100 varieties of arthritis, I can't give any specific advice for your problem — you will realize why I can't base it on a well-meaning diagnosis by your girl friend.

However, I'll offer some generalities. Rheumatoid arthritis, although most common between 35 and 45, knows no age limits. It's possible for a 6-month-old baby to have it, as well as an 80-year-old patient. A common early symptom is fatigue, followed by inflammation of the tissues in and around the joints, producing pain, swelling and stiffness.

By going to the doctor you will have your specific diagnosis.

Yes, it's possible that he may also agree that all you need is aspirin, but it's likely there will be other methods and modalities.

For example, paraffin baths — which coat the joints and increase circulation. Hot packs containing special chemicals. Dry heat (electric bulbs under a "cradle").

But what is perhaps most important of all — and a good reason for visiting a doctor early: prevention of deformities. Here's where splints, surgeries and occupational therapy come in. Sometimes early surgery can prevent serious trouble.

Mind you, I'm not downgrading such a valuable drug as aspirin, nor do I believe that it deserves the aspersion: "poor man's arthritis." Aspirin may be your answer, but don't take upon yourself the responsibility of treating yourself. If it's true — as the saying goes — that a doctor who treats himself "has a fool for a patient," wouldn't you agree that your putting off necessary treatment without even an

Bonarlaw Personals

BONARLAW — Bishop Clarke and Mrs. Clarke of James Bay paid a visit to St. Mark's Anglican Church on Tuesday evening and attended the peculiar supper. Later alides were shown by Bishop Clarke of James Bay and Moosonee. The Bishop was thanked by Ernest Silles for his address.

Mrs. H. J. Barlow spent the week end with Mrs. A. Watson, Campbellford who is ill at her home.

Mrs. H. Mumby attended the postmasters' convention convention at Hamilton.

Ray Wellman graduated as a forest technician from Sir Sandford Fleming College, Lindsay and has accepted a position at Whale River.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat King and family of London spent the past week with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Ed King before leaving for his permanent posting in Alberta.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Politicians Twist Truth

The sight of a politician asking manufacturers to "document" all their advertising claims is something on the order of Jack the Ripper urging stronger laws against the crime of spitting on the sidewalk.

No doubt Sen. George McGovern has the highest of motives in his proposed bill to force "corrective advertising" of all advertising claims. But why doesn't he apply it to his own field first of all?

If a candidate for public office were compelled by law — and by threat of a suit for damages and possibly imprisonment — to make no claims, allegations, insinuations, comparisons and promises that could not be proved, confirmed and guaranteed, the whole structure of political campaigning would collapse in American life.

When a Presidential candidate tells us he has a "sure formula" for getting us out of a war more quickly, painlessly than his opponent, he should either produce his evidence or be prosecuted for committing fraud against the gullibility of the electorate.

When a candidate for any office rants against "government expense and waste," and then builds up a larger deficit than the men he excoriated, what punishment should be meted out for this palpably false claim? His hope is that the voters will forget, as they usually do.

The commercial advertiser may be sometimes guilty of what the Romans tactfully called the suggestio falsi or the suppressio veri — the indirect falsehood, or the concealment of all the facts — but your ordinarily successful politician is a thousand times more often indictable for the falsi crimen, or the lie direct.

If our public figures, who are supposed to be running for the benefit of the commonwealth, are permitted to engage in such mass desecration of the facts, with no effective restraint upon their lurid powers, then why should we expect private entrepreneurs, who are frankly in the business for gain, to adopt a loftier or more rigorous set of standards for puffing their products into public favor?

In any culture, private morality takes its cue from public morality: we behave with the attitude our leaders permit themselves; and thus there is little crime of any kind in a country where the leaders in public life are respected, as honest, honorable and truthful men. Contrariwise, if we see that they have succeeded by deceitful stratagems, such become our own recipes for personal and commercial success.

When Congress passes a law making it a crime, with biting penalties, for a candidate or office-holder to make claims or promises that he cannot substantiate, then we will have achieved some moral authority to demand the same integrity in our headache pills and our detergents.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 9

Your birthday today: Pragmatic necessity characterizes the year ahead. Much that you have held onto for sentimental reasons is left behind as you think bigger, cope with broader changes, develop greater spiritual resources. Personal responsibility increases, so you may as well do what you can to make the best of it.

ARIES (Mar. 1 — Apr. 19): Almost nobody is going to do things your way today, so expect nothing and give them room to sail past you on their crosscurrents.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Postpone drastic action even where your decisions are quite firm. Accept slow motion for the moment, long enough for a pattern to complete itself.

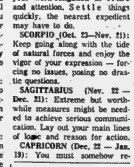
GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Do what you must, acting on your first impulse. Plenty of discussions dissects all the reasons later, so don't bother with preliminary talks.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Allow for differences and for communal hunger; use your patience to preserve relationships.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Tact and diplomacy are part of the basic requirements in the various standoffs that are indicated. Take the time to listen carefully while quietly persisting in your efforts to get routines fulfilled.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You wind up leading for a change, perhaps where you are not certain, but setting the pace and direction. Be specific, define your doubts as you go, ask for help but not guidance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Realistic necessity characterizes the year ahead. Much that you have held onto for sentimental reasons is left behind as you think bigger, cope with broader changes, develop greater spiritual resources. Personal responsibility increases, so you may as well do what you can to make the best of it.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Keep options open with the side of natural forces and enjoy the vigor of your expression — for the moment, posing no drastic questions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Extreme but worthwhile measures might be needed to achieve serious communication. Lay out your main lines of logic and reason for action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You must somehow reconcile your plans with others and go on in teamwork, despite the results of yesterday. An early start is very helpful, likewise an early turn from work to family and social diversions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Accept guidelines, whether set by circumstances, your own previous plans or people that just happen to be involved. Thus time and energy is saved.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Persist in your own path and according to your own intuition. Others will find their divergent routes recrossing and come back to compare notes.

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another contained "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and greatly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form under Preparation H.

Wells Statements Just 'Ideas' -- Davis

Single People Not Required to Move to Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Statements by Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, that unemployed, single persons who refuse to move anywhere in Ontario for a job should be denied welfare are not government policy, Premier William Davis said Monday.

Under opposition questioning in the Ontario legislature, the premier said the statements were "ideas for consideration" and that the minister was merely "presenting several ideas in a speech he made."

Mr. Wells, who was not in the legislature, made the statements Sunday night to the Ontario Municipal Welfare Officers' annual convention in Thunder Bay.

Mr. Wells said if a single man or woman refuses to move to a job "I feel we are justified, in fact compelled, to deny welfare assistance."

Mr. Davis told James Trotter (L—Toronto Parkdale) and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, that no assessment has been made of how many jobs are available and how the province would transport unemployed singles to the jobs.

The premier said Mr. Well's speech contained a number of possibilities of how the welfare problem might be approached, but opposition members said the minister made his statements without backing them up or doing sufficient research.

When Mr. Lewis asked what percentage of the 17,400 unemployed singles refused to take jobs that were offered to them, Mr. Davis replied: "There are a number."

The premier said one of the problems with Mr. Wells's suggestion was that Manpower offices in one city don't always know what jobs are available in another centre.

He denied opposition comments that Mr. Wells' remarks had embarrassed him.

In an interview outside the house, Mr. Lewis said the premier "is dissociating himself publicly with the mindless sort of things Tom Wells said."

The NDP leader accused the minister of "using youth and the unemployed without any documentation at all" and stating "propositions which are unworkable."

Mr. Lewis said it was wrong for Mr. Wells to single out the unemployed singles group without any evidence at all.

"Surely he isn't pretending that all had refused jobs," he said.

—Premier Davis said the federal government should not turn over social security programs to any province unless it made them available to all provinces.

Parasite Case Aired In Court

MONTREAL (CP) — The case of a former graduate student in parasitology at Macdonald College, accused of feeding his four room-mates parasite worm eggs, came to court Monday.

Eric Kranz, 34, is alleged to have administered infective worms on or about Feb. 1, 1970.

All four fellow students, sharing a house with Kranz near the suburban Ste. Anne de Bellevue College, became ill within a week following Kranz's eviction from the house for a $16.66 debt.

Dr. John Harold, the victims' attending physician at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, said the boys would have died if the parasitic pneumonia from which all were suffering had not been finally diagnosed four days after the first patiet was admitted on Feb. 11.

The victims, Richard Davis, 25, of Napanee, Ont., Davis Fisk, 25, of St. Paul d'Abbotsford, Que., William Butler, 22, of Richmond, Que., became increasingly ill in the college infirmary.

Fern, the only victim to testify so far in the trial, said difficulties over an alleged indebtedness by Kranz led to the determination of the group to have Kranz evicted from the house.

Fern said he heard Kranz threaten to get "six of the toughest boys" to assert his rights.

Finally on Feb. 3 the group called police to have Kranz evicted.

The witness said he became ill a week after the eviction of Kranz and he suffered from a "shortness of breath." Davis was already in the college infirmary at that time.

The case continues today.

New Drug Available In Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Cyanamid of Canada Ltd. said Monday a powerful antibiotic to fight venereal disease as well as a wide variety of other infections is being made available for medical use for the first time.

John Bertrand, manager of the Lederle division of Cyanamid of Canada Ltd., said Monday the new antibiotic—minocin—is being made available in Canada by prescription following approval of the food and drug directorate in Ottawa.

Canada thus becomes the first country to have access to the new drug, developed during the past 10 years and at a cost of $7 million by Lederle Laboratories at Pearl River, N.Y.

Sadat Sees Battle Soon

CAIRO (Reuter) — President Anwar Sadat has told the Egyptian army to be ready for battle before the end of the year.

In a speech to soldiers along the Suez canal, extracts from which were published today, he told the troops: "The battle will end one way or the other in the year 1971."

The Egyptian leader renewed his Feb. 4 offer to reopen the Suez canal, and said he is prepared to enter into another formal ceasefire to allow clearance operations accompanied by Israeli evacuation.

In Jerusalem today, Israeli Premier Golda Meir said her country is still ready to reach an agreement on reopening the canal but that recent statements by Sadat showed Egypt's position has become more intransigent.

She reiterated Israel's position that its troops would pull back from the waterway only if there were guarantees that Egyptian soldiers would not cross over and that no complete Israeli withdrawal would necessarily follow.

Mrs. Meir appealed to the United States to supply Israel with new weapons, especially aircraft, without delay to rectify the arms balance upset by Soviet supplies to Egypt.

Guns Meant For Ulster

LONDON (CP) — Police, in a massive swoop, have uncovered a huge arms cache near the Ascot race track and published reports suggest the weapons were surplus RCAF equipment destined for clandestine operations in Northern Ireland.

Ascot is in the London commuter belt about 30 miles west of here. Next week it will be crowded with thousands of spectators including the Queen at the opening of the Royal Ascot racing week.

Police declined to disclose full information on the raid except that the search took place Tuesday and that firearms and components were found.

However, the London Evening News, in a headline report, said the weapons, found about one mile from Ascot, included some 300 machine-guns. It said the weapons were 10 years old and were surplus RCAF equipment, all well greased and in perfect working order.

A Canada House spokesman, asked for comment on the story, said he had no information and that as far as he knew British police had not been in touch with Canada on the matter.

The paper said that Irish extremists operating in Britain are being sought by police.

It said 50 detectives, using dogs, moved into the wealthy Ascot stockbroker area and swooped on a warehouse, a nursing home and private homes. They found the weapons in a building in a wooded area.

In Ottawa, a defence department spokesman said the department never sells arms. Any surplus equipment is turned over to the Crown Assets Disposal Corp., for disposal, but in many cases there is simply a paper transaction and the equipment remains in defence stockpiles.

If the equipment was Canadian Forces surplus, and the spokesman said he was unaware whether it was, it could possibly have been stolen.

"There are very stringent restriction on just who buys arms through the Crown corporation. They don't sell to just anybody."

Assassination Creates Crisis

SANTIAGO (AP) — Chile's left-wing government was plunged into a major crisis today following the assassination of a former vice-president and outspoken anti-leftist.

Edmundo Perez Zujovic, who as interior minister was No. 2 man in President Eduardo Frei's Christian Democratic administration, was ambushed Tuesday by three young men who police said were believed to be members of an ultra-left extremist organization, the Organized Vanguard of the People.

Quebec Premier Won't Tie Hands Before Parley

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec will not "tie its hands" at next week's federal-provincial constitutional conference with any commitment to insist on a complete separation of powers before agreeing to a constitutional amendment formula, Premier Robert Bourassa told the Quebec national assembly Tuesday.

For History Of Constitutional Negotiations See Page 7

He was replying to a resolution calling for such a commitment, proposed by Union Nationale Leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand. The resolution was defeated.

Mr. Bourassa said it would be realistic to demand that the entire problem of separation of powers be solved before agreeing to a formula which will allow the patriation of the constitution to Canada.

Mr. Bourassa said that his government was much more "flexible" than those of his predecessors and had helped negotiations on the constitution make considerable headway during the last year.

He said he was willing to accept federal administration and financing in certain sectors of the social security field.

Mr. Bourassa noted that Quebec is negotiating for greater authority in the field of social affairs with Ottawa and said that it was inadvisable at this time to release the texts of letters exchanged with Ottawa on the question.

He said that the present system of dealing with problems of social affairs does not permit the best use of public funds.

If the problem of jurisdiction over welfare policy is resolved at the Victoria conference, he said, "we will have solved for the moment the most important problem in federal-provincial relations between Quebec and Ottawa."

If the Bertrand motion was accepted, he said, his hands would be tied because even if an amendment formula could improve the situation he could not accept it unless the whole problem of distribution of powers was solved.

Tax Reform Won't Hurt

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Tuesday night that worried corporation executives can breathe a little easier over next week's new tax legislation because "it is nothing to fear."

In a speech to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Trudeau tiptoed carefully through a broad outline of his thinking on relationships between economic and social issues without once getting into specifics of the June 18 budget proposals.

Mr. Trudeau conceded there had been "an uneasiness in the business community" over tax legislation, lack of federal policy on foreign investment and unfinished formulation of "an all-encompassing energy policy."

"The first of those areas of uncertainty will disappear with the introduction next week of new tax legislation," Mr. Trudeau told 1,000 persons at the CMA banquet.

"The legislation is not something to fear. The Canadian dream of a socially-conscious, developed economy is on the way, attained without the presence of a healthy manufacturing industry.

But Storm Predicted

It was a night for careful words and polite head-table conversation in what one delegate to the CMA's 104th annual convention described as "the quiet before the storm—and there'll be a storm on budget day."

Among the most careful and polite of those present were dozens of uniformed policemen and others in plain clothes who rode herd on three groups of demonstrators in front of the Royal York Hotel, where the banquet was held.

About 50 members of the Young Socialists and the League for Socialist Action trooped up and down in front of the main entrance waving placards and chanting slogans and obscenities.

A number of young women chanted pro-abortion slogans. In the midst of it all was a group of people opposed to abortion who stomped grim-faced and silent, wedged between two tribes of their ideological enemies.

There were no incidents and the groups broke up after about two hours of demonstrating. Security around the prime minister and the hotel was tight as police guarded against a possible repetition of the violent demonstration that occurred in front of the hotel during Mr. Trudeau's last visit here in March.

Inside, Mr. Trudeau was telling the manufacturers that the question of foreign ownership of Canadian resources and industries "has never been faced by governments in Canada in a systematic fashion."

"Even now, the mere mention of the subject arouses an intense emotional reaction in several parts of the country," he said. "The point is that now, finally, the question has been asked and the government is committed to proposing a policy."

In the field of energy resources, previous governments asked only two questions: How much and how fast could they be exported? "We committed to converting from a basic market policy to "an industrial policy based on the creation of Canadian jobs and human benefits."

"We do not expect to produce a once-and-forever plan, but we are offering leadership in a hitherto no-man's land."

Cholera Epidemic Is Checked But Camp Conditions Worse

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — A human flooddike of East Pakistani refugees in India today neared an estimated six million. Officials in the most-affected states, West Bengal, said a virulent cholera epidemic among refugees had been checked to some extent but conditions in refugee camps are worsening.

State Chief Minister Ajoy Kumar Mukherjee told reporters Tuesday of the abatement of the epidemic as officials put the death toll to date at 2,187.

But unofficial reports reaching the health ministry in Calcutta put the deaths at 4,000—and this figure was only about half that given by diplomatic sources in Calcutta.

Health officials said there is no way of stopping cholera spreading throughout West Bengal during the coming monsoon months.

One official said: "We can't hope to get rid of it. The only thing we can do is try to contain it."

Mass inoculations of refugees in the big camps outside Calcutta are being carried out nonstop by medical teams.

The small outbreak of the disease within the city itself appears under control but conditions in the camps are getting worse as the refugee flood continues.

Officials said the Indian government planned to put up several tent camps in West Bengal to accommodate 1.3 million refugees.

Mukherjee said the problem caused by the influx was colossal. Tens of thousands were living in the open because of a shortage of tarpaulins, and normal administrative work in the border regions had been disrupted by mounting pressure from the refugees.

Armed reserve police were called out to prevent rioting between near starving East Pakistanis and Indian residents at Barasat, only 15 miles north of Calcutta.

Barasat, an agricultural, jute and cotton weaving centre not far from Calcutta's Dum Dum International Airport, has a normal population around 90,000.

But more than 300,000 predominantly-Hindu refugees have poured into the town, camping in schools, official buildings and even breaking into Moslem mosques.

Though West Bengal is largely a Hindu state, the Moslems in Barasat reacted violently when their mosques were invaded.

The reserve police turned the refugees out of the mosques and private homes but allowed them to stay in schools and government buildings.

Lawrence Seeks Costs Of Sending Medical Teams

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario cabinet will be asked today to organize and finance volunteer Ontario doctors who want to help administer vaccine to victims of a cholera epidemic in India.

Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence told the legislature Tuesday he will ask his department to calculate the cost of sending several teams and present the idea at the weekly cabinet meeting.

The suggestion came from Rev. Wally Dowdle (PC—Dufferin Simcoe) who said India has enough vaccine to quell the serious epidemic but lacks doctors. He asked for "a couple of medical teams" from Ontario.

KENNETH JOHN REYNOLDS, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reynolds, 79 First Avenue, Trenton received the degree of doctor of medicine at convocation exercises held June 5, at Queen's University. Dr. Reynolds who received his public and high school education in Trenton will intern at the Royal Columbia Hospital, New Westminster, B.C.

TRENTON (Staff) — Domtar Packaging Limited initiated Tuesday what will be a $1-million pollution control system for its large east side mill here.

Tenders were mailed out for the first phase of the project from the company's internal head offices yesterday. In this portion — valued at $500,000 — is a 25-million-gallon holding lagoon and a pilot treatment plant.

Both will be in operation by this August, with the lagoon keeping back the effluent during the late summer period of low river flow.

The pilot plant will be a large test centre composed of a 30-foot diameter aeration tank and a 60-foot square settling tank. Here researchers will analyze various pollution abatement techniques to determine the optimum variety and amount of aeration to be used in an eventual waste treatment program.

After an anticipated two years of research, the most satisfactory abatement method will be incorporated in the mammoth holding lagoon to be located across upper Marmora Street from the mill.

Steve Hesdan, manager of the Trenton Domtar plant, explained in an interview yesterday that the pilot research program is necessary because there are various aeration schemes and the best one must be practically determined.

Company laboratory technicians here have been working out a tentative program for the last month and anticipate submitting less than 10 gallons per minute to pilot treatment — eight days of aeration and 45 days of settling before releasing the brown effluent to the river.

Effluent flow from the plant is now approximately 450,000 gallons a day and the amount of suspended solids in this has increased measurably over the years.

Sam Clements, Domtar's technical control officer, reports that in makeshift experiments being carried on here now with plastic garbage cans full of waste water, researchers have managed to reduce the BOD (bio-chemical oxygen demand) levels in effluent from about 4,000 parts per million to less than 20.

Methods used in these modest experiments will be utilized in the pilot plant and the best will be fitted to the 25,000,000 gallon tank for a total abatement plan that Mr. Hesdan anticipates will reduce pollution levels by 90 per cent.

The huge lagoon will be built in the next few weeks, although its final configuration and the aeration methods to be used with it will not be determined for two years.

Meanwhile, the lagoon will be utilized as a settling tank for the plant's total "white water" flow, retaining the effluent for about six months before feeding it out into the Trent River.

One primary concern is the Ontario Water Resources Commission and, in turn, Domtar is now to find a way to cope with the low summer river levels are low. For about 45 days in midsummer, according to Domtar engineers, the Trent just does not have the capacity to assimilate all the solids spewed into it from the plant.

The lagoon will help alleviate this problem and help reduce the damaging effects of the effluent to river life to this period critically.

Plant officials expect the lagoon will be modified into a treatment system by the summer of 1974, when results of pilot plant experiments have determined its final form.

Ontario Water Resources representatives endorsed the plan Monday night in a private meeting with town council and Domtar. Municipal officials have also given their approval.

The Domtar mill, which manufactures heavy - duty paper to be used in the production of corrugated packaging materials, was cited as a major polluter of the Trent waterway in the department of energy and resources management's Lower Trent Conservation Report released in February.

Paying out $500,000 now and another half million dollars later (and a further cost of $30,000 annually to operate the system) makes the price to Domtar of meeting OWRC control standards heavy.

However, Mr. Hesdan says the price tag would have been substantially higher if the federal government had compassed various other papermaking processes, particularly the recycling of paper recognized as producing one of the most difficult types of pollution to control.

PUC Steering Clear Of Water Main Dispute

TRENTON (Staff) — The Trenton Public Utilities Commission is steering clear of the latest controversy in the Dufferin Developments saga — how developer Wasil Sidor can achieve compensation for Dufferin's use of one of his water mains through which the new subdivision will be partially supplied.

Dufferin must take water for the first 20 homes of the housing development from a line on McGill Street, built and owned by Sidor, who still retains a one-foot reserve across the end of the street.

The PUC was accused in council last week of abdicating its responsibilities in the Sidor compensation case, prompting the commission to issue a two - page press release yesterday documenting its position.

In the statement, Doug Maslow, the commission manager, says the solicitor for Dufferin, J. D. Templeman, has told the PUC by letter "your client will of course have to negotiate this matter with Sidor Construction Limited on whose property the line presently ends."

Mr. Maslow adds, he says, the PUC was "prepared to negotiate an agreement . . . for the provision of services".

However, Dufferin and Sidor have not come to terms. Mr. Sidor took his problem, in council and the PUC makes it clear it has not directly given Dufferin permission to use the Sidor line. (Nor has town council).

The expressed position of the PUC, according to the statement, is that it is not averse to any settlement arrangements arrived at by council, including acquisition of the one-foot reserve by the town, with the town compensating Sidor.

The PUC makes it clear it will "not contribute to the settlement."

Mr. Maslow adds that the commission's workforce has been inadequate to have been "involved in asking or debating the extending of the watermain to Dufferin Ave. through the one-foot reserve."

He points out that the PUC even now has not assumed ownership of these mains "for many reasons, which range from compliance with specifications to nonpayment (by Sidor) of the subdivider's portion of the cost to extend the service."

Road-closing Bylaws Passed

Two road closing bylaws have been passed by Sidney Township Council and will only require similar bylaws being passed by Hastings County Council to make the decision effective.

To allow completion of a residential building lot near Stirling, an unused north-south allowance crossing Highway 14 south of Stirling will be closed off.

The second road allowance to be closed crosses County Road Four, which runs between Trenton and Frankford.

Early Workouts Started at YMCA

The Belleville YMCA is initiating an "early bird" exercise program for overweight. The "early bird" connotation means that the exercise is carried out during the early morning hours and is designed for men whose occupations do not allow them to take part in the regular Y fitness program.

The program got under way Monday with seven of the eight businessmen initially enrolled turning up for what physical education director Jim Cleveland calls pre-conditioning workout.

The class will be carried on three mornings a week for two weeks when the participants will be hopefully ready for the regular fitness program proper.

One of the requirements for the program is a complete medical checkup.

Residents Complain Of Road Conditions

Residents of Sidney Township on old road allowances complained to council Monday night that proper speed facilities and lighting should be provided by the township.

Council explained residents on such road allowances unnecessarily suffering because subdividers haven't completed roads to township and Hydro standards or highways specifications. With the roadways brought up to standard, the township could take responsibility for road maintenance.

The solution?

"If they bring a petition of a two thirds majority of property owners stating they are willing to pay for local improvements, council could hire the roadwork done and charge the people under the local improvements act," said Reeve Jack Bush.

Residents at the council meeting were invited to submit such petitions and action would be taken.

Extinguishers To Be Available

Home fire extinguishers can now be sold by the Sidney Township Volunteer Fire Department in an attempt to provide residents with these safety devices and possibly cut down on fires before they get out of control.

Township fire commissioner Jack Bowerman told council Monday night the units are inexpensive if not bought in quantity and they could make a little money out of it."

Councillor Reg McCurdy agreed, "It would be a good idea if every householder could purchase an extinguisher. It would certainly help cut down on a lot of fires."

Mr. Cormack suggested it would be an ideal undertaking for fire prevention week.

Council approved the suggestion and suppliers will be contacted.

Influx of Youth Concerns Council

TRENTON (Staff) — The Quinte District Labor Council will seek assurance from federal government and police officials that the region can cope with a massive influx of youth expected here whether the Rock Acres Peace Festival goes ahead formally or not.

Decision to determine the degree of preparation was formulated by reports that thousands of young people will come to the site near Queensborough, if there is a festival or not. At the Belleville Supreme Court injunction hearing now underway to plot the future of the festival, organizers predict that at least 5,000 young people will turn up for the July holiday weekend event even if the courts rule the Festival illegal.

Labor council vice - president Reg Loader suggested "we have to deal with sick people who should be looking after this" rather than preventing laws as they are needed.

"Everyone's working on the assumption that a Hastings County War Measures Act can block this," Doug Lord of Belleville offered from the floor.

Labor Council to Join Highrise Protestors

TRENTON (Staff) — Members of the Quinte District Labor Council endorsed a motion here last night calling on the executive to assist ratepayers' groups on the East and West Hills of Belleville in their fights to block construction of highrise apartments.

Of particular concern to the council are projected buildings for 217 Bridge East and on the Albert College land parcel on Wellington Crescent.

"The atmosphere of the city is being destroyed . . . homeowners are being caught like rats in a maze and politicians are falling on deaf ears," said Doug Sword, of Belleville, who called the council in session.

He said that becoming involved in such an issue would be an ideal way of carrying out a recent Ontario Federation of Labor suggestion that local labor groups become involved in social issues.

"We will be only too glad to help," stated OFL president Robert Andrus, "we will teach them how to carry placards and everything else."

Vice-president Reg Loader contended that instructing the ratepayers in effective demonstration techniques would be a good idea, adding that many people will sign a petition just to get rid of the individual circulating it.

He suggested that petitions presented to city council by the ratepayers' groups would have carried more weight if fortified by "people power"— methods of which the labor council will make available to the concerned homeowners.

Mr. Andrus said saying a Belleville has become "a farce" and that authorities "bend zoning for contractors".

"When I read that Trenton does not want to be in the same position as Belleville (a reference to the town's stringent new official plan), I can understand it," concluded Belleville resident Bill Peoples.

Teachers, Board At Loggerheads

PICTON (Staff) — Salary negotiations, opened last February between Prince Edward's secondary school teachers and board of education trustees, have reached an impasse. The announcement was made Friday through a press release issued jointly by members of the secondary school teachers' negotiating committee and the Prince Edward County board of education's personnel committee.

Teachers have rejected the board's offer of an over-all increase of 3.56 per cent in their salary schedules and are continuing to request a 6.3 per cent raise.

The teachers contend they should receive salaries equal to those paid to secondary school teachers in Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties for performance of the same duties. The final offer forwarded by the Prince Edward County board of education would raise the salaries of its teachers $200 per year lower on the salary grid than their counterparts in neighboring counties.

Members of the four-man teachers' negotiating committee also have observed-operating expenditures are subsidized by the provincial government at an approximate rate of 70 per cent.

Prince Edward County school trustees have stated their maximum offer, observing budget guidelines established by the Ontario department of education and considering the local taxpayer's ability to support educational costs.

The board has offered an established annual increment of $400 to every secondary school teacher. A salary increase above this sum would be granted to every secondary teacher excluding those who have already reached their maximum and those with two years or less teaching experience.

It was suggested the majority of secondary school teachers would receive a total increase of $500, while a "good number" would receive a total increase of $700.

Fringe benefits were discussed and trustees agreed the board should pay 60 per cent of the teachers' Ontario hospitalization and Ontario Health Services Insurance plan premiums. This represents an increase of 15 per cent from the former contract. Board members also agreed to pay 50 per cent of teachers' premiums for $5,000 insurance policy. This is a new benefit and would be conditional upon 75 per cent participation. Board payment of 60 per cent of salaries for teachers on sabbatical leave and 75 per cent when a teacher is sole support of the family also was approved. This is the first time an increase to 75 per cent has been offered to the sole supporter of a family.

Chairman of the secondary school teachers' negotiating committee, Kenneth MacDonald said yesterday three-party intervention — basically conciliation, could be the next step taken by his group. Other members of the negotiating committee include Prince Edward Collegiate Institute teachers Gina Varga, David Nickerson, and Frank Slavin. A regular staff meeting will be conducted next Tuesday when "federation matters" will be discussed, according to Mr. MacDonald. He said the possibility of an impasse has been allowed for in conciliation procedure. No decision has been made yet by secondary school teachers concerning a move toward conciliation. Mr. MacDonald stated three-party intervention usually is conducted through representatives from the County Trustees Council and the Secondary School Teachers Federation.

George Flower, chairman of the Prince Edward County Board of Education said today he cannot predict what further action trustees may take concerning the present impasse.

"We don't know what the teachers will do or might do," he added.

Mr. Flower explained both mediation and arbitration remained as possible steps in resolving the stalemate reached in salary negotiations. The chairman said that present impasse does not necessarily mean further negotiations between teachers and trustees are closed.

"It could change overnight" he remarked.

Mr. Flower said he believes this is the first time since the county board's formation two years ago that secondary school teachers and board members have failed to reach a salary settlement. He revealed, however, that two years ago during secondary school teachers' salary negotiations, representatives from the Ontario Trustees' Council and the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation did meet to discuss the salary schedule.

Duration of the secondary school teachers' salary negotiating committee Kenneth MacDonald said yesterday, committee are Dorothea Carson, Ruth Hart, Clare McFaul and Douglas Caley, all members of the personnel committee.

Whisky Sludge Their Downfall

To Crack Down On Loose Dogs

Sidney Township Council Monday agreed to become more forceful in dealing with offenders of the animal control bylaws.

Township animal patrol officer Don Tucker of Stirling said at least 25 residents have absolutely refused to purchase 1971 dog licences.

The control officer told council on several occasions he had left dog tags at a resident's home in Stirling in the hope that money would be forwarded.

"I just used them for the money if it didn't arrive. . . I have to go to court," he added.

Deputy Reeve Gordon Wilman suggested council could take similar steps through the facilities of the court.

This system would also apply "for ones who have dogs running loose and refuse to keep them in," he said.

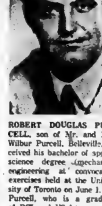
Mr. Tucker also told council that there were a large number of residents who refused to keep their animals tied. "The tranquilizer gun is out. Sure, I can catch the dog, but that's not saying it's not going to die."

At the end of 1970, the total number of dog tags sold by the township numbered 1,100. To date, only 600 have been sold.

"We're going to have to step up control," commented Reeve Jack Bush.

As of next week, Mr. Tucker will be joined by his 19-year-old son, Wayne with two vehicles providing 24 - hour animal control service for Sidney Township.

With newly - introduced regulations requiring pounds to turn over unclaimed animals after a specified waiting period, government investigators have been visiting local facilities at Stirling.



"People should be even more careful now that this law has been passed. Not every dog gets whipped off to Queen's University . . . but there's a danger," Mr. Tucker said following the council meeting.

Rush Is on to Complete Quinte Mall Services

With a mid-August opening date scheduled for the Quinte Mall in the north end of the city, the rush is on for the installation of services and roadways to serve the new plaza.

City council Monday authorized calling of tenders for the construction of 1,200 feet of Bell Blvd. west from North Front Street, and also for the widening of North Front street to provide turning lanes.

The tender will also include the installation of storm sewers on Bell Blvd. which eventually will be extended through to Sidney Street.

The city public utilities commission has already awarded the contract for the installation of the water main along Bell Blvd. to serve the new shopping plaza.

Public Utilities Manager E. L. Burnham said Tasha Company Ltd., contractors for the water main installation were expected to start work Monday and hopefully would be out of the way before the road construction commenced.

The 16-inch water main on Bell Blvd. will be extended through to Sidney Street and eventually will be continued eastward across the north end of the city to the Hillcrest area.

Closing date for the Bell Blvd. road construction tender is set for June 18 and tender approval at the next councilmeeting are expected to be up cil meeting on June 21.

Lodge Seeking Senior Citizens' Apartment Site

Conditional on the availability of a suitable site, a new senior citizens' apartment with up to 80 units could be erected next year in the immediate Belleville area by the Grand Lodge of Ontario East.

Bernard Hollinger, Foxboro, deputy treasurer of the Grand Black Chapter, said decision to build the senior citizens' apartment project was made at the spring session of the Grand Lodge held in Lindsay.

Participating in the venture would be the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, the Loyal Orange Lodge, the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, and the Royal Black Preceptory.

Member lodges from the Ontario east area would be required to raise five per cent of the total cost of the project and would be eligible for a grant of $500 per unit from the Ontario Welfare Services.

The balance of the cost would be financed by a Central Mortgage and Housing loan.

Mr. Hollinger said that from 15 to 20 acres of readily serviceable land would be required for the project which would be initially planned for 40 units. Plans would provide for expansion for up to a total of 80 units.

Already, Mr. Hollinger said he had been looking at several possible sites in Sidney township, but emphasized that the complex could be constructed in virtually any area in Ontario East district which stretches from Oshawa on the west to the Quebec border.

There are no lodge membership requirements for residency in Grand Lodge senior citizens apartments, Tenants, however, would be required to be a minimum of 60 years of age. Any person with less than $2,500 a year, and be able to look after themselves.

Labor Council Bid Being Considered

TRENTON (Staff) — In a letter from the office of Health Minister A. R. B. Lawrence, members of the Quinte District Labor Council have been told their bid to be represented on the Trenton Memorial Hospital board of governors is being considered.

A brief sent by the minister following the last labor council meeting has been forwarded to "appropriate officials who will file a report".

The council had decided to appeal to him to seek labor representation on the board and, perhaps, a publicly-elected board of governors."

Only members of the hospital corporation (each pay a fee) have the privilege of selecting the board or serving on it.

Labor Council to Join Highrise Protestors

TRENTON (Staff) — Members of the Quinte District Labor Council endorsed a motion here last night calling on the executive to assist ratepayers' groups on the East and West Hills of Belleville in their fights to block construction of highrise apartments.

Of particular concern to the council are projected buildings for 811 Bridge East and on the Albert College land parcel on Wellington Crescent.

"The atmosphere of the city is being destroyed . . . homeowners are being caught like rats in a maze and petitions are falling on deaf ears," said Doug Sword, of Belleville, who called the council to order.

He said that becoming involved in such an issue would be an ideal way of carrying out a recent Ontario Federation of Labor suggestion that local labor groups become involved in social issues.

"We will be only too glad to help," stated ODAC president Robert Andrus, "we will teach them how to carry placards and everything else."

Vice-president Reg Loader contended that instructing the ratepayers in effective demonstration techniques would be a good idea, adding that many people will sign a petition just to get rid of the individual circulating it.

He suggested that petitions presented to city council by the ratepayers' groups would have carried more weight if fortified by "people power"—methods of which the labor council will make available to the concerned homeowners.

Mr. Andrus said owning in Belleville has become a farce" and that authorities "lend zoning for contractors".

"When I read that Trenton does not want to be in the same position as Belleville (a reference to the town's stringent new official plan), I can understand it," concluded Belleville resident Bill Peoples.

Teachers, Board At Loggerheads

PICTON (Staff) — Salary negotiations, opened last February between Prince Edward's secondary school teachers and board of education trustees, have reached an impasse. The announcement was made Friday through a press release issued jointly by members of the secondary school teachers' negotiating committee and the Prince Edward District board of education's personnel committee.

Teachers have rejected the board's offer of an over-all increase of 5.56 per cent in their salary schedules and are continuing to request a 6.3 per cent raise.

The teachers contend they should receive salaries equal to those paid to secondary school teachers in Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties for performance of the same duties. The total offer forwarded by the Prince Edward County board of education would place a number of its teachers $200 per year lower on the salary grid than their counterparts in neighboring counties.

Members of the four-man teachers' negotiating committee also have observed-operating expenditures are subsidized by provincial government at an approximate rate of 70 per cent.

Prince Edward County school trustees have stated their maximum offer, observing budget restrictions established by the Ontario department of education and considering the local taxpayer's ability to support educational costs.

The board has offered an established annual increment of $400 to every secondary school teacher. A salary increase above this sum would be granted to every secondary teacher excluding those who have already reached their maximum and those with two years or less teaching experience.

It was suggested the majority of secondary school teachers would receive a total increase of $590, while a "good number" would receive a total increase of $700.

Fringe benefits were discussed and trustees agreed the board should pay 60 per cent of the teachers' Ontario hospitalization and Ontario Health Services Insurance plan premiums. This represents an increase of 15 per cent from the former contract. Board members also agreed to pay 50 per cent of teachers' premiums for $5,000 insurance policy. This is a new benefit and would be conditional upon 75 per cent participation. Board payment of 60 per cent of salaries for teachers on sabbatical leave and 75 per cent when a teacher is sole support of the family also was approved. This is the first time an increase to 75 per cent has been offered to the sole supporter of a family.

Chairman of the secondary school teachers' negotiating committee, Kenneth MacDonald said yesterday three-party intervention — basically conciliation, could be the next step taken by his group. Other members of the negotiating committee include Prince Edward Collegiate Institute teachers Gina Varga, David Nickerson, and Frank Slavin. A regular staff meeting will be conducted next Tuesday when "federation matters" will be discussed, according to Mr. MacDonald. He said the possibility of an impasse has been allowed for in conciliation procedure. No decision has been made yet by secondary school teachers concerning a move toward conciliation. Mr. MacDonald stated three-party intervention usually is conducted through representatives from the Ontario Trustees Council and the Secondary School Teachers Federation.

George Flower, chairman of the Prince Edward County Board of Education said today he cannot predict what further action trustees may take concerning the present impasse.

"We don't know what the teachers will do or might do," he added.

Mr. Flower explained both mediation and arbitration remained as possible steps in resolving the stalemate reached in salary negotiations. The chairman said that present impasse does not necessarily mean further negotiations between teachers and trustees are closed.

"It could change overnight" he remarked.

Mr. Flower said he believes this is the first time since the county board's formation two years ago that secondary school teachers and board members have failed to reach a salary settlement. He recalled, however, that two years ago the county secondary school teachers' negotiations, representatives from the Ontario Trustees' Council and the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation did meet to discuss the salary schedule.

Chairman of the secondary school teachers' salary negotiating committee Kenneth MacDonald said yesterday trustees representatives also were called in a year ago when elementary school teachers failed to reach a salary agreement with the board.

Prince Edward County school trustees who have negotiated with secondary school teachers salary negotiating committee are Dorothea Carson, Ruth Hart, Clare McPaul and Douglas Caley, all members of the personnel committee.

Whisky Sludge Their Downfall

Whisky sludge in the bottom of kegs is not the best beverage to partake of, as one Brockville youth discovered yesterday.

Arrested at 5 a.m. by City Police Constables Dan White and John Hill, Wilfred Lafave, 19, and Arthur Cadieux, 21, of the Brockville and Cornwall region, were charged with theft of two empty whiskey kegs belonging to Corby's Distillery and theft of gasoline.

Transferred to the Belleville OPP detachment, the youths were turned over to Brockville city police on warrants for auto theft and theft of tools.

One youth was still much the worse for his sampling close to 13 hours after his arrests.

To Crack Down On Loose Dogs

Sidney Township Council Monday agreed to become more forceful in dealing with offenders of the animal control bylaws.

Township animal patrol officer Don Tucker of Stirling said at least 25 residents have absolutely refused to purchase 1971 dog licences.

The control officer told council on several occasions he had left tags at a resident's home in Stirling in the hope that money would be forwarded.

"I just sued them for the money if it didn't arrive. . . I have to go to court," he added.

Deputy Reeve Gordon Wilson suggested council could take similar steps through the facilities of the court.

This suggestion would also apply for ones who have dogs running loose and refuse to keep them in," he said.

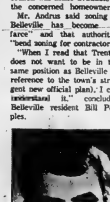
Mr. Tucker also told council that there were a large number of residents who refused to keep their animals tied. "The tranquilizer gun is out. Sure, I can catch the dog, but that's not saying it's not going to die."

At the end of 1970, the total number of dog tags sold by the township numbered 1,100. To date, only 600 have been sold.

"We're going to have to step up control," commented Reeve Jack Bush.

As of next week, Mr. Tucker will be joined by his 19-year-old son, Wayne with two vehicles providing 24 - hour animal control service for Sidney Township.

With newly - introduced regulations requiring pounds to turn over unclaimed animals after a specified waiting period, government investigators have been visiting local facilities at Stirling.



"People should be even more careful now that this law has been passed. Not every dog gets whipped off to Queen's University . . . but there's a danger," Mr. Tucker said following the council meeting.

Rush Is on to Complete Quinte Mall Services

With a mid-August opening date scheduled for the Quinte Mall in the north end of the city, the rush is on for the installation of services and roadways to serve the new plaza.

City council Monday authorized calling of tenders for the construction of 1,200 feet of Bell Blvd. west from North Front Street, and also for the widening of North Front street to provide turning lanes.

The tenders call also include the installation of storm sewers on Bell Blvd. which eventually will be extended through to Sidney Street.

The city public utilities commission has already awarded the contract for the installation of the water main along Bell Blvd. to serve the new shopping plaza.

Public Utilities Manager E. L. Barnhart said T. Tahan Company Ltd., contractors for the water main installation were expected to start work Monday and hopefully would be out of the way before the road construction commenced.

The 16-inch water main on Bell Blvd. will be extended through to Sidney Street and eventually will be continued eastward across the north end of the city to the Hillcrest area.

Closing date for the Bell Blvd. road construction tender is set for June 18 and tender approval at the next councilors are expected to be up on city meeting on June 21.

Lodge Seeking Senior Citizens' Apartment Site

Conditional on the availability of a suitable site, a new senior citizens' apartment with up to 80 units could be erected next year in the immediate Belleville area by the Grand Lodge of Ontario East.

Bernard Hollinger, Foxboro, deputy treasurer of the Grand Black Chapter, said decision to build the senior citizens' apartment project was made at the Saturday session of the Grand Lodge held in Lindsay.

Participating in the venture would be the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, the Loyal Orange Lodge, the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, and the Royal Black Preceptory.

Member lodges from the Ontario east area would be required to raise five per cent of the total cost of the project and would be eligible for a grant of $500 per unit from the Ontario Welfare Services.

The balance of the cost would be financed by a Central Mortgage and Housing loan.

Mr. Hollinger said that from 15 to 20 acres of readily serviceable land would be required for the project which would be initially planned for 30 units. Plans would provide for expansion for up to a total of 80 units.

Already, Mr. Hollinger said he has had been looking at several sites in Belleville, in Sidney township, but emphasized that the complex could be constructed anywhere in the Ontario East district which stretches from Oshawa on the west to the Quebec border.

There are no lodge membership requirements for residency in Grand Lodge senior citizens apartments, however, would be required to be a minimum of 60 years of age, have an income of less than $2,500 a year, and be able to look after themselves.

Labor Council Bid Being Considered

TRENTON (Staff) — In a letter from the office of Health Minister A. R. B. Lawrence, members of the Quinte District Labor Council have been told their bid to be represented on the Trenton Memorial Hospital board of governors is being considered.

A brief sent to the minister following the last labor council meeting has been forwarded to appropriate officials who will file a report.

The council had decided to appeal to him to seek labor representation on the board and, perhaps, a publicly-elected board of governors.

Only members of the hospital corporation (each pay a fee) have the privilege of electing the board or serving on it.

Military Service

The North Atlantic Treaty powers, at their recent meeting in Lisbon, announced their intention of approaching the Soviet Union on the question of troop reductions in Europe. The Soviets have suggested such a move but know full well that any such reduction would favor them more than the West. Thus it is seen largely as a propaganda move.

Nevertheless Canada has already made cutbacks in Europe. Here at home too there has been a reduction in the role of the militia. Consequently it is hardly the right time to be suggesting, as Legion president Judge Redmond Roche has done, that Canada should have compulsory military service.

We have to agree with the national president's assertion that "it would build a sense of responsibility and discipline." The trouble is, though, we have gone so far along the road of permissiveness, aggravated as it is by the growing anti-war mentality in the United States and here, that any suggestion of military training seems anachronistic.

Judge Roche also seems to favor the best of all worlds. For not only does he favor military training (he was addressing the Legion's Allied Command), he thinks subsidized travel for the young is also a good thing.

"If the government is giving youth money so they will know their country better, and using travelling as an education, then I'm all for it."

But then again, large numbers of those on the road are runaways from home, refugees from discipline or unhappy home life, or both. The hitchhike road, moreover, as often as not is just a dusty route to further insecurity — not to mention drugs, immorality and all the rest of it.

Perhaps a better idea would be to channel the young into such character-building activities as the Outward Bound schools. We are not sure to what extent these have been established in Canada, but every so often we read of young Canadians receiving Duke of Edinburgh awards which we understand are linked with the Outward Bound activities. We need more of this kind of thing, and greater involvement in it by the young of this country.

Park Etiquette

There can be no objection, despite the noise, to young people transporting themselves to this or that park on motorcycles. However, where Zwick's Island, or any other park, is concerned, the line should be drawn at the actual roadway.

Last Sunday half-a-dozen young riders ran their big machines up the slope above the canteen, parked on the grass, and with girl friends in tow, held the kind of sit-in one associates usually with Front Street, draped languidly around their bikes. Nearby other park users wondered what had become of their quiet weekend.

A sign forbidding this sort of thing is called for, together with police patrols to back it up. A cruiser had been in the park shortly before.

One other thing, people are not supposed to climb up on the engine and caboose. There is a sign to this effect on the engine, yet children consistently break this rule. One day some youngster could fall off and then what? Parents should see to it that their children keep outside the railings.

Actor Recovers

We were talking recently about freak accidents, including the one in which actor Clint Walker was impaled by his ski pole, the tip piercing his heart.

For Walker the bizarre episode has had a happy ending. Near death when he got to hospital, he is now home again. One of two doctors who opened Walker's chest and got his heart going again said he did not even wash his hands there was so little time. Walker, meanwhile, says he understands he did not have an anaesthetic either.

Lying there in the California mountain snow after the accident, getting weaker and weaker," Walker says he prayed, and is convinced that it was with divine help that he survived. An open Bible lay on a table at his Hollywood home as he was interviewed. "I study the Bible on occasions," he said, because it is full of a great deal of wisdom."

With the kind of insight known only to those who have come back from the brink, Clint Walker knows that life is worth living.

Revenue, Communications, Main Issues

Premier Davis Waving the Big Stick at Ottawa

By JOE DUFUS

TORONTO (CP) — With the federal-provincial constitutional conference less than two weeks away, Premier William Davis is having difficulty convincing his critics that being a pro-Ontario doesn't infer an anti-Ottawa policy.

In recent speeches, Mr. Davis has said Ontario will always strive to achieve a strong Canada while reserving the right to criticize and try to change federal policies that it feels work against provincial interests.

But no matter how he says it, his speeches have been criticized as leaving the impression that Ontario is after Ottawa's scalp.

Opposition members in the legislature say Mr. Davis is promoting an anti-federal platform for the next provincial election to detract from his problems at home. One high-ranking New Democrat said, with some agitation: "Good grief, if he means what he says it's the end of Confederation."

Specifically, Mr. Davis is seeking a bigger share of federal revenue and greater control over telecommunications, now a federal responsibility. Both involve constitutional changes which are indirectly a part of the June 14-18 conference in Victoria.

Mr. Davis is "not too hopeful" that major tax reforms expected to be announced later this month in the federal budget, will provide Ontario with enough fiscal leverage in the income tax field.

Ontario Revenue Minister Eric Winkler, who entered provincial politics after serving five terms in Parliament as a Progressive Conservative backbencher and party whip under former prime minister John Diefenbaker, was convinced even in those days that Ontario wasn't getting a fair break in the distribution of federal revenue.

"I don't know exactly what course Mr. Davis will take because he can't appear to use this as a great issue," Mr. Winkler said in an interview.

"Because if he does, it will become divisive rather than unifying. On the other hand, if the federal government doesn't recognize the importance of Ontario in the economy I think they too, in the course, will lose."

Mr. Winkler, referred to an issue that has cropped up in recent days concerning speculation that Ottawa will use pressure to force de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd., to relocate its Toronto plant in Montreal in a merger with Canadair.

"They use as an excuse that unemployment created at de Havilland is much greater than unemployment created at de Havilland. On the other hand, de Havilland is a greater plumb for any province to have than Canadair.

"So the question I would pose publicly is this: Is the federal government wilfully, with federal money which is largely Ontario money, taking de Havilland out of the province of Ontario and placing it in the province of Quebec? If this happens, I think the province has a legitimate right to get up on its hind feet and howl."

Mr. Winkler said the problem is that Ontario cannot control its own fiscal destiny "and if the federal government sees fit to turn the tap off on us and drain more off the top . . . we haven't got the power to stop it."

Mr. Davis makes a point in his claim that many Ontario areas, including Toronto's eastern and northern districts, are as economically deprived as any of the have-not provinces.

But his dilemma remains a two-fold. If he squawks, he can be accused of playing politics at the expense of Canadian unity. If he doesn't, he can be accused of sitting idly by while the federal monolith drains Ontario in the interest of eliminating regional disparities.

"Say, isn't that Hellyer and Kierans behind us?"

Expressway Axed

Ottawa Journal

The Ontario government's decision to stop extension of Toronto's Spadina Expressway is one of the few times - if not the first - that a senior government in North America has made a major decision against the automobile. It is a welcome victory for sane planning of the central cores of cities, and a defeat for the automobile whose proliferating hunger for more and more concrete has threatened to kill major cities.

This was a bold decision in the Davis Cabinet. The decision flew in the face of Toronto's municipal officials, of the Ontario Municipal Board, and of the many suburban residents who wanted the Spadina added easier route to central Toronto. The political guts of R. if not negligible, is dubious.

The Davis government had the courage to admit that it had mistaken in allowing free-

Cartoonist Ben Wicks' Fame Is World-Wide

By John Ough in the War Cry

Spanning a bridge of a million years in the art of communication is the prolific output of Ben Wicks, Canada's internationally-renowned cartoonist. With definite echoes of the caveman drawings left from the beginnings of human time, his deft outlines of day to-day life during the dawn of the atomic age may well be the most succinct illustration accompanying the future history books for our dome-headed successors in eras to come.

Syndicated by "The Los Angeles Times" and "The Toronto Telegram" newspapers, Ben Wicks is one of the most widely distributed political cartoonists in the world. His daily cartoon appears in 162 newspapers in North America as well as "The London Sunday Times" and newspapers in Australia and the West Indies. Readership estimates are at the fifty million daily. His first work was published in "The London Daily Mirror," the world's largest newspaper in size."Wicks in Jamaica," "Wicks in Biafra," or "Wicks at the White House" have vividly brought his fifty million readers to the scene doorsteps around the globe.

Wicks left England to live in Canada in 1957. His first work in North America was published by "Saturday Evening Post" which said of him: "A cartoonist of great dimension alism and unusual originality." In August, 1967, "Time Magazine" devoted a full page to Wicks, remarking on his "uncanny knack of anticipating news and commenting on it with a Delphic twist."

Ben is a weekly political observer on CBC Radio and a frequent guest on CBC Television. A winner of the Montreal Cartoonist Salon, 1967, with entrants from forty countries, Wicks is now working on a series of books under the heading "Ben Wicks on . . . "

His three titles "How to Get a Man," "Back Seat Driving and Other Things" and "The Naked Gourmet" have already been published. Wicks is now working on the first animated political cartoons for ABC Television, Australia, after having completed a series of films for the BBC in England and CTV in Canada. A periodic traveller to various parts of the world, Ben's illustrated articles such as "Wicks in Jamaica," "Wicks in Biafra," or "Wicks at the White House" have vividly brought his fifty million readers to the scene doorsteps around the globe.

The Intelligencer,

May I, through your newspaper extend congratulations to all who participated in the 63rd annual inspection of Sea Cadets at RCSCC Quinte last Sunday.

We, the proud parents and spectators, were steered through an impressive afternoon. From the inspection to sunset, we were shown the ability of well-drilled teenagers may achieve under guidance from their Leaders.

A great deal of credit is due for the speed of a motor boat or hydroplane, more about the noise. But anyone watching the sailpast, could not fail to realize that speed is not everything. A ship with a 10 knot wind behind them, which they did not have, they would have been able to display more capabilities of their seamanship. However it was a great manoeuvre, the long line of sails as straight as the drilling.

The band gave a splendid performance, showing their skills while marching and at an open air concert.

An impressive amount of awards were presented by Brig. General Coffin. These are the results of hard work and a Monday evening Sunday organization. The Navy League as Sponsors, their Leaders, Lt.-Cmdr. Dorothy Bunnett and officers in charge, may take pride in a job well done. Mrs. Bunnett, the founding movement, two years as Division Commissioner in Nova Scotia, knows that such a job always an easy one. But the results are rewarding.

EILEEN T. BARTON.

More on the Census

Ottawa Journal

We can't get uptight about the new questions forbidding that men are in most cases the head of the household. They are.

Nor do we find it horrendous that in the general search for a taxpayer's amount of Canadian life they "snoop" to ask if we cook on gas or electricity, if we have flush toilets and, if unemployed, have we tried recently to get work.

And it doesn't seem to us unreasonable to believe that if we can trust the Income Tax Department with secrets we can trust the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. How puzzled the Income Tax people must be these days to hear people saying they don't mind telling them secrets but nobody else! We'd never before let them know we cared.

It's curious thing about the how form, however, is that though we must all answer all the questions truthfully, and are subject to fine or jail if we don't, there is no place we actually have to sign our name attesting to the replies being our own help us God. The DBS asks just that we we print our names in block letters, in pencil.

How will the Dominion Statistician, on deciding to stick us for perjury while, given in law that we did in fact submit the information he finds faulty? Those curmudgeons in Income Tax make us sign the dotted line.

Canada and U.S. Work on Anti-pollution Measure

Quebec Le Soleil: The anti-pollution agreement which should take its final form June 10 in Washington, will mark without doubt a step in the battle for the preservation of the environment.

It will mainly deal with the . . . Great Lakes and the part of the St. Lawrence River which is international. This agreement, . . . could already be considered a historical precedent since the formula for de-operation could be effective in preserving the water of the Great Lakes, a marvel of nature if not of contamination.

Even Europe has nothing similar regarding the Danube and the Rhine. On mention only two famous international rivers. . . .

In this campaign against pollution, many maintain that the dangers are exaggerated while others believe they are not emphasized enough. It is certain that pollutants are more and more diversified and include nature itself. For example, near Naples, Italy, tons of dead fish were recently discovered. This wildlife was poisoned by underwater emanations of sulphur from nearby volcanoes. Nature, industry and the state are all assistants in this regard. . . .

In the case of the Great Lakes, there is probably no need to fear volcanic fumes. But Lake Erie may be the victim of phosphates from detergents which could come from many sources including municipal sewers . . . or industrial sewers . . . plus a list of polluting agents such as petroleum, mercury, radioactive substances, etc. which threaten the quality of water in the Great Lakes.

After Lake Erie, it is Lake Ontario which is most threatened. The third most vulnerable sector is the St. Lawrence River itself. After that, Lakes Michigan, Huron and Superior in that order.

It will be important to get to work to apply the eventual agreement. Besides, it will have considerable economic repercussions in the two countries.

The parliamentary secretary in the external affairs department, Andre Ouellet, let it be known recently that Canada may be able to sell several million dollars worth of anti-pollution equipment to the United States in the next few years. That will add to the innumerable savings resulting from knowing how to live without pollution. Anti-pollution is an asset.

Culture Camp Promoter Gives Up His Project

The Canadian Culture Camp proposed for a farm in Marmora township in August has been cancelled by its sponsor, Ernö D. Rossi.

Mr. Rossi, history department head at Port Colborne Collegiate and a graduate student at Michigan State University, said in a letter to The Intelligencer today that the camp was cancelled by Marmora Township Council "shortly after the Ontario Provincial Police communicated with council".

"I suppose the police are a bit tense about this proposed Rock Festival near Madoc slated for early July and there was some confusion about the rock festival and my camp," he said.

Madoc township council is seeking an injunction today at the Ontario Supreme Court's spring sessions in Belleville to ban the festival.

"I am now truly sorry that I tried to have the camp, I have been accused of misrepresenting myself. I have lost money when I hoped to break even, and I have lost faith in one part of our police system," wrote Mr. Rossi from his Port Colbore home.

"Words of my former students keep coming back to haunt me concerning the police, because the students were right and I was wrong," he added.

"I apologize to anyone who may have been upset by my plans — police, council, and anyone else. I apologize as well to those people who were interested in doing something about Canadian culture and wanted to attend the camp. If those persons now have a deep-seated feeling of emptiness, as I do, I can understand."

The camp, expected to attract about 300 senior secondary and university students over the month - long period, was prompted by Mr. Rossi's concern over "creeping Americanization" of Canada. It was conceived as a pilot project in outdoor education, combining camping in a remote, unserviced area, with lectures and seminars with outstanding poets, artists, musicians and scientists. There was to have been a strong emphasis on environmental control and lectures from qualified scientists and practical farmers for students interested in the "back to the land" movement.

Madoc township at first appeared agreeable to the enterprise, but later aroused strong opposition, passing the "Festival bylaw", with strict, great requirements for gatherings lasting more than 24 hours.

Municipal opposition was prompted by a poster put out by one of Mr. Rossi's students without his knowledge, proclaiming the camp "the biggest happening in Ontario this summer, an experiment in semi - wilderness living, a huge gathering of musicians, poets, artists and YOU, living loving, learning".

After seeing the poster, Reeve John Wilkes of Marmora township accused Mr. Rossi of "misrepresentation" and said the camp would not be allowed.

Mr. Rossi countered with the information that the matter was based solely on his knowledge and consent, and gave an erroneous impression of his intentions.

He told The Intelligencer that he would make one more effort to obtain Marmora Township's consent for his venture.

This morning Mr. Rossi expressed bitterness about the outcome of his camp plans.

"I will understand when students come to me in the future and confide in me that every effort seems worthless and they have lost faith in the system and drugs at least offer an escape," he wrote.

"Fortunately, I have my wife and two little daughters and the four of us generate strength for each other. But those without this source of strength, I can understand why they might lose this sense of purpose.

"Now that the weather is getting warmer, I'll retreat for the summer months to my favorite fishing place with my wife and daughters and as hundreds of people will die from drug overdoses and the police are confronting masses of unemployed people and in the Americanization of my country proceeds, I'll smile from my Shoaby retreat, think of the Commissioner of the OPP and the Marmora Council and then draw a few lessons from ancient history for my students in September."

Bridge Closed for Repairs

Traffic crossing the busy Highway 33 bridge over the Murray Canal is being rerouted until the weekend so work crews from the department of transport can complete necessary repairs to the swing and stationary sections. The detour means extra travelling for residents of Carrying Place going back and forth to work in the Trenton area. School bus schedules have been upset by the bridge closing as well.

Village Swimming Program All Set

MARMORA (Special) — At the May meeting of the Marmora recreation committee, George Watt, chairman of the park committee advised that lifeguarding will commence at Legion Park on June 28. Registrations for swim classes will be taken the next week, followed by six weeks of swimming instruction. It is also planned to continue with the competitive swim program. The dock is being repainted and will be put in by the time lifeguarding starts.

It was decided that swimming registration fees would remain the same as last year, that is: children - $2; more than three children in the family - $6 maximum; non-resident children - $3; more than three children in the family - $9; adults $5.

The application of Marilyn Wells for playground supervisor was accepted and it was decided that the duties of park attendant would be divided between three youths — Terry Empey, John Maloney and Doug Rothermel.

Stephen Potter reported to the committee on a disturbance at a dance involving youths from out of town. This matter will be considered by the village council and its recreation committee and a decision made as to the action to be taken.

Dryness, Cold Hold Crops Back

Rainfall was a scant 1.44 inches at Tweed during the month of May, according to the local weather station. Normal precipitation for the month is 2.61 inches.

Growth throughout the area is reported to be slow owing to a combination of low rainfall and low temperatures. On May 21 and 22, the mercury dipped to a low of 33 and at Cloyne and Denbigh on Tuesday evening, June 1, a heavy frost was experienced, with crops of well-started and thriving potatoes and tomatoes frozen off.

Playground Project Gets Ontario Grant

According to present plans, the eight-week program will consist of a day school in the morning for children between five and six years, and a playground for older children in both morning and afternoon.

Included in the program will be various organized games, craft periods, special event days and excursions when the children will be transported to various points of interest in the area.

For information and registration forms for the day school, parents are asked to contact Miss Debanne. Registration for the playground will take place at a later date.

Leaders will be required to assist with the program. Applicants must be 17 years of age or over, and residents of the Tweed area. Application forms can be picked up at Simpsons-Sears order office, Tweed, or obtained from Miss Debanne.

This program will be operated free of charge for residents of Tweed and area. It is an opportunity for Tweed children to take part in a supervised recreational program and needs only the support of the community to be a success.

ANAF News

Thursday June 10 is the date of the midsummer general meeting and reports will be made to the general body on the state of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 and on pertinent information of the Provincial Convention. In addition to the regular meeting, a number of new members will be initiated and several 25 - year pins presented.

After these ceremonies are completed there will be a pleasant social hour with the Ladies Auxiliary promising something different in the way of a lunch that they are sure will be enjoyed by all. The president is looking for a big turnout.

With good weather, it is expected that between three and four dozen members will be on hand to open up the 1971 golfing season at the Baronwood Golf Course with plenty of prizes waiting to be won.

The Friday evening social and dance was one of the most successful this year as the jolly and carefree members of the 14th Field Regt. RCA and their charming wives invaded the Tartan Lounge. President Pat Boyle woye a big smile to see so many of his comrades turn up for this wholly social gathering for the weekend. Many of them are veterans of the D-Day landings. Cde. Pat Boying, also a member of the Unit, with most of the top echelon which included two 14th members attending the Prov. Convention, did the honors for the club.

Marg Zlett's musical aggregation excelled themselves and a wonderful evening was had by all with never a dull moment.

It was a very sad weekend for the Duke of Edinburgh Unit as they received the news of the passing of two valued comrades and their sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved families. Cde. Stan Osman passed away last Monday and Cde. Johnny Fisher died Friday. They will be missed by all. Cde. "Kelly", chairman of the sick committee, reports that the following comrades are in hospital: A. J. Sandy, 725, K. Hollands, 635, both in Belleville General. Cde. Ross Steward is recovering from a leg operation and came home from KGH Sunday. All have been visited.

Cdes. Hank Ford, Bob Benn, Gary Reid and Tom Keck entered the Legion cribbage tournament and came back to the club with four trophies: Over-all champions, Team champions, Pair champions and Runners up trophy. They are to be congratulated having won eight games out of 14. Nice work, lads.

Over 100 were on parade for the Drumhead service. Cde. Howard L. Kokesh acted as parade marshal while Cde. Sid Scott was Color Sgt. for the massed Color Party. The Duke of Edinburgh Unit Pipe Band looked very smart in their new dress with Pipe Major Dugal McCamsey in charge. Other notables on parade were ANAF Dom. Pres. J. C. Lundeen, Unit Pres. John Browning, Branch 99 Pres. Jack Rashotte, 418 Wing Pres. Ed Kitchen, Pres. Col. Phay Wills Branch, Ina Rollins and Pres. Pat Boyle of the 14th Field Regt. RCA. The 14th, mostly veterans of the D-Day landings, had a platoon of 30 on parade and were certainly welcome. Padre Bram Humphries looked after the service and Padre C. H. White from CFB, Trenton gave the address. Assisting clergymen were Rev. P. M. Tett, St.-Thomas' Anglican Church and Rev. C. H. Savage, Padre of Branch 587. The Pipers played the Lament and Trumpeter J. Gill the Last Post and Reville.

EARLY EDUCATION

LONDON (CP) — Children under five years old should be taught to read, Dr. Tessa Blackstone suggests in a book on pre-school education. All play and no work is bad for children, says the 32-year-old London University teacher. "The most enjoyable part about childhood," she writes, "is learning and discovering."

Trenton Group To Get Charter

TRENTON (Staff) — William Nolan of Brantford, Ontario President of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities, will preside here Wednesday when the organization's Quinte Chapter receives its official charter.

The Ontario president is a native of Trenton and has shown considerable interest in the formation of the local chapter.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Nolan of RR3, Trenton, he attended St. Peter's School, Trenton High School before beginning his university studies at McMaster University, Hamilton, and University of Toronto.

William Nolan is currently president of the Brant County Roman Catholic Separate School Principals' Association and principal of St. Basil's School, Brantford.

In presenting a charter to the Quinte Chapter, the 33rd in the province, he will be sanctioning an already vigorous body with 50 members and a distinguished advisory board of local educators and medical men.

Chapter officials report even some success in raising money.

The Delta Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi here has agreed to donate $200 toward formation of a resources library to assist teachers in dealing with perceptually handicapped youngsters. Establishment of such a resource centre has been recognized as a primary aim by founding members of Quinte ACLD.

Additionally, a group of Trenton girls recently earned the association more than $300 through their participation in a dance-a-thon held in Toronto's Nathen Phillips Square. Of the total, half will be forwarded to the local chapter's coffers.

The money-making girls were Carolyn Fraser, 13, Jo-Anne Johnson, 13, Lynne Jordan, 14, and Kathy Bailley, 14.

Provincial Scheme Vetoed

Proliferation of Lotteries of Growing Concern: Wishart

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition suggestions that the provincial government and political parties operate lotteries were turned down Tuesday by Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and commercial affairs.

Opposition leader Robert Nixon suggested the province stage its own lottery. James Renwick (NDP—Riverdale) asked if it would be possible to "work up some method" under which political parties could hold lotteries.

Mr. Wishart drew agreement from Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) when he said a provincial government lottery, intended as a source of revenue in lieu of new taxes, would simply take money from people who the province was trying to avoid hurting financially.

He told Mr. Renwick, on the issue of lotteries operated by political parties:

"Political parties should not get involved in running lotteries for their purposes no matter how admirable they may be."

The suggestions came during study of Mr. Wishart's departmental estimates of $5.8 million by a committee of the Ontario legislature.

Mr. Renwick suggested that if all parties in a riding co-operated on a lottery, this would fall within the ambit of the legislation because it would not advance the purpose of only one party. Mr. Wishart said lottery legislation was insufficiently broad to permit this.

Mr. Renwick suggested the proceeds of the lottery could be split on the basis of the party vote in the particular riding in the last election. It "would solve the financial problems of all political parties."

Glen Hodgson (PC—Victoria Haliburton) said current regulations are "getting into a very dangerous area which the province must clarify."

If the province ran its own lottery, many of the smaller lotteries throughout the province would be eliminated, he said.

Mr. Wishart told the committee that last year 30,000 licensed lotteries offered $22 million in prizes.

Lotteries could be licensed if they are for religious, educational or charitable purposes or if they are for the betterment of the community.

A number of opposition members doubted whether a lottery in Hamilton to raise money to carpet Ivor Wynn Stadium with artificial turf met the qualifications.

James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) asked "what greater charitable purpose is there than the taxpayer in this province?"

Mr. Wishart also indicated the government will have to find some method of clamping down on the number of lotteries that are licensed.

The minister forecast that the number of lotteries could soon escalate to 150,000-200,000 a year, and current provisions say that the government must permit an organization to hold a lottery if it meets the qualifications.

In other business:

—Arthur Wishart, provincial minister of financial and commercial affairs revealed that responsibility for the Ontario Racing Commission had been transferred to his department within the last four days;

—Health Minister Lawrence, in reply to Rev. Wally Downer (PC—Dufferin Simcoe), said the Ontario cabinet will be asked today to organize and finance volunteer Ontario doctors who want to help administer vaccine to victims of a cholera epidemic in India;

—Premier Davis said Ontario wants to reach agreement with Ottawa and he other provincers on constitutional changes so that attention can be given to a review of the distribution of powers;

—James Renwick (NDP—Riverdale) said Ontario should make more money available to the Ontario Securities Commission to attract top men in the investment field to sit on it;

Informal Study of Retarded Is Established

TORONTO (CP) — An informal investigation into care and supervision of mentally—retarded persons, was announced Tuesday in the Ontario legislature by Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence.

The one-man inquiry will be held by lawyer Walter B. Williston who will concentrate on governmental and public responsibilities toward the mentally retarded who are not under the direct custodial care of the government.

He will report to the minister by Aug. 15 at which time his findings will be made public.

The inquiry follows the death of one person and injury of another, both of whom were under the supervision of the province's Rideau Hospital School.

One young man was found hanged on a farm where he had been working; the other injured his hands three years after he had been discharged from the school.

Mr. Lawrence said both incidents raised "many questions" regarding the supervision of retarded people who are no longer residents of our hospital schools, as was the case with both of these individuals."

He said his decision to hold an inquiry arose from "the leadership and lack of proper legal and administrative rules for the definition of responsibility for these people."

Replying to Opposition Leader Robert Nixon, Mr. Lawrence said he had instituted his own investigation into the case but found "I couldn't follow through adequately."

The minister said if Mr. Williston found himself stymied in getting information concerning the specific cases or other aspects of mental health care, the government would see that he gets it.

The minister agreed with James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) that statements made to the inquiry not be self-incriminating.

He said the inquiry will point to areas where there is risk of injury to those who leave the hospitals. It may be followed by a royal commission or studies in the medical and social fields. Resulting action will come not only from the health department but the departments of justice, education, social and family services and corrections.

government will have to find some method of clamping down on the number of lotteries that are licensed.

The minister forecast that the number of lotteries could soon escalate to 150,000-200,000 a year, and current provisions say that the government must permit an organization to hold a lottery if it meets the qualifications.

Headway Denies Inside Role

TORONTO (CP) — The president of a construction firm denied Tuesday flight that his company is in a position to option land in advance of Ontario Housing Corp. announcements.

James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) had asked earlier in the legislature why Headway Corp. of Thunder Bay "continually" options land six months in advance of announcements by OHC that it plans a project.

Mr. Bullbrook specifically mentioned land in Sarnia and Petrolia.

Allan Grossman, minister responsible for OHC, was asked by Mr. Bullbrook whether the leak was in OHC, the government or the Progressive Conservative Party.

Harry Ganja, Headway president, said Tuesday eight of his company was unsuccessful in a bid for an OHC project in Petrolia and in any case the land was owned by OHC.

"Secondly," he said in a statement, "if Mr. Bullbrook would take the trouble . . . he would find that Headway built the first 24 family-housing units in Sarnia on OHC-owned land at a cost considerably lower than other builders' submissions."

"I challenge Mr. Bullbrook to produce facts to support his statements in this respect."

Headway chairman Robert Keenan said his company anticipates the province's housing needs through associates in the real estate business.

The company also watches local newspapers for reports that local councils have asked OHC to make a survey of public-housing needs for the area, Mr. Keenan said in an interview.

Outside the legislature, Mr. Grossman had pointed out earlier that following a council-requested survey of housing needs, OHC reports to the council. At both stages, he said, it would be public knowledge an area development was possible sometimes a year in advance of an OHC commitment to build.

Foreign Investment Needed Is Claim

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — More foreign investment is needed in Canada, the president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce said Tuesday.

A. Gordon Archibald of Halifax told delegates to the Maritime Provinces Chamber of Commerce annual meeting that foreign investment had been responsible for "many good things" in Canada, and opposition to it was becoming a worry to businessmen.

He had talked to numerous businessmen in the country and found none who was "violently opposed" to foreign investment, he said.

It was all right to say Canadians had to own 51 per cent of a business operation but it was another to get them to buy it.

"I think we need more foreign investment in this country. We're still developing."

That Showdown Must Be Drawing Near As Duel Over Constituti on Resumes

OTTAWA (CP) — After numerous "breakthroughs," Prime Minister Trudeau and Canada's premiers go to Victoria next week in search of the real one as the painfully ponderous search continues for a home-grown Canadian constitution.

And again, not for the first time, the conference is being billed by some as the most important in the country's history. This time, more people seem to mean it.

Canada's political leaders primarily will be searching for agreement whereby the 1867 British North America Act—the country's constitution—can be amended solely by Canadians without needing final approval by Britain.

The marathon quest for such an amending formula has seen many go proclaimed "breakthrough"—the most recent last February—but there has also been a history of breakdowns.

Such a formula appears to be teetering now on the brink of acceptance.

* * *

Then, as a grand finale to his prime ministership, Mr. Pearson called a major constitutional conference in Ottawa in February, 1968, and thus launched the current series of negotiations.

As Mr. Pearson and the premiers charted their course for constitutional reform, the question of an amending formula became just another item away down on the agenda. What was launched at that conference was instead machinery for constitutional reform.

A permanent secretariat and a committee of officials were established to study official language rights, bilingualism, human rights, distribution of powers between the federal and provincial governments, reform of federal institutions, including the Senate and the Supreme Court, regional economic disparities, procedures for amending the constitution and federal-provincial relations.

When Mr. Pearson retired, Prime Minister Trudeau continued the process of reviewing the constitution on a wide front.

Up until last September, when the amending formula was suddenly pushed to the top of the agenda again, the subject had scarcely been mentioned. The approach was that there would first be decisions on what would go in a new Canadian constitution.

Meanwhile, the political leaders discussed the question of entrenching human rights in the constitution, the official recognition of economic disparities, the distribution of powers, reform of social policies, the mechanics of federal-provincial relations, tax sharing, the economy, and many other matters directly or indirectly affected by the constitution.

Even when no major agreements were being reached, most premiers seemed enthusiastic about the progress.

When no progress was apparent, there was usually some optimistic statements. "The mood certainly seemed better at this conference," Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said last fall.

It was at that September meeting, and largely at the urging of Mr. Robarts, that the search for an amending formula was given a renewed intensity.

For the next five months there was hectic behind-the-scenes negotiations and federal-provincial ministers and officials travelled the country forging details of a proposed formula.

When the first ministers met again here in February, the amending formula was ready.

Briefly, it would allow constitutional changes with the consent of Ottawa, Quebec and Ontario, plus two western provinces representing 50 per cent of the area's population and two of the four Atlantic provinces. Any province with 25 per cent of the country's population would have veto power. This would immediately apply to Ontario and Quebec and, eventually, British Columbia.

In the most that could be hoped for, the first ministers agreed this formula represented a feasible approach and they took it home for further study.

This said Mr. Trudeau, was "a substantial breakthrough."

"I think we're almost there," said Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia.

"Yes," said Mr. Bourassa, "there could be agreement in principle."

Since then, most eyes have been on Quebec whose spokesmen have made no secret of the fact they would like to see some actual constitutional changes accompany agreement on the formula. The province seeks greater powers in the field of income security, manpower, social services, and other related areas.

There is no indication of how far Mr. Bourassa will go in seeking these powers.

Mr. Trudeau has had two recent private meetings with Mr. Bourassa in apparent preparation for the Victoria conference. But he has said only that the federal government maintains the view it must have jurisdiction over income security to ensure national standards.

Mr. Bourassa has said that we have to negotiate with partners.

"It is up to us to show judgment as to the way in which Quebec will gain the most advantages in this revision and to use the most effective strategy."

Former prime minister W. L. Mackenzie King spoke of a "breakthrough" in 1936 after a federal-provincial conference decided the procedures to be followed in amending the constitution in Canada. Then, following an intermittent series of discussions after the Second World War, former prime minister Louis St. Laurent referred to new ground being broken in a 1950 conference which redefined the procedures.

In 1960-61 there were four major constitutional meetings held over a 14-month period. Prime there emerged another "breakthrough"—the Fulton formula, named after Conservative Justice minister E. Davie Fulton. Although this formula was approved by all provinces except Saskatchewan, it never got off the ground.

But it was revived in 1964 by the Liberal government and all 11 government leaders decided, behind closed doors, to bring home the constitution along the lines proposed by Mr. Fulton.

"God help the man who holds up agreement," declared premier John Robarts of Ontario. There were further meetings and the Fulton formula was modified into the Fulton-Favreau Formula—taking on the name of Liberal Justice minister Guy Favreau. It was warmly approved by all governments.

Since the provinces presented the amendment to their legislatures for approval but Quebec did not. Opposition fed by Quebec nationalism began to rise against the formula. Amid expressed fears that the formula would place the province in a straitjacket, Mr. Lesage finally made it official in 1966 that the Fulton-Favreau formula was dead.

Meanwhile, while it was back to square one for the long-sought amending formula, there was more pressure building for constitutional reform in Canada.

When the federal government appeared to be moving too slowly in the view of Mr. Robarts, he called his own Confederation for Tomorrow conference in 1967.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Rollins

Couple Mark Golden Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Rollins, RR 3 Carrying Place (Gardenville) will remember their 50th wedding anniversary from the generosity and kind thoughtfulness of many relatives and friends.

In addition to receiving the usual congratulatory messages and cards from The Queen, the Prime Minister and representatives of both federal and provincial governments the popular couple was surprised with the gift of an appropriate money tree during the quiet celebration at home.

The Rollins' were married June 3, 1911 at the Standard Church parsonage Belleville, with the Rev. T. A. Seale officiating.

The 'bride' Evelyn Greatrix was the eldest daughter of Thomas and May Greatrix of Bloomfield. The 'groom' was the son of Thomas and Rachael Rollins of Belleville.

They were attended by Percy and Alma Fitzgerald.

Typical June weather prevailed; beautiful and warm, for the newly-weds to travel to Niagara Falls for their honeymoon.

They continued living in Niagara Falls where Mr. Rollins worked at a job he arranged previous to the marriage.

In 1922 they moved to Flint, Michigan in the United States remaining there until 1945 when they returned to Canada and took up residence at their present address.

The union produced three children — a daughter Mrs. Allan W. (Reta) Murray of Hamilton, two sons Fred of Carrying Place and Herb of Hamilton. Also eight grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. KEES W. KORT

Kort – Flesch

St. Joseph's Church, Belleville, was the setting recently when Rev. Father Gazsley officiated at the wedding ceremony of Diane Marie Flesch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Flesch, RR4, Belleville and Kees W. Kort of Kingston, son of Dr. Kees W. Kort and Mrs. Kort of Brockville. Organ music was rendered by Philip Kirby.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned in the 1900 style of imported Swiss voile buttoned and looped down the front and the cuffs of the gown. Her floral headdress was caught to a shoulder length bouffant veil and she carried a bouquet of shasta daisies and roses.

Miss Maria Dzamja as maid of honor, wore a floor length dress of pink Swiss voile styled similarly to the bride's gown and she carried a bouquet of shasta daisies. Miss Maureen Kort, sister of the bridegroom and Miss Patricia Devereaux, cousin of the bride as well as the junior bridesmaid Miss Dawn Flesch sister of the bride, were all identically attired in pink Swiss voile.

Marty Kort attended his brother, while the ushers were Dennis Flesch, and David Flesch, both brothers of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a navy and white double knit pant dress. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a turquoise silk knit pant dress.

Leaving on a wedding trip to points west, the bride chose a dusty pink printed midi dress with matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Kort will reside in Kingston.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

MELROSE WI

The recent meeting of Melrose WI was held at the township school with Mrs. A. English acting as hostess.

Mrs. G. McLaren, program convener and her assistants, Mrs. H. McAvoy, Mrs. Wm. Kem English and Mrs. Don McLaren dealt with the subject of discipline in the school and at home as a panel. They expressed their ideas regarding discipline and suggested ways to attack discipline problems. Some members voiced their opinions. It was felt that since the youth of today will have the reins of government in their hands in the near future, now is the time to give them guidance in making wise decisions.

Reports of the Guelph conference and district annual were given by the delegates.

Music was provided by Mrs. R. Badgley at the piano and Mrs. S. Denville, song leader.

Mrs. H. McAvoy conducted a contest with Mrs. A. Long receiving the prize.

A social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served. It was decided that less varieties of foods would be expected from the lunch committee in future as some hostesses were finding it a bit difficult to provide the type of fancy dishes that had been served in the past. This suggestion was made to the executive when planning this year's program.

CARRYING METHOD

Halifax Wren Organizes Programs For VIPs

HALIFAX (CP) — Lieut. Jennie-Ann Brenzun has never once regretted her decision in 1963 to join the armed forces and see the world.

The 29-year-old servicewoman now is responsible for organizing programs for VIPs and visiting ships in the Canadian Armed Forces Maritime Command here. She is known as staff officer of visits and ceremonies.

Born in the small northern Alberta town of Hazna, Lieut. Branzen was influenced in joining the service by her sister Roberta, who was serving as an Able Wren in the RCN.

"She used to write me about the interesting places she had visited and how much she enjoyed her career."

Lieut. Branzen thought the services might be a pleasant change from her career as a teacher and also give her a chance to meet young people, so she enlisted in Calgary.

She also got a chance to see more of the world. Her career has taken her to Key West, Fla., where she escorted a group of Wrens to Fleet Sonar School; and to San Diego, Calif.

The five-foot-eight Wren officer trained at CFB Cornwallis and then worked in Halifax in "operations" there and at movements at the dockyard.

She has also served on the West Coast, at CFB Naden in Esquimalt, and in Ottawa she took a course in naval control of shipping in merchant vessel convoys.

The attractive officer said she is looking forward to the arrival of her new green uniform.

"They are more comfortable, having a loose fitted jacket, and are worn with a short-sleeved collarless green blouse. The uniforms come in summer and winter weights and Wrens do not have to wear ties with them.

For recreation, Jennie-Ann enjoys curling and swimming, watching television and reading historical novels. She has no plans for marriage in the immediate future, and will soon move into a small apartment in newly renovated quarters.

Pioneer Gal Likes Idea of Drop-in Guests

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Town Gal wrote that she was disturbed because in the rural community to which she has recently moved, it was customary for the "whole gang" to drop in to dinner without invitation.

My father homesteaded in Saskatchewan in 1905. As there were no telphones, it was taken for granted that visitors arrived unannounced. Every farm wife prepared for guests on Sunday and the female visitors always helped out. The women got little rest, but you should have heard the chatter from the kitchen!
